Roosevelt Ready To Ask Extension Of NRA 2 Years

'Simple Modifications' to Be Sought in Message Soon.

'Dear Bill' Letter Upholds Williams

Green Told NIRB Head 'Impartial, Devoted' in Services.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt plans to send to Congress within the next ten days a message asking for extension of NRA for two years, it was learned yesterday.

The President will ask that the recovery act be amended, according to Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader, to include "simple modifications, such as have been demonstrated necessary by experience." Announcement of the plan followed a conference at the White House, attended by Senate and House leaders and NRA representatives.

While no hint as to the nature of the proposed modifications was given, it is expected they will have to do with the President's power to impose codes, with hour and wage provisions and with price-fixing agreements. The President has expressed himself as eager to obtain legislation putting a stop to "loss leader" practices in the retail trade. It is not expected that the much-discussed section 7(a), guaranteeing labor's right to organize, will be changed.

Writes to "Dear Bill."

Prior to discussing the proposed legislation with congressional leaders, the President hit back again at the American Federation of Labor, making public a letter defending S. Clay Williams, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board. The letter, addressed to William Green, president of the federation, was in answer to a resolution adopted at the last convention of the labor body asking removal of Williams.

The letter, addressed "Dear Bill," said:

"I think it is perhaps best that I should not reply officially to the resolution and action of the convention of the American Federation of Labor in regard to the appointment of Mr. Clay Williams. There is no need for any controversy over the resolution or in regard to a number of inaccuracies of fact and conclusion in the resolution.

"As you know, I appointed Clay Williams after real consideration of all the public and private interests affected and on the basis of my personal knowledge of his qualifications. Since his appointment he has rendered a devoted, impartial service which has fully justified his selection. I think that as time goes on the federation will agree with me on all of this."

NRA Seen as Temporary.

Following the conference, it was

U. S. to Recall Moscow Consul

Office in Soviet Abolished; Export Bank Next to Go, Hull Hints.

In the wake of the collapse of debt negotiations with Soviet Russia, the State Department announced yesterday that it is abolishing the consulate general office in Moscow and withdrawing its staff. This was generally interpreted as another parting shot at the Russians, with whom the long-pending debt negotiations were broken off when the Soviet held out for a Government loan of $100,000,000 which the United States refused to grant.

Secretary of State Hull thereupon intimated that the Export-Import Bank set up in expectation of agreement on the debt and resultant increased trade would be disbanded. The action yesterday is another step signalizing the State Department viewpoint that there is no present prospect for revived trade and hence no reason for keeping the consulate at Moscow.

Diplomatic relations will not be affected. That is, William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador, now in a Philadelphia hospital undergoing treatment for sinus trouble, plans to return to his post in Moscow. However, the consul general, George Hanson, who is also in this country at present, will not return to Moscow, but will be assigned to another post. Two others of the American staff in Moscow, Capt. David R. Nimmer, acting naval attache, and First Lieut. Thomas D. White, air service attache, also are to be withdrawn and assigned elsewhere.

Inflation Bloc Joins in Fight On Bank Bill

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Not only will the so-called Administration banking bill, now before Congress, be fought by the orthodox monetary school, but also by the left-wing inflationists on the ground that while it may be a step in the right direction it does not go far enough.

This became apparent yesterday as Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee laid the measure before the Senate. It was referred to his committee, but no further disposition of the bill will be made until the group meets, probably not before next Tuesday.

Chairman Henry B. Steagall of the House Banking and Currency Committee, however, will convene this group before the week ends to decide how the bill should be handled. With the printing of the bill, some of the provisions which were not previously fully understood became clarified.

Centers Power in Board.

The text confirmed the original description that the bill would centralize great power in the Federal Reserve Board over the currency and credit policies of the Government.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, who is expected to become the spearhead of the conservative opposition to the bill, remained silent yesterday. Some of his Senate colleagues had jestingly told him the Administration had rushed the bill to Capitol Hill to distract his attention from the $4,880,000,000 relief bill. As chairman of the Appropriations Committee he is part of a group revising that bill.

The sharp-tongued Virginian, however, made it clear that his attention could not be distracted from the relief bill and that until that measure is out of the way he will not concentrate on the banking measure. Nevertheless, all the elements within and outside of Congress opposed to the measure are rallying around Senator Glass.

Meanwhile President Roosevelt, at his semiweekly press conference, said the pending bill represented the general objectives of the Ad-

Senate Body In Deadlock Over Works

Plan to Cut 2 Billion From Measure Wins Tie in Committee.

$50,000,000 Provided for Few More Days of Emergency Relief.

By Robert C. Albright.

A 10-to-10 vote on the President's $4,880,000,000 works and relief bill last night left the Senate Appropriations Committee in a deadlock over whether to abandon the entire works program and substitute $2,880,000,000 for direct relief.

Badly patched and amended the measure was left sinking in a quicksand of nonpartisan opposition, while Administration forces mustered all available support to break the impasse and salvage what remains of a vast but indefinite works program.

Meanwhile $50,000,000 was unearthed by the White House to finance a few more days the emergency relief program after it became evident the Senate will not pass the new authorization this week. It was said the continuing fund will be transferred from unexpended PWA money.

Administration Troubles.

The Senate rebellion was not least of Administration troubles. Both legislative bodies failed to respond to the old Roosevelt magic. In the House, dissatisfied Democrats will hold another patronage caucus this afternoon, while half a dozen committees are disgruntled over failure to give jurisdiction to their groups. The Labor Committee was holding its own independent hearings on the social insurance bill, and the Merchant Marine, Radio and Fisheries Committee was asserting its right to the communication measure sent over their heads to the Interstate Commerce Committee. Members of Roads, Rivers and Harbors, Irrigation, Reclamation and Flood Control Committees claimed they were left in the cold on the President's works bill.

Another meeting of the Senate Appropriations Committee was ordered this morning, when another effort will be made to cut in half the proposed $4,880,000,000 for works and relief, and confine outlays to the "dole."

A motion by Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), Colorado, to appropriate only $2,880,000,000 for direct relief was actually adopted by the committee yesterday by a vote of 9 to 8. Later this action was reconsidered on a roll-call ballot, with the committee tied 10 to 10.

Glass Favors Amendment.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the committee, voted with Adams for the amendment, as did Senators Copeland, of New York, and McCarran, of Nevada (Democrats). Only one Republican, Senator Norbeck, of North Dakota, voted against it.

Adams made an eloquent appeal to the committee, in which he was backed by Glass. He said the credit of the Nation would not stand many more appropriations like that proposed by the President, and a few others like it would send Federal bonds below par. A ten-point drop in bond prices, he declared, would render banks insolvent, checkmate all recovery, and leave America at the mercy of the world. He made the point that $4 is required for work relief, to every $1 needed for the dole. As a matter of fact, he said, $1,880,000,000 would carry the relief load another year. Nevertheless, he accepted an amendment by Copeland to increase this to $2,880,000,000.

"Experts have offered no available plan to put these people to work, and it is my opinion it is geographically impossible," he said. "What we need is development of productive industry."

Glass concurred in much of Adams' statement, and said it is a wonder to him the Nation's credit withstands the present load.

It was learned last night that Adams might have broken yesterday's tie with a proxy vote he reputedly held in his pocket. Senator Overton (Democrat), Louisiana, now in a Baltimore hospital, is said to be for the Adams amendment. Two other Democrats on the committee—Senators Tydings, of Maryland, and McKellar, of Tennessee, are expected back in Washington today. There was specula-

Byrd and Crew Sail for Home From Antarctic

With men and supplies aboard this craft and the barkentine Bear of Oakland, the expedition moved west along the ice cliffs of the Ross Barrier, bound for Discovery Inlet to pick up penguins.

Under sail in a fair wind and using power as well, the barkentine was in the lead, Lieut. Robert A. J. English on the bridge. The flagship was under the command of Commander H. J. Gjertsen.

Tractors Abandoned.

The admiral reluctantly abandoned two tractors, two snowmobiles, a few empty gasoline drums and minor equipment. The expedition leader wanted to get away and said, "There's no use in pressing our luck too far."

The ships cast off at 3:20 p. m., but there still was much work to do below decks. Boxes and crates were scattered about in confusion

Britain Shuns Security Pacts In East Europe

Her 'Isolationist' Policy Held Just as Strong as America's.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

London, Feb. 6.—Great Britain will never sign any security agreement for eastern or central Europe, the Associated Press was informed authoritatively today.

A source in close contact with the British Government described the British attitude toward eastern and central European affairs as comparable with the United States' viewpoint concerning European questions.

The British government has just as strong an "isolationist" attitude toward the more distant sections of Europe as has the United States toward the entire continent, it was explained.

Had Promised Support.

This statement was regarded as significant in the light of the promise Britain made France last week that she would give her full support to the completion of the French-sponsored eastern European mutual assistance pact (the "Eastern Locarno"), and the central European noninterference agreement worked out at Rome by Pierre Laval, French foreign minister, and Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy.

Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, is going to Paris this week-end, ostensibly to address the British Chamber of Commerce there.

It was expected, however, that Simon would see Laval, who accompanied the French premier, Pierre-Etienne Flandin, to London last week, to discus developments in connection with the proposals launched during the Anglo-French conversations.

Confident of Germany.

The British government is confident that Germany will come into the proposed Western European air alliance, intended to pledge the Reich, Britain, France, Italy and Belgium to lend each other immediate air assistance if one of the signatories attacks another from the air, it was learned today.

For this reason, the British are confident that the question of "isolating" Germany through an air alliance for defense among western powers will never arise. Hence British official circles today continued to discourage reports that France and Britain would form an air alliance even if Germany stayed out.

Published reports to that effect, however, were not denied.

Bullitt's Condition Reported 'Very Good'

Philadelphia, Feb. 6 (AP).—William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to Russia, was reported today by University Hospital officials to be in "very good condition." He was operated on Monday for a slight infection of the jaw.

It was said he would remain in the hospital for several days.

Police Stage Gaming Raid Near Capitol

Axes Used to Smash Into House; 58 Men Taken in Custody.

Lieut. Little Declares Place Was Watched for 3 Months.

Swooping down on a three-story building in the 100 block of B street southeast, within a stone's throw of the House Office Building where hearings on crime conditions in Washington are now under way, the police vice squad late yesterday crashed into an elaborate gambling establishment and took 58 men into custody.

The police activities attracted the attention of several members of Congress, all of whom praised Lieut. George Little, vice squad chief, and his six men for their coup.

The raid follows charges made ten days ago by Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, before the crime investigating committee, that a gambling establishment "which everybody knows about" is operating within the shadow of the Capitol.

Place Watched Three Months.

Lieut. Little announced the raid was made on a warrant and that although his men have been watching the place for three months they were able only recently to make the necessary bets.

Police were forced to smash their way into the building and announced that not a single patron or operator had been permitted to escape. All of the 58 men were placed in patrol wagons and carried to police headquarters where each was forced to submit to search and questioning. At an early hour police had not been able to single out the operators. It was understood that these, if selected, would be charged and that the others would be forced to post bond as material witnesses.

Lieut. Little said that one of his squad made a bet on a race and that he and his men followed so quickly that the marked money was found on one of the men arrested.

While occupying the entire building, the gaming establishment was centered on the third floor where police found a blackboard containing racing results and a quantity of numbers slips.

Loud speakers for dissemination of race track results and mutuel totals were found, as were a trough in which discarded numbers slips were thrown, two tables covered with green baize, ostensibly for dice games, and a cashier's cage where police said the race and numbers bets were made and where the winners collected.

Police, armed with axes, came in from the rear and gained entrance to the third floor by smashing in a heavily reinforced door in the rear of the second floor.

Automatic locks were used on both front and back doors, and persons entering, according to police, had to identify themselves before being permitted to get into the gaming room.

Place Had Been Reinforced.

That the place had been expecting a land-office business, police said, was evidenced by the fact that the third floor had been reinforced from thet second floor by 4-inch joists. Police who had been in the place some time previously said that partitions on the third floor had been torn out to make one big room. In addition, it was pointed out that stairways leading from the top floors in the rear had been encased in composition wall boarding to make detection from that sector impossible.

In addition to being in the next block to the House Office Building, the establishment was located across the street from the Congressional Library and persons who congregated to see the police cart the prisoners away had only to look over their shoulders to see the dome of the Capitol.

Antielectrophoto-Micrographically

New York, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Antielectrophotomicrographically, a new word "discovered" by the National Puzzlers League, tonight took the place of antidisestablishmentarianism as the longest word in the English language.

Other momentous news from the puzzlers, who will hold their annual meeting later this month, was the announcement that the words mascara and churchmouse are not in the dictionary.

Girl Called by Defense Blasts "Fisch Wealth," Tells of $4,000 Loan

She Reveals Fisch Borrowed $4,000

Reilly's 5-Hour Battle to Trace 'Luxury Trail' Fails.

Footprint Theory Pressed by State

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.)

Hunterdon County Courthouse, Flemington, N. J., Feb. 6.—One brief word dropped from the lips of a pretty girl in green today and it ripped into shreds a story that counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann had spent five laborious hours in building.

The word was "yes," and Gerta Henkel spoke it with a careless toss of her head while her jaws kept grinding away on chewing gum.

With that little word she destroyed most of the day's previous testimony—testimony designed to show that Isador Fisch swaggered up and down Manhattan Island, his pockets stuffed with fat rolls of bills. It was the intention of big Ed Reilly, chief of defense counsel, to convince the jury that Fisch collected the Lindbergh ransom; that he flaunted $20 gold notes in restaurants after the kidnaping; and that he thought so little of money he casually handed over to Hauptmann a cardboard box bulging with $14,600.

Sex Appeal Injected.

Reilly was marching forward with his witnesses, getting an orderly, connected story into the record. Somebody saw Fisch in the restaurant; somebody else saw him carelessly peel a $5 bill off a thick roll of currency at the corner of Sixtieth street and Broadway in New York City.

And then along came Gerta Henkel. Sex appeal had arrived in this trial at last. Love and money are said to be at the roots of most crimes, but, as Attorney General David T. Wilentz said in his opening statement, the motive for the Lindbergh kidnaping was nothing except "Money, money, money."

The nearest anybody could ever get to a sex angle in this case was Hauptmann's admission that he frequently dropped in to Gerta Henkel's house—while her husband was gone—and drank coffee. That makes her part of two triangles—the eternal triangle of husband, wife and the other woman, and the triangle of Hauptmann-Fisch-and-Henkel. Fisch boarded at Mrs. Henkel's house, and she was a connecting link between the little fur worker and Hauptmann.

"Fisch Borrowed $4,000."

So there was quite a flutter in the courtroom when Mrs. Henkel sat down in the witness chair, and the newspaper girls inspected the points of their pencils in anticipation of what was to come. Gerta is pretty in a hard, stony sort of way. Her blond hair ripples back into a Garbo bob and she had stuck a little green hat on the rear of her head. Her dress was green wool, with a wide flaring white collar. She wiggled in the witness chair until there was on view a generous expanse of her legs, sheathed in brown silk. Gerta had a smile for Reilly and Wilentz, but it didn't interfere with her gum chewing.

It was Wilentz, on cross-examination, who drew from her the word "yes" that tumbled over the defense's story that Fisch was lolling in luxury on the gold that was exacted from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

"Did Fisch borrow $4,000 from your relatives?"

Gerta smiled and carelessly said "Yes."

"What kind of room did Fisch live in?"

"A little room."

"He had no radio, no automobile, no money, and he borrowed from your mother-in-law?"

"Yes."

"And he sailed for Germany without paying it back?"

"Yes."

So this girl, called here as a de-

1,200 Radicals Jailed as Paris Marks '34 Riot

Descent of Communists on Capital Broken Up; Many Arms Seized.

Paris, Feb. 7 (Thursday) (AP).—A dramatic last-minute descent upon the capital of several thousand Communists from outlying "Red" districts was broken up by police early today with 1,200 arrests to commemorate the anniversary of fatal riots of February 6, 1934.

Confiscating pistols, clubs and cans of explosive material, police pounced last night upon Communist groups converging on the Place de la Concorde, focus of the bloody riots a year ago where 19 met death, after a generally quiet day marked only by memorial services and elaborate police precautions.

Shortly after midnight police arrested a band of 40 Communists, armed with revolvers and daggers, near the Elysee palace, residence of the French president. Police said they were heading for the Place de la Concorde.

In the earlier roundups two shots were fired but no one was hurt.

Although crowds clashed twice with police in minor scuffles and red paint splashed the Place de la Concorde to symbolize the blood shed there a year ago, cold and rain helped an impressive array of police, mobile guards and troops to keep hot heads cool.

The wave of blind anger inspired by the great Stavinsky scandal and the political corruption laid bare was gone, and tonight right and left wing extremists, war veterans and the relatives of the victims of

Naval Officer To Be Quizzed On Air Offer

Swanson Calls Commander Weyerbacher to Tell of Proposing Services.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Swanson yesterday ordered Commander Ralph D. Weyerbacher, naval aircraft procurement officer, before a board of inquiry to explain a letter in which he was said to have offered his services as a "technical adviser" to an aviation concern.

Swanson disclosed his action at a press conference, following a demand by Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, of the House Military Committee, for information concerning disposition of the charges.

"I think the officer is entitled to a public hearing," Swanson said.

He added that the board would seek "to determine the facts as submitted by the House committee.

Standley Defends Officer.

Swanson said the letter was written "in such a way that I thought it ought to be inquired into."

Weyerbacher is one of two Navy officers representing the department on a central aircraft procurement board recently set up by Admiral C. J. Peoples, Navy paymaster general and Treasury procurement officer.

Swanson said, however, he had not "heard" of any intention to make Weyerbacher chief naval aircraft procurement officer.

Admiral William H. Standley, chief of operations, after the conference insisted that Weyerbacher had not offered his influence to the company in connection with its bidding on Navy contracts.

The letter was written five years

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday declared that the Federal Government is closing in on the bootlegger, drying up his sources of supply to such an extent that he is being driven to the use of poisonous denaturants.

Another result, he said, has been the development of a new kind of rum-running—alcohol smuggling. Vigorous steps are being taken to stamp this out with the cooperative help of neighboring governments.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was prompted by recent deaths in Utica and Gloversville, N. Y., to order a little investigation of his own. He exhibited to his press conference a chart, prepared by the Treasury, which traced the poisonous liquor back to bootleggers who used, in the one case, an antifreeze mixture, and in the other, rubbing alcohol.

Both are deadly in their effect. The fact that makers of illicit liquor are being forced to such extremes was evidence, in his opinion, of the effectiveness of the Government's campaign against bootlegging. The Treasury, he asserted, is making real progress, is gradually breaking the bootleggers' back after years of fruitless effort.

Considerable trouble has been experienced in blocking alcohol smuggling, he continued, but now this, too, the President said, is coming under control. The success, he said, is largely due to the willingness of friendly governments, particularly Canada and Cuba, to lend a helping hand.

In the case of Canada, Mr. Roosevelt declared that for the first time in history two nations are operating

Farley Supports Bill Putting Postmasters Under Civil Service

Nineteen months after President Roosevelt recommended that legislation be prepared to turn postmasterships into civil service jobs, a bill for that purpose was introduced in Congress yesterday.

Postmaster General Farley, who has been the target of new attacks recently because of his dual role as Democratic Party boss and chief of the mails, immediately stamped the proposal with the approval of the Administration.

The bill was introduced by Farley's former First Assistant Postmaster General, Joseph C. O'Mahoney, now junior Senator from Wyoming. It would go into effect, if passed, on January 1, 1938, and would require all first, second and third-class postmasters to pass civil service examinations. These jobs are now the brightest plums on congressional patronage trees.

Incumbent postmasters would have to take similar examinations to become eligible for reappointment.

In the 52 postoffices that each do an annual business of $1,000,000 or more, only "postoffice inspectors, postmasters of first-class offices or who have had at least four years' actual experience, and executives of broad experience in private life" would be selected as chiefs, O'Mahoney said yesterday in summarizing his [illegible].

In these offices, too, the present requirement that the postmaster should live in the area served by the office would be waived.

After January 1, 1938, the terms of all postmasters would continue indefinitely during proper conduct of their office, instead of being fixed for four years, as at present.

Other Officials Likely to Sever AAA Relations

(Associated Press.)

Additional withdrawals from the AAA apparently impended last night following five resignations from the legal and consumers' counsel staffs—among them being Jerome Frank, general counsel.

One of those dismissed said the shakeup was due to a "fundamental difference of opinion on basic policies" of the Administration and that other sympathizers probably would follow—sooner or later.

In addition to Frank, protege of Felix Frankfurter, three of his aids, Lee Pressman, Francis M. Shea and Victor W. Rotnem, and Gardner Jackson, assistant to Frederic Howe, consumers' counsel, submitted their resignations to Chester C. Davis, farm administrator. Some of them said they were ordered to quit.

Comment of Davis.

Davis said that so far as he was concerned resignations of these men, who were responsible for a "mounting difficulty in getting things done," would end the purge unless Seth Thomas, Department of Agriculture solicitor, chose to make additional changes. Thomas will consolidate the AAA legal staff with his organization.

Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture and close friend of Frank, was in Florida when the shake-up came. Officials said he was not connected with the changes in any way. Some of those dismissed apparently felt that Tugwell did not give them the support they looked for. At one time, Tugwell was called "Brain Truster No. 1" but he has shunned attention recently.

Members of the ousted group said the dismissals did not begin with them but started with R. G. Froker, former dairy section economist, who left the Administration January 26.

Others Who May Go.

Others who may go were said to include Alger Hiss, assistant to Frank, who is now on leave with the Senate munitions committee, and Thomas C. Blaisdell, assistant to Howe and now on leave with the emergency council.

Officials said that if they went they would do so on their own accord, since both were highly regarded at AAA.

The difference which caused the liberal-conservative split was due, one of those dismissed charged to a growing indifference among Administration leaders to consumer protection under AAA marketing agreements.

But spokesmen for Secretary Wallace and Davis said Frank and those who resigned were trouble makers who let their social theories stand in the way of the major task of restoring farm prosperity.

Wallace Statement.

Secretary Wallace said at his press conference that the action was taken to insure the "greatest possible harmony" within the Administration. He added that the ousted group's objectives were not the same as those of other leaders.

"Some people with the highest ideals don't have the same conceptions," he added.

Asked if any objections had been held to the social or economic views of the men concerned Wallace merely replied: "The situation was more or less inevitable."

Howe Will Stay.

Dr. Howe, Davis said, will be retained "in an educational capacity."

Whether Frank would be retained with the Administration was in doubt.

The President persuaded Peek to remain as his foreign trade adviser, but yesterday Mr. Roosevelt said the AAA shake-up seemed a purely internal reorganization and that he had not figured in it.

200 Families Routed By Long Beach Flood

Los Angeles, Feb. 6 (AP).—Flood waters rose rapidly in the northeast section of Long Beach today, causing police to evacuate 200 families from their homes, as intermittent showers continued over southern California.

The swiftly rising waters cut off aid from Mrs. Florence Washburn, an expectant mother. Unattended, save for two neighbors, she gave birth to a son and was rescued shortly afterward by a life guard boat which took her to the Seaside Hospital in Long Beach, where it was said neither she nor the baby had apparently suffered any ill effects.

Baseball 'Angel' Sent To Prison for Theft

Boston, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Roger E. Baker, president and "angel" of the Northeastern Baseball League, six-club minor league circuit, was sentenced today to 12 to 22 years in State Prison for stealing $16,500 from Boston and Peabody leather firms, of which he was assistant treasurer.

At the time of his arrest last October, Baker allegedly confessed to embezzling $150,000 to $200,000 from the Dimond Kid Co. and Dimond-Grynkraut Kid Co. over an 18-month period.

Duke, Duchess of Kent May See Miami on Trip

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Feb. 6 (AP). Unofficial but authoritative sources here said tonight that the Duke and Duchess of Kent will visit Miami in the course of their West Indies honeymoon.

After visiting Puerto Rico, the duke's party will fly to Haiti and Jamaica, proceeding from Jamaica to Bermuda by ship before going to Miami, these sources said.

Cheering crowds greeted the duke and duchess as they landed today at Brighton, 40 miles from Port of Spain, Trinidad, on the first stage of their honeymoon.

Between You and Me

Clipping Rex Tugwell's Left Wing; The Works Bill and the Pork; White House Drafts.

By Raymond Clapper

ONE of the major effects of the shake-up at AAA has been the clipping of Dr. Rex Tugwell's left wing. Jerome Frank, brilliant general counsel of AAA, who was ousted in the reorganization, was an intimate personal friend and legal counselor for Tugwell. They have burned midnight oil together many times working over New Deal legislation. Frank was Tugwell's drafting officer.

More than that, Frank put the emotional crusading drive into Tugwell's ideas and was a material factor in keeping them alive in AAA. When the clash came a year ago with George N. Peek, then coadministrator of AAA, Tugwell went to Frank's defense and fought Peek out of the organization. At that time there were threats that he would resign unless Peek went out.

When the announcement was made that Frank had been forced out, Tugwell was in Florida. He had not been consulted, nor even advised. The shake-up, long brewing, was decided upon last Saturday afternoon between Secretary Wallace and Chester Davis, administrator of AAA. Nobody else knew about it until Tuesday, a few hours before the announcement was made. Tugwell unsuccessfully tried to catch a plane back from Florida immediately. He may arrive today.

His reaction is awaited with tense interest around AAA. Those of the left wingers who felt the ax were only a small portion of the number in the organization who sided with them. Feeling is tense and many who had lined up with the Tugwell-Frank faction were much depressed by what they call the purge. Many of them believe that AAA was the last stronghold of the original New Deal idealism and that it is now being taken over by the "practcial men" and "dirt farmers."

But the most unhappy man of all is Secretary Wallace. His face hung sadly when he met an army of newspaper reporters yesterday. It was a hard choice for him to make because he shares the philosophy and dreams of Tugwell and Frank. He always has been fond of Frank. But the issue was one of standing behind his key executive and backing him in creating an organization which would function effectively and sympathetically. He took his stand and faced the music.

Tugwell has had little to do with AAA for months. As Chester Davis rose in authority after the retirement of Peek, the practical men and dirt farmers supplanted the original brain trusters in influence. Tugwell confined himself largely to supervising routine bureaus in the Agriculture Department and to long-range planning for the Administration.

Dr. Wirt can sleep easier now.

One of the men whose resignations were called for is said to have been active in organizing the protest mass meeting some months ago which followed dismissal of an NRA worker who attempted to organize NRA employes under section 7(a). The National Labor Relations Board ruled that Johnson had dismissed him for organizing activity and he was ordered reinstated.

Dr. Calvin Hoover may succeed Dr. Frederic C. Howe as consumers' counsel at AAA. He believes that consumers must get a better break but is more diplomatic about trying to get it for them than Howe was.

There are two ways of looking at the effect the $4,880,000,000 works bill will have upon President Roosevelt's control over Congress because Senators and Representatives looking for pork will have to apply to him instead of the House or Senate committee. From another point of view there will be a temptation on the part of some Senators and Representatives to become obstreperous in the expectation that the Administration will pacify them with works projects.

* * *

They have the Administration all wrong on the Hill. The White House purpose in sending drafts of legislation to Congress in bill form, as was done in the economic security bill and the proposed banking act of 1935, was officially explained yesterday. Drafts are submitted to Congress by the Administration as a basis of discussion. Members of the House and Senate are glad to get something definite on paper. It gives them a starting point.

So it appears that the House was unduly self-effacing in handling the $4,880,000,000 works bill on the assumption that it was expected to pass the measure without changing a comma. And if the White House attitude is rightly understood, there is no further need for Senator James F. Byrnes, contact man with the White House on the Senate Appropriations Committee, to keep ducking out of executive sessions of the committee to go to the telephone. Of course, it is possible that Jimmy wasn't calling up the Administration during these disappearances, but yesterday he returned once with the word that FERA had found $50,000,000 unexpectedly lying around in some hidden corner of the RFC and that Harry Hopkins wouldn't run out of relief money Saturday after all.

Representative McFarlane of Texas is having no end of trouble getting his patronage rebellion under way. He says that as soon as he lines up a new recruit, the Administration tosses a handful of jobs into his lap and he immediately loses his enthusiasm. The purpose of his fight is to jar loose fresh patronage, but he doesn't like it to come that way.

Bills Proposed On War Profits In Both Houses

McSwain Bill Reported Out in House; Liquor Parties on Ships Told.

(Associated Press.)

The first reaction to congressional probing into war profits came in House and Senate yesterday in measures aimed at turning the whole country into a battle machine in time of war—with excess profits to none.

The House Military Affairs Committee reported out the McSwain bill aimed at limiting war profits. It was heralded by statements from its author, Representative McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, and from Frank N. Belgrano, jr., national commander of the American Legion, as having the full indorsement of that veterans' organization.

Without personal indorsement, Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, introduced a group of bills in the Senate embodying what he described as a mobilization plan intended for introduction by the war plans division of the War and Navy Departments only in event of a declaration of war.

Liquor Parties Revealed.

Meanwhile, the munitions hearing, pushing along with its investigation looking into charges that warship prices had risen although labor and material costs had dropped, was informed that "wines and liquors are just as necessary as steel in many cases" of ship construction. This opinion came from N. R. Parker, treasurer of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation.

The liquor testimony cropped up during committee examination of cost plus contracts during which it was shown that the company had sought during war times to collect for the cost of launching a party for a ship built on a cost-plus basis.

"The Government was asked," Clark commented, "to pay the bill and 10 per cent profit for giving the party."

Officials Were Invited.

Parker said no liquor parties were held on naval ships but he added that on shipping board vessels "Senators, Representatives and other officials were invited."

"You considered that part of the national defense scheme," Clark pursued.

"It had a part in it," Parker answered, continuing:

"You think if a party is given them," Clark asked, "they will be more receptive to shipbuilding appropriations."

"They would know more about ships," Parker said.

Denby Cited at Inquiry.

Earlier the committee had been told that Charles Denby had been employed as a corporation special agent in the Orient while his brother, the late Edwin Denby, served as Secretary of the Navy under President Harding. Charles Denby was paid $500 a month and $1,000 a month traveling expenses.

Clark said he offered the mobilization bills "so that they could be examined by the public and Congress" at a time when that consideration will not be influenced by the hysteria which always accompanies and follows a declaration of war."

The bills provided for a complete mobilization of all industry, with power given the President to commandeer produce or production necessary for war purposes, and to fix prices.

A full registration of all manpower for use either in the armed forces or in non-combatant services was provided.

Security Plan To Stir Revolt, G. O. P. Warns

(Associated Press.)

A two-man Republican attack was directed yesterday against the Administration's social security bill on the ground that it was a "loosely drawn hodge-podge" and would stir up a taxpayers' rebellion.

But both of the G. O. P. commentators cautiously and seriously added that they were in sympathy with the objectives of the program.

Despite the criticisms, Democratic leaders maintained that with what they called some "minor" amendments, the bill would become a law.

Warns Against Taxes.

In other Capitol quarters, meanwhile, a suggestion was made that a Senate investigation be made into the money raising efforts behind the Townsend $200-a-month old-age pension plan, and where this money is going. The Postoffice Department already has looked into this question, but without announced results.

One critic of the Roosevelt plan yesterday was Senator Hastings (Republican), of Delaware. Before the House Ways and Means Committee he pointed out that the taxes imposed would "not take effect until after the next general election," and asserted those taxed would not get back what they put in.

"When you get 40,000,000 people to paying a tax to the Federal Government, I care not how little it may be, I think you'll find a resentment that will be felt by every person in public life," Hastings testified.

The other critic was Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, who predicted that when the committee later this week takes up the bill with its own legislative clerk, numerous changes will have to be made.

G. O. P. Plans Conference.

House Republicans as a whole plan to have a conference on the measure before it is brought up for a vote.

Before the Senate Finance Committee, meanwhile, Abraham Epstein, secretary of the American Association for Social Security, suggested that committee look into both the financing and "propaganda" behind the Townsend plan.

The House Committee already had sought to obtain that information from Dr. F. E. Townsend, who promised to submit later a statement about his aids and the funds coming in from his organization.

Court Backer Asks Simple Majority

Pope's Plan Paves Way for American Adherence.

One staunch World Court supporter yesterday introduced a proposed constitutional amendment which he feels would help bring American adherence, the Associated Press reported.

The amendment by Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, would permit ratification of the court protocol and similar proposals by a simple majority instead of the two-thirds required at present.

The vote in favor of court adherence was 52 to 36, but the required two-thirds was lacking.

Air Derby to Invite Latin-Americans

Outstanding Fliers to Participate in Flight.

Arrangements have been made by officials of the forthcoming air derby to extend a special invitation to outstanding fliers of South and Central American countries to compete in the race from Washington to Buenos Aires and return, the Associated Press says.

Some of the outstanding Latin-American fliers mentioned today as likely to be dealt with by race committee officials were Francisco Mendoza Goncalves, director of civil aeronautics for Argentina; G. Olfano, director general of civil aeronautics for Colombia; Roberto Fierro, chief of the Mexican aeronautical department, and Gustavo Leon, Alfredo Lezamo and Castillo Breton, Mexican fliers.

Whip, Post Deleted, Legislator Drops Lashing Measure

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 6 (AP).—Representative James C. Putnam abandoned his whipping-post bill today after the House of Representatives had taken both the whip and the post out of it.

When the House adopted an amendment to eliminate the whipping-post feature, Putnam moved that further action be "indefinitely postponed." He said they'd "ruined" his bill.

Putnam's bill originally would have authorized circuit judges to prescribe lashes for "able-bodied" men who desert their wives or children.

Complaints Charge Names Suggest Federal Link.

Issuance of formal complaints against two Washington stores and an institute in Muncie, Ind., was revealed yesterday by the Federal Trade Commission. They are charged with operating under names which suggest affiliation with the Federal Government.

The Army and Navy Trading Co. and the American Army and Navy Store, along with the National Civil Service Institute, were cited in the complaints. The commission fixed March 1 as the date on which their operators shall show cause why an order to "cease and desist from the practices charged should not be issued."

Neither of the two Washington establishments is connected with the Army and Navy, the complaints said, nor do they buy merchandise from those departments.

Stonewall Jackson Kin Sought by Photo Owner

Rutledge Beale Bates, of 709 M street northwest, yesterday sought the aid of The Post in locating descendants of Gen. Stonewall Jackson's daughter, Jennie, and Pardon Wormsley, said to have been one of the men who participated in the capture of John Wilkes Booth.

Mr. Bates possesses photographs of Jennie Jackson and Pardon Wormsley which he is willing to turn over to their kin. The former is shown as a child of about 6 years who holds an apple in one hand while Booth's supposed captor is a middle-aged man with a heavy, black mustache.

Jennie's picture was made by Yannerson & Jones, 188 Main street, Richmond, Va. The other photograph came from "Whitehurst Gallery, 434 Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, D. C., W. Snell, photographer and partner."

Commutation Denied, Slayer to Die in Chair

Boston, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Alexander Kaminski, 24-year-old New Britain, Conn., gunman, must died in the electric chair the week of February 17 for slaying Guard Merritt W. Hayden in one of two sensational escapes from Hampden County Jail at Springfield.

Gov. Curley and his council abandoned Kaminski to a murderer's fate today, denying his plea for commutation of sentence to life imprisonment. A 30-day respite for the slayer expires the night of February 16.

Low Bidders' List Given, Frey Stated at Inquiry

John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor, in recent testimony before the Senate Munitions Committee asserted that ten days before bids on 21 Navy ships were opened in June, 1933, he had been handed a complete list of the "low bidders."

In a dispatch on January 25, the day of Frey's testimony, the Associated Press erroneously reported him as saying he had been given by a shipbuilder a complete and accurate list of the "low bids."

Frey said he had given the list of "low bidders" to Hugh S. Johnson, then chief of NRA, but that the latter had declined to take cognizance of it.

The Associated Press is glad to make this correction.

Arkansas Drops Charge Against Union Leaders

Bills to Abolish Holding Firms Given Congress

Wheeler, Rayburn Offer Measures Dooming Units in 5 Years.

Drastic bills intended to wipe out public utility holding companies within five years were introduced yesterday in House and Senate.

The measures were advanced by Chairmen Rayburn and Wheeler, of the House and Senate Interstate Commerce Committees, respectively. Already broad in scope, they will be tightened later when Wheeler offers an amendment to clamp stringent taxes on "these creatures of corporations."

Hearings will begin shortly on both proposals to expedite execution of President Roosevelt's threat to eliminate the "evils" of holding companies, emphasized in his opening message to Congress a month ago.

Scrutiny Avoided, Charges.

"Growth of many important holding structures," Rayburn charged, "can only be ascribed to the desire of men for excessive profits from security mongering and for undue economic power over their fellows."

Rayburn accused the holding companies of seeking "ingenious devices" to "milk" the companies they dominate. He added their intercorporate relationships often were designed to "avoid the scrutiny" of small investors.

"The holding company," Wheeler charged, "has been the most facile device with which lawyers have helped a shrewd few effect their concentration of power over billions of other people's money."

Wheeler warned the trend toward "concentration of economic power" is growing faster than ever before and declared it must be reversed "if we are to avoid Fascism or Communism without being sure which of the two we may get."

Dissolving Power Provided.

Outstanding provisions of the companion bills would:

1. Empower the Securities and Exchange Commission to reorganize or dissolve the companies.
2. Call for strict Federal regulation.
3. Enable the Government to prevent further "pyramiding of structures."
4. Require full reports on financial structures and interlocking directorates.
5. Forbid common control of domestic and foreign electric utility and interstate gas transmission properties.
6. Deny holding companies the right to share in the profits of subsidiaries.
7. Necessitate rigid control of intercorporate relations.
8. Authorize construction of new interstate facilities where necessary to assure fair rates to consumers.

Walkouts Staged By Relief Workers

Strike Seeking Return of Reductions in Pay.

Greeley, Colo., Feb. 6 (AP).—Three hundred relief workers were on strike in Weld County today.

Strike leaders predicted 1,000 workers would be on strike within 24 hours, seeking restoration of a cut from 40 cents to 30 cents an hour. They now are asking 50 cents an hour.

Fort Smith, Ark., Feb. 6 (AP).—Upwards of 1,500 workmen who quit their relief jobs in protest of a reduction of wages today surveyed 42 suspended relief projects and announced they were "going fishing." The walkout participants contend they should get 30 cents an hour instead of the 20 cents as established February 1.

Ice Jams Sever Traffic To Chincoteague Island

Chincoteague Island, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—A heavy northwest wind jammed ice floes into the narrows separating this island from the Virginia mainland this afternoon and, as dark fell, all traffic across the 6 miles of bridge and causeway had been cut off.

Communication lines remained open and although the bridges had sunk as much as 4 feet under the terrific pounding of the grinding cakes, the island's water supply was still in order. Water is carried in mains along the bridges and causeways.

Puerto Rico Sugar Men Ask Aid of Roosevelt

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Sugar Producers Association today made public an appeal to President Roosevelt, in the name of "200,000 families dependent on the sugar industry for subsistence," to take steps to prevent collapse of the industry.

Asserting that sugar supports 80 per cent of the island's economic structure, the producers contend that the AAA program for conversion of 250,000 tons of sugar into molasses makes the whole harvesting program uncertain.

Porterville, Calif., Feb. 6 (AP).—Richard Francisco, Indian patriarch reputed to be 115 years old was buried on the Tule River Indian Reservation near here today with ancient tribal ceremonies. The aged aborigine, whose wrinkled face gave evidence of far advanced years, was a full-blooded Yokut.

Marine Officers Win Promotion

Marine Corps' Promotions Go To 190 Officers

65 to Become Majors, 125 Captains, Navy Secretary Reveals.

The selection of 65 captains of the Marine Corps to become majors and 125 first lieutenants who will be raised to captaincies was announced yesterday by Secretary Swanson at his weekly press conference.

President Roosevelt approved the list earlier in the week. The junior promotion board which recommended the advances was headed by Col. James J. Meade.

No announcement was made concerning the senior board, which submitted its findings to Secretary Swanson and the President some time ago. This group selected about 25 higher ranking officers of the Marine Corps for promotion, but there has been a delay in making the list public. It is understood that it is still on the President's desk and that it will be announced within a few days.

Among the list of Marine Corps captains selected yesterday for promotion were the following, who are well known here: Eugene Francis Crowley Collier, Richard Culahan Sanderson, Harold C. Major, Robert Charles Kilmartin, jr., Hamilton Maxwell Harry Fleming, Frederick Edmund Stack, Joseph Howard Fellows, Lester Adolphus Dessez, John Halla, Kenneth Inman, Frank Bryan Goettge, Alfred Charles Cottrell, John Taylor Selden, Elmer Edwards Hall, Henry Arthur Carr, Solon Caldwell Kemon, Arnold Conrad Larsen, William Jennings Wallace, Theodore Hamilton Cartwright, Herman Henry Hanneken, William Ulrich, James Lambie Denham.

The lieutenants who will become captains include: Guy B. Beatty, William Conrad Lemly, Reginald Herber Ridgley, jr., Caleb T. Bailey, Raymond Algot Anderson, Alexander Walter Kreiser, jr., Thomas C. Perrin, Thomas Jackson McQuade, LePage Cronmiller, jr., Samuel K. Bird, Arthur Ellis, Floyd A. Stephenson, James, P. S. Devereux, David K. Claude, Edward J. Trumble, Alfred Reed Pefley, Joseph C. Burger, John Francis Hough, Edward L. Pugh, Presley M. Rixey, Edward W. Snedeker, Kenneth H. Cornell, Thomas Branch Jordan, Earle S. Davis, William D. Saunders, jr., John R. Lanigan, Peter Paul Schrider.

Bill Up Again For Selection Of Delegates

Norton Measure Places Primary Choice With D.C. Commissioners.

Representative Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday reintroduced a bill to set up election machinery for the selection of delegates to the national political party conventions. The bill, drafted by John P. Mullen, attorney, was introduced last year but was pigeonholed. It was also the subject of a hearing last December, along with other proposed District primary bills.

The measure would place the first primary election of convention delegates in the hands of the District Commissioners but would permit subsequent primaries to be conducted by the secretary-treasurer of each respective party.

Nominations for delegates under the bill would have to be made in petitions signed by at least 25 voters of the same political party as the candidates. Voters must have been residents of the District for three years and candidates for five years prior to the primary.

All voters would be required to register and pay a poll tax of $1, and primaries would be held the first Monday of May in each presidential election year. The District auditor would be authorized to receive the poll taxes until the elected delegates selected a secretary-treasurer. The convention delegates would be authorized to name a national committee member for the District.

The House bill is the third to be reintroduced this session giving the residents of Washington some measure of suffrage. Two bills have been resubmitted to the Senate by Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, providing for national representation and election of a board of education.

Opposition Made To Zoning Change In 16th St. Section

A proposal to change the zoning laws governing the area in the vicinity of Sixteenth street and Park road to permit construction of an apartment house was opposed before the zoning commission yesterday by Martin McNamara in behalf of the Sacred Heart Parish.

The proposal would change the area bounded by Sixteenth, Brown, Newton and Monroe streets from a residential area to a zone to enable erection of an apartment house. The change also was opposed by the Gunton Temple Memorial Church.

Decision on this proposal, as well as several others, is expected to be announced next week. Other changes asked were: change in regulations to permit establishment of parking places in the 500 block of Twentieth street northwest; and in the 1800 block of G street northwest; and a proposal to make a commercial area in the 1600 block of Twentieth street northwest.

Industry, Trade Continue Gain, U. S. Declares

Commerce Department Reports Auto Production Is Highest Since '29.

Sharp gains are evident in industrial production and employment, and business activity is expanding at an accelerated pace, the Department of Commerce reported yesterday.

Industrial production in December was at 86 per cent of 1923-1925 average and 12 points higher than in November, the announcement said. Weekly data for January indicate a further advance in the index, it was reported.

"While the rapid expansion in output in the automobile and steel industries has been outstanding, increased production and sales have been reported over a wide range of industries," the statement said. Automobile production was reported to be the highest since 1929, and steel production increased from 32 per cent of capacity during the first week in December, to 53 per cent in the last week in January.

The department reported that expansion also occurred in leather and shoe, lumber, rubber, tobacco, machine tool, textile, newsprint and plate glass industries. Bituminous coal production followed the upward trend of manufacturing activity. The only serious decline reported was in foreign trade.

Wholesale commodity prices, the report showed, increased approximately 2 per cent during the four weeks ended January 29. At the same time, the price of farm products rose 5.6 per cent, and food prices 4.6 per cent.

Factory employment, the report said, increased 3 per cent in December and pay rolls increased 6.2 per cent. Much of the increase was in the automobile industry.

Freight car loadings in December were reported to have declined less than is usual during that month.

Whistling Heart Drives Englishman To Kill Himself

London, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—A whistling heart is strange to medical science, but stranger still to the man who owns one, and Robert Lockyear, Devonshire saloon keeper, owned one for some time.

At every beat the heart would whistle, often so loudly people passing by could hear it. It worried Lockyear, and he went to doctors seeking a cure, but none could help him.

He is dead tonight, a suicide. The inquest revealed he had taken his life rather than go on living with a whistling heart.

U. S. Treasurer Julian In Miami to Visit Wife

Miami, Fla., Feb. 6 (AP).—William A. Julian, treasurer of the United States, arrived today for a two-day visit with his wife, who is convalescing here from illness.

Julian cruised from Washington to Palm Beach with Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, who inspected the inland waterway development.

Ickes Refuses PWA Pay Rises Affecting 800

McCarl Ruling Nets Order Against Promotions, Salary Changes.

Some 800 persons in line for salary raises were disappointed yesterday when Secretary Ickes ruled there could be no PWA promotions, due to a decision last week by Comptroller General McCarl.

The McCarl edict, applicable to all Federal agencies, upheld the economy act provision which banned salary adjustments to bring employes in emergency organizations to the general level of workers under classified status.

A. H. Martin, acting PWA executive officer, signed the memorandum postponing indefinitely PWA salary increases. It read:

"The administrator has advised that favorable consideration will not be given to changes in status for employes involving increases in salary until further notice and that no action will be taken at this time on those now pending in his office."

The assignment of present personnel to duties carrying a classification higher than called for by their present salaries is to be avoided, it was reported. Only in cases where it is absolutely essential will the workers be detailed to new duties. Recommendations or salary increases will be unacceptable.

Ex-Inmate of Madhouse a Defense Witness

Swears Fisch Left Shoe Box In Repair Shop

But Wilentz Discredits His Story by Establishing Mental Disorder.

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 6 (AP).—The defense tried today to put the fat packages of Lindbergh ransom money into the thin hands of the late Isador Fisch, and thereby exonerate Bruno Richard Hauptmann, Fisch's erstwhile business partner, from all guilt in the ransom payoff transaction.

Chief Defense Attorney Edward J. Reilly called as his first witness Sam Streppone, who said he was a radio repairman, living in the Bronx.

Reilly showed him a photograph.

Q. Do you recognize that man?—A. I do.

Q. Who is he?—A. Isador Fisch.

Streppone testified he kept records of all work performed. He told of repairing a radio for Fisch May 10, 1933.

Streppone said the radio was brought to his shop by Fisch and left five days while $3 worth of repair work was performed. Fisch came back to the shop on a Sunday.

Q. Did Fisch have a package?—A. Yes.

The now dead German furrier, the witness said, left the package about six hours and returned for it. Streppone described the package as a shoe box.

Wilentz took the witness.

Q. You were adjudged insane, were you not?—A. Yes, 1928. Discharged, no psychosis.

Reilly took the witness for redirect examination and asked Streppone if he had not been discharged as cured. The witness answered yes.

Wilentz again questioned him.

Q. How many times have you been in an institution because of mental disorders?—A. I'd make it about five times.

Q. Sure it was not eight times?—A. I'd say five.

Q. At one time didn't you threaten bodily harm to one of the ladies of a charitable organization?—A. Yes.

Q. And another time you wrote her filthy letters?—A. Abusive language; yes, sir.

He was excused after Reilly adduced that he had been discharged from Bellevue Hospital in July, 1934, after five days.

Lieut. Paul Sjostrom, investigator of the State police, was called as the next witness. The defense counsel took the investigator, a fingerprint examiner, through a description of the methods used in taking pictures of parts of the kidnap ladder.

125 Finger Marks.

Fisher tried to show that the photographs did not give a complete view of every part of the ladder and that the parts pictured could not be identified.

Q. How many photographs were taken of the ladder?—A. Sixty-eight.

Q. Is that all?—A. Yes.

Q. Does that mean you got only 68 fingerprints?—A. There were approximately 125 finger marks in those photographs.

Q. How about palm prints—were there any of those?—A. Yes, palm marks.

Q. Were they photographed, too?—A. They were.

Q. You didn't find any fingerprints with the State police methods?—A. No.

Q. But after 13 days, with Dr. Hudson's method, some were found? A. Several hundred people handled the ladder between March 1 and the time the silver nitrate process of Dr. Hudson was used.

Q. So after 13 days Sergt. Kelly (F. A. Kelly, fingerprint expert), found some?—A. None of value. There were so many.

Q. Did at any time you identify the fingerprints of this defendant, Richard Hauptmann?—A. No.

Attorney General Wilentz took up the questioning.

Q. If this defendant wore gloves, his fingerprints wouldn't show?—A. No.

Q. It's been your experience that criminals frequently wear gloves? A. Yes.

Fisher intervened.

Q. A mother or a nurse putting a baby to bed doesn't wear gloves, in your experience?—A. Not in my experience.

Wilentz brought out that handling by several persons would probably obliterate original prints, making them worthless.

Another State trooper, Sergt. Louis Kubler, a fingerprint expert, followed Sjostrum to the stand. Fisher immediately began to quiz him on the examination of the ladder for fingerprints.

He told of Dr. Hudson's visit to the Lindbergh estate on March 12 or 14, after the kidnaping.

Q. What was he down there for?—A. To demonstrate a new process, known as the "silver nitrate process" designed to bring out latent fingerprints on wood.

Dr. Hudson, Kubler said, demonstrated his process on two other pieces of wood in the basement of the Lindbergh home.

One section of the ladder was used later by Dr. Hudson to make a test in the back yard.

Q. Any prints discovered?—A. Yes, a few, but they were not readable.

Dr. Hudson left soon after, Kubler said, and he continued the application of the process, "off and on" for two weeks.

Q. Eventually, you did complete the processing of the ladder. How many prints were found?—A. About 125 markings were found. Only about 20 were readable.

The witness, responding to Fisher's rapid-fire questions, testified he was the only man who continued the process on the ladder but other duties had interrupted him several times during the two weeks.

Q. Now, Sergeant, don't you know one of your superiors wrote Dr. Hudson that 500 markings were taken from the ladder?—A. No, I do not.

Q. But you say definitely now that 500 markings were found?—A. Only 120 or 125 markings were found.

Kelly on Stand.

Frank A. Kelly, of the State police, was called next to tell of his methods in examining the interior of the Lindbergh nursery for fingerprints. As a State witness, Kelly told of using a black powder method and failing to find readable prints.

A beer stein, Fisher brought out, was on the nursery window ledge, at one side, when Kelly made his examination of the room.

Kelly said the ransom note lay on the ledge not far from the stein.

Fisher pursued his questioning until Wilentz protested that "this has been gone over time and time again." He was sustained.

Fisher said he wanted to clear the confusion with proper answers from the witness.

Wilentz, taking the witness, sought to demonstrate where the beer stein stood on the nursery window ledge. Kelly explained it was in a "recess" at the side.

Taxi Driver Testifies.

Q. Did you know Isador Fisch? A. Yes, I worked with him.

Q. Where?—A. At the Knickerbocker Pie Baking Co.

Bruckmann said he drove Fisch about, making sales of products.

Q. After you stopped working for him did you see him again?—A. I did.

Q. When?—A. Some time in May, 1933.

The witness said he was "hacking" at the time when Fisch came up to his stand one night about 7 o'clock and spoke to him. He related how Fisch got in his cab and he drove him to a certain destination.

"He took a roll of bills out of his pocket," the witness said, telling how Fisch left the cab. "He gave me a $5 bill, but I can't swear whether it was a gold note or not."

The prosecution objected and the answer was stricken.

Reilly said "for the purpose of the record" the intention of the question was to show that after April 2, 1932, and to the time that Fisch sailed for Europe he had plenty of money.

Plumber Questioned.

Gustave Miller, New York plumber, the next witness, in loud tones told of operating a shop in the Bronx. He said that in August, 1934, he was called to the Hauptmann apartment, found the defendant and his wife present, and was shown to the closet where there was a leak.

The plumber, hand on chin, told of climbing from a chair in the closet through the trap door to the attic and locating a leak in the roof around the vent pipe.

Q. Was it raining that day?—A. Right. I had my raincoat on. I seen the water coming down the stack (vent pipe). I had my candle. I always carry my candle so I can see where I'm going."

The witness told of walking over the floor boards of the attic in search for other leaks. Rain, he said, was coming in the south window also. (The window is near the section of floor where the State contended Hauptmann removed a board for use in the ladder.)

Q. Did you see any board missing from the floor?—A. No.

This answer drove at the heart of the evidence by which the State has tried to prove one ladder upright came from the Hauptmann attic.

The witness, under cross-examination, concluded he was not sure all the floor boards extended entirely across the attic.

Reilly then called Theron J. Main, of Warsaw, N. Y., who asserted he saw a man he thought was Fisch tender a $20 gold note in a New York restaurant in 1933, and then showed him more bills.

On cross-examination, Main admitted he thought gold notes were yellow-backs and did not know that none of the ransom cash was in gold-backs.

Mrs. Henkel Called.

Mrs. Gerta Henkel, friend of the Hauptmanns, was then called.

Trim in a green dress with a large white collar and a little green hat with a jaunty feather, she chewed gum rhythmically between her answers to the urbane Reilly.

Q. Did Mr. Hauptmann bring Mrs. Hauptmann to your house when she returned from Germany?—A. Yes, the first week.

Mrs. Henkel said she knew Fisch in Germany "while I was in school yet." With a wave of her hand, she indicated Fisch was an old friend.

"In Mr. Hauptmann's conduct toward you was there at any time anything ungentlemanly or dishonorable?" Reilly asked.

"Certainly not." She seemed to have paused in her gum chewing hardly long enough to tumble out the two words.

Reilly at that point surrendered his witness to the State, and the attorney general began questioning her on her friendship with Hauptmann, and how frequently he visited her.

Q. There were mornings he came there too. He liked coffee?—A. Yes.

Q. You like coffee, too?—A. You said it.

Fisch Borrowed $4,000.

Some of the girl's affirmative responses were a mere "um," as she munched away at her chewing gum.

Q. You introduced Fisch to Hauptmann in your house?—A. Yes, before I knew that they had met.

Mrs. Hauptmann's face was flushed as the girl was questioned.

Reilly took the witness for a short redirect examination. He asked why she had not attended the Fisch bon voyage party and she replied he did not want her there because he had not been at her house recently.

Q. What business was he in?—A. In the fur business.

Q. Did he borrow some money from your mother?—A. No, from my father.

Q. How much?—About $4,000.

Wilentz interposed again. Responding to questions, the girl said Fisch lived in one room in her house, and, as far as she knew, never owned a radio.

Dr. Erasmus Mead Hudson, the New York criminologist, who allegedly discovered 500 fingerprints on the kidnap ladder, was called by Frederick A. Pope, as the next defense witness.

Dr. Hudson, a tall, black-haired, solemn-faced man, said he had first used silver nitrate to get fingerprints in 1919 or 1920 and had later learned the method had been used 15 or 20 years earlier in France. He explained his process, and how he had gone to Hopewell after the State police invited him.

He applied his process, he said, to books and other things in the nursery, and then demonstrated his method to the police, and set troopers to work on the ladder.

Q. Now, doctor, assuming that these fingerprints had been on there and had gone into the fibers of the wood—I suppose that is what they do, don't they?—A. Yes.

Q. Soaks into the fibre of the wood. Would it be possible to sandpaper the surface of the rail, clean it, sandpaper it and still bring out the finger prints?—A. Yes. Trooper Kelly did a great deal of experimenting along those lines. He told me he could sandpaper the print off three times, I think, and bring it out again with the silver nitrate, showing the depth to which it penetrated.

Q. Did you also demonstrate the method of using silver nitrate on paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Dr. Hudson said a Mr. Mitchell had obtained fingerprints two and a half years old on paper.

Q. Now, doctor, assuming that this particular ladder that we have here had been made, built and put together by the defendant in this case, for how long a time would his fingerprints remain upon portions of that ladder handled by him which could be developed, brought out and identified?—A. Well, if after having made the ladder, the ladder has been in an ordinary kind of a place, fingerprints could be developed at least six months after that, and if the conditions were very good as to dryness you could go back a year or a year and a half, or even two years, I am sure.

Pope suspended his direct examination of Dr. Hudson and court adjourned at 4:31 p. m. Pope explained he would require additional time for his direct questioning of the witness.

'Saw' Fisch With Famous Shoe Box

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Sam Streppone, Bronx radio repairman, who testified his radio shop was visited by Fisch, the latter leaving a package the "size of a shoebox" with him for a few hours.

Defense Claim Of Fisch Cash Blasted by Girl

fense witness to try to help Hauptmann blacken the reputation of Isador Fisch with the guilt of the Lindbergh crime, turned into one of the best witnesses for the State. Whether she realized it or not, nobody knows, for she kept flashing smiles at Hauptmann and Mrs. Hauptmann, who sat 30 feet across the courtroom.

After adjournment of the day's session, prosecution counsel said a plaster cast shows that a footprint left on a fresh grave in St. Raymond's Cemetery after the Lindbergh ransom was paid was made by a man who wears the same size shoe as Hauptmann.

Special Assistant Attorney General George K. Large said that was the reason Reilly never used a Department of Justice report on the footprint. Reilly asked Thomas H. Sisk, Department of Justice agent, to submit the report. Sisk said permission of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, in Washington, would have to be obtained. Reilly wired Cummings, who ordered Sisk to produce the report in court.

Sisk had the report when the defense called him back to the stand this week. Reilly read it, but did not refer to it again.

Large said the cast, made by Dr. John F. Condon and his son-in-law, Ralph Hacker, showed the print was made by a man who wore a size 9 or 9½ shoe. That is the size shoe Hauptmann wears.

The footprint was found near the spot where Condon paid the $50,000 ransom.

Witness Adjudged Insane.

Another of the eccentric witnesses that Reilly sometimes brings into this courtroom appeared today and swore that Fisch was so careless with his money packages that he once left a box in a radio repair shop for about six hours. What the effect of James Streppone's testimony was supposed to be, nobody knows. But when Reilly finished with him and turned him over to Wilentz for cross-examination the attorney general shot this question at the witness:

"You were adjudged insane some time ago, weren't you?"

"Yes," said Streppone cheerfully, "in 1928."

"How many times were you in an institution?"

"Five times."

"And each time for a mental disorder?"

"Yes, depressive."

"That's all," Wilentz said.

Theron Main, of Warsaw, N. Y., did not agree with Gerta Henkel that Isador Fisch was a poverty-stricken young man. He said he saw him one night in 1933 in a New York restaurant toss a $20 gold bill to a waiter. Main said Fisch had many more such bills in his pocket that night.

A Gold-Back Note.

Wilentz, who more and more finds himself pushed into the role of counsel for Fisch, leaped at the witness to try to disprove that this bill was Lindbergh ransom money.

"This $20 gold note had a green front and a gold back, didn't it?"

"Yes, it did."

"You looked at it thoroughly?"

"Yes."

"Haven't you read in the newspapers that there wasn't a single Lindbergh ransom bill with a gold back to it?"

"No."

"Don't you know that all the Lindbergh bills didn't have a yellow back, but just a gold seal on the front of them?"

"No, I didn't know that."

Oscar Bruchman is a taxicab driver. He had known Fisch for some time, he said, and had worked in the same factory with him. One night in 1933 their paths crossed at Sixtieth street and Broadway in New York. Fisch had not worked at the factory for some months, Bruchman said. The cab driver needed money.

Borrowed a $5 Bill.

And so, the witness said, Fisch took a bulky roll of currency out of his pocket, handed him a $5 bill and strolled away.

Gustav Miller, a plumber, spent a brief time on the witness stand, telling about how he went through the Hauptmann home repairing leaky pipes. One such pipe was in the closet where Hauptmann stored away the shoebox that Fisch gave him. Water dripped from this pipe, Hauptmann said, melted the cardboard in the box, and exposed the Lindbergh ransom money to view.

Miller said he repaired the pipe and, in the course of his duties, went up to the Hauptmann attic. This was in 1934.

"Were all the boards on the attic floor?" Reilly asked.

The State contends Hauptmann took a board out of his attic some time before the kidnaping and used it in constructing the ladder employed in the kidnaping.

"Yes, all the boards were there." Miller said.

The defense returned today to its attack on the New Jersey State police, charging they bungled the investigation of the crime and allowed the real kidnaper to escape. The defense called Trooper Frank Kelly, State police fingerprint expert, to the stand and drew from him the testimony that he had found only about 125 fingerprints on the ladder.

They also brought out that there was a beer stein in the window of the Lindbergh nursery the night of the kidnaping and sought to prove that no one could have climbed into that window without upsetting the stein.

Under cross-examination, Wilentz obtained the information that the stein was not on the window sill, but on a ledge nearby.

The defense made much of the Kelly testimony that he found only 125 finger marks on the ladder after scores of persons had handled it in the course of the investigation. Then it brought Dr. E. M. Hudson, New York fingerprint expert, to the witness chair.

He testified he found 500 finger marks on the ladder through a silver nitrate process with which the State police were unfamiliar. Hudson taught the State police how to use the silver nitrate method after he was called into the case.

Officer Summoned On Air Firm Letter

Helped Build Shenandoah.

Swanson said there was precedent for Navy officers serving as technical advisers, but that most of them obtained temporary leave.

He denied the officer was interested in contracts.

Swanson said Weyerbacher would be represented by counsel with power to produce witnesses.

Previously Chairman McSwain said there would be "some action up here unless there is some in the Navy."

He said also that earlier this week the Navy officer in question appeared at a secret meeting in the Military Committee room to acknowledge that he offered to be a consulting engineer for a new airplane company for a monthly retainer fee of $1,500, plus expenses and $100 for each day he actually worked.

Because of that testimony, McSwain said, the committee would fight bitterly a reported plan to give this officer an important post in the Navy's new procurement division.

Although leaders of the contending factions summoned their "political troops" to be ready to meet each other's "challenge," both the right and left disclaimed any intention of breaking the peace.

Two minor clashes marred the solemn ceremonies at which Paris honored those who spilled their blood in the Place de la Concorde last year. Both scuffles were over quickly.

West Virginia Backs Primary On Judgeships

House of Delegates Passes Plan for Abolishing Judicial Convention.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—Nomination of circuit judges in primary elections rather than judicial conventions was approved by the House of Delegates today at a session devoted almost entirely to discussion of election laws.

One other proposed primary change—entrance fees for all candidates—was defeated, and a third election bill outlining the method of arranging names on general election ballots was approved.

The bill putting judges of circuit courts into the primary fights was adopted by a vote of 53 to 37, after a sharp fight in which many delegates asserted "the judiciary should be kept out of politics."

"Don't kid yourself for one minute that the judiciary isn't in politics under the convention system," declared Delegate Ralph H. Hiner, Pendleton County attorney.

Bills intended to loosen the restrictions on lending laws so banks and other financial organizations may comply with the Federal Housing act and to set up a State police disability and pension fund were introduced in the State Senate today.

The housing loan bill has the approval of F. Wichter McCullough, State director of the National Emergency Council, and was offered by Senator Paul (Democrat), of Brooke.

Here's real medication

To Help You Prevent Colds

. . . USED IN TIME, HELPS TO AVOID MANY COLDS ENTIRELY

THIS is the danger season for colds—the time when they are most likely to lead to serious complications. Don't neglect that first warning sign. Quick! At the first nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze—just a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril. Used in time, Va-tro-nol helps to prevent many colds entirely.

This unique aid in preventing colds is especially designed for the nose and throat—where most colds start. Va-tro-nol aids and stimulates the functions provided by Nature—in the nose—to throw off colds in the early stages.

Where irritation has led to a clogged-up, stuffy nose (a well developed head cold or nasal catarrh) Va-tro-nol penetrates deep into the nasal passages—reduces swollen membranes—clears away clogging mucus—brings comforting relief.

Powerful yet absolutely safe—for both children and adults—Vicks Va-tro-nol contains real medication. Its results cannot be expected from mere "oil drops." Va-tro-nol's effectiveness has been proved in thousands of clinical tests supervised by practicing physicians. Equal effectiveness is shown in its every-day home use—aiding millions to greater freedom from colds.

*NOTE—for your protection—The remarkable success of Vicks drops—for nose and throat—has brought scores of imitations. The trade-mark Va-tro-nol is your protection in getting this exclusive Vick formula. Always ask for Vicks Va-tro-nol.

Message Soon To Ask 2-Year NRA Extension

Roosevelt, in 'Dear Bill' Letter to Green, Upholds Clay Williams.

made clear that the President expects NRA to continue as a temporary organization rather than as a permanent part of the Government. Few, if any, changes in its present form of organization are expected.

In a statement following the conference, Senator Robinson said:

"We discussed the proposal to extend the NRA. It is expected that the President will send to Congress at his convenience, probably in a few days, a message announcing certain principles he thinks should be incorporated in the legislation. I shall not presume to anticipate his announcement. Committees will consider the subject and report legislation in time for disposition before June 16."

Labor Leaders Meet Perkins.

Representative Doughton said the conference had reached the point where work of writing the amended bill can start immediately.

Meanwhile, labor leaders attended an all-day conference with Secretary Perkins, discussing legislation affecting workers. Attending the conference were members of the executive council of the A. F. of L., representatives of the Railway Brotherhood and members of the Labor Advisory Board. A. F. of L. representatives told the Secretary that they favored extension of NRA with provisions for collective bargaining, better compliance provisions, and labor representation on all boards. They also asked that the President's authority to impose codes be continued.

The labor leaders particularly argued in favor of the 30-hour week. No formal action was taken.

Schall Says New Deal 'Undermines' Nation

Senator Schall (Republican), of Minnesota, contended in the Senate yesterday that governmental corporations have been created under the New Deal "in readiness to take the place of all business activities of the country."

"When a definite breakdown of business and agriculture under the management of the alphabetic organization arises, these Federal corporations are in a position to take hold of and direct every detail of American life," Schall said.

Schall charged that most bills enacted in the last Congress "were prepared in secret as parts of a whole plan * * * to undermine the hitherto prevalent plan of government in the United States.

Greeted by his wife and daughter, Senator Huey Long arrived yesterday at Union Station, after a hurried trip to Louisiana to quell a "rebellion" against his rule. He was accompanied by a bodyguard of 3.

Colmar Manor Faces New Tax For Fire Plan

Bill to Provide Protection by Nearby Villages Being Revived.

Residents of Colmar Manor, Md., will be faced with an additional tax of 10 cents on each $100 of real property if the fire department bill, pigeon-holed two years ago by town officials, is revived.

Bird H. Dolby, town counsel, announced yesterday that the town had authorized him to redraft the bill and submit it again to the State Legislature. If approved by the Legislature, a public referendum will be taken within the town.

The object of the bill will be to raise funds by means of taxation for fire protection. Since the town has no department of its own, the funds, it is expected, would be divided between Cottage City and Bladensburg. Fire protection is furnished by departments from both these towns.

Sanitary Plan Opposed.

Mr. Dolby also announced that at the monthly meeting of the town council Tuesday night the officials went on record as opposing the proposed Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission bill concerning garbage collection.

The bill, if approved by the Legislature, will give exclusive rights for garbage collection in the metropolitan area to the sanitary commission. Homes, it is estimated, would be taxed approximately $1 a month.

The town council indorsed the so-called gas tax bill proposed by the Prince Georges County Municipal Association calling for a more equitable and improved distribution of municipal allotments from the State gasoline tax funds.

Board Overrules Clergy to Permit Bingo in School

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Overruling ministerial and lay protests that the game is a form of gambling, the city school board last night voted to permit the high school auxiliary to hold bingo parties in the high school building as a means of raising funds for school improvement.

Objections to the game were expressed to Joseph E. McCalley, president of the board, by the Rev. R. V. Lancaster, pastor of the Presbyterian Church; S. M. Janney, and others.

Behind closed doors the board aired charges of "cowardly dishonesty" in one of the high school classes, as charged in an aditorial last week in the Spotlight, high school publication. Following the meeting the board said the charges had not been substantiated.

The editorial declared that unless the students of a certain history class "discontinue immediately their disgusting and cowardly dishonesty during recitations and tests the editors will write a series of editorials on the subject, telling all but names."

Relief Official to Speak.

Dr. Harry Greenstein, of the Maryland Emergency Relief Administration, will be guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the Council of Social Agencies of Montgomery County tomorrow night at Hungerford Tavern, in Rockville, Md.

Leach Ordered To Fraud Trial

Former State's Attorney's Testimony Sought in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Feb. 6 (AP).—Robert F. Leach, former State's attorney for Baltimore City, was ordered by Judge William C. Coleman today to appear in Federal court to testify at the Hammerman mail fraud trial.

William Hoffenberg, a Baltimore attorney, testified Leach, at the instance of Samuel L. Hammerman, had forced him to surrender papers through threats of prosecution.

Hammerman and his brother, Herman, are on trial on charges of using the mails in connection with an allegedly fraudulant scheme of real estate developments in eight States.

Hoffenberg said he was general manager of the Hammerman Real Estate Development Interests in Minneapolis in 1922 but resigned to return to Baltimore. He asserted he surrendered the papers "rather than be forced into trouble."

The witness testified salesmen had made misrepresentations to prospective buyers of lots in the development near Minneapolis and Samuel Hammerman had warned him to "stop interferring with the salesmen," when he spoke to them about the misrepresentations.

Holt Campaigner Is Upheld in Suit For Insurance Sum

Welch, W. Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—An insurance company has been required to pay $140 for a broken arm to a man who, it contended in vain, suffered the injury while making a campaign speech for United States Senator-elect Rush D. Holt, of Weston.

Magistrate H. W. Herndon, of Welch, awarded the sum to George W. Stringer, of Newhall, who sued the Provident Life Insurance Co.

Stringer contended he broke his arm in a fall in a coal mine. The insurance company averred that he received the injury while campaigning for Holt by smashing his hand against a fence to emphasize his point in a political argument with a group of men.

Meredith Is Named President of Bank

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Carey L. Meredith, retired lumber dealer of Annapolis, today was installed as president of the Farmers' National Bank, oldest banking institution of Annapolis.

He succeeds L. Dorsey Gassaway, who has been connected with the bank more than 40 years, first as clerk, then cashier. He succeeded to the presidency upon the death of Harry J. Hopkins several years ago. Mr. Gassaway is not severing his connections with the bank as he has been named chairman of the board of directors.

Fairfax Asked To Discontinue Its Health Unit

Has Outlived Usefulness Under Present Set-up, Physicians Say.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, Va., yesterday received a petition signed by the officers and many of the members of the Fairfax County Medical Association asking that the county health unit be abolished.

The petition stated that the local health unit in its present set-up has outlived its usefulness. It recommended the employment of one or more nurses who will work in cooperation with local physicians in maintaining the public health and control of contagious diseases in the home and school. The doctors stated in the petition that they believed that health can be maintained as efficiently and at a lower cost to the county, with more satisfaction to the medical profession.

The officers whose signatures were attached to the petition were Dr. Jessie T. Scott, president; Dr. E. C. Shull, vice president; Dr. Benjamin F. Phillips, second vice president; Dr. F. W. Brooks, treasurer, and Dr. E. S. Waring, secretary.

Herndon Bank Failure.

The county stands to lose several thousand dollars through the failure of the national bank at Herndon, it was reported yesterday. This is the amount in the sinking funds in the bank not covered by the FDIC insurance. The exact amount of these sinking funds the county loses has not been determined officially.

Commonwealth's Attorney Wilson M. Farr presented a resolution concerning the sinking fund deposits which was adopted by the board. The resolution, in the form of a petition to the circuit court of the county, asks that all funds deposited in banks be secured by deposits of Federal, State or municipal bonds in escrow with the treasurer of the county as a guarantee by the banks that the money will be repaid to the county. In addition to this the banks are to pay the county 2½ per cent interest, compounded annually.

Under the present arrangement the banks only deposit one-third the amount of sinking funds on deposit with them and pay 3 per cent interest rate.

Hog Farm Applications.

During the afternoon session hearings on applications for nine permits to operate commercial hog farms were conducted. All unopposed permits were granted and the board decided to make inspection of the farms of J. B. Dowden, Vernon M. Lynch and W. W. Byrne in Falls Church district on next Tuesday before granting permits.

The report of the auditors who conducted an audit of county finances was submitted. This audit has been approved by the State auditor's office. The auditors stated that the accounts of the county were exceptionally well kept under a modern bookkeeping system and gave a true picture of all county finances. The audit covered a two-year period and was made at a cost of $1,250.

Representatives of the FERA appeared before the board and explained the new regional organization and asked cooperation of the supervisors. The supervisors agreed to cooperate so long as the work did not require expenditure of any county funds. The board withdrew from participation in the FERA work last month because the insurance premiums often exceeded the amount of relief disbursed.

The board was notified that the State had returned $3,400.05 to the county, representing one-third of the capitation taxes paid in the county during 1933.

Still Elusive

'Phantom' Burglar Adds Another Victim to List.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Despite the vigilance of authorities, the "phantom" burglar, who has robbed 11 homes here during the last month, continues to operate.

The latest victim is C. Hunter Hyde, whose home was ransacked while the family slept and two pocketbooks containing cash stolen. The empty pocketbooks were found in the rear of the home.

In almost every instance, entrance has been gained either through unlocked windows or by means of a skeleton key.

Judge in Accident But Reaches Court

Keating's Car Overturns; Motorist Picks Him Up.

Denton, Md., Feb. 6 (AP).—An automobile accident today failed to interfere with Associate Judge Thomas J. Keating's duties in chancery court.

Judge Keating's automobile skidded on a slippery highway near Hillsboro today and rolled over in the ditch. The judge, who was riding alone, climbed out of the wrecked machine. He was not hurt.

Judge Keating hailed a passing motorist, who brought him to court here. He was on his way from his home at Centreville when the accident occurred.

Lundborg, Richter Co., Inc., of North Wilkesboro, N. C., was second low at $36,310 and Doyle & Russell, of Richmond, Va., third at $36,989.

$100,000 Loss In 3-Alarm Fire At Bolling Field

2 Men Injured, 3 Planes and 5 Motor Vehicles Are Destroyed.

Fed by 500 gallons of gasoline and fanned by a high wind, fire swept through a Department of Commerce hangar at Bolling Field, Anacostia, D. C., yesterday, destroying three airplanes, five motor vehicles and a large quantity of equipment at an estimated loss of $100,000. Three alarms summoned more than a dozen pieces of fire fighting apparatus.

A mechanic and a test pilot were injured. They were Ernest A. Johnson, 42, of 3511 Davenport street northwest, the mechanic whose repair of a plane radio was blamed for a short circuit, and Private L. P. Porta, a member of the Army post fire company.

Entire Hangar Aflame.

Another mechanic, John Saure, 32, of 2010 Fourteenth street southeast, who was in charge of the hangar, was made slightly ill by smoke. Johnson and Porta were treated at the Naval Air Station dispensary.

Burning gasoline shot the entire hangar through with flame and heavy columns of smoke pouring from windows and doorways were visible throughout southeast Washington within a few minutes after the blaze started.

Mechanics in the building at the time said the plane on which Johnson was repairing the radio literally burst into flames. Johnson was burned on the face before he could scramble free and scorched on the hands in fighting the fire.

Several of the men grabbed fire extinguishers from the walls, but were unable to check the fire's spread. Several others helped the injured Johnson outside. Porta was burned when the post company went into action.

More than 300 gallons of gas were stored in a tank truck inside the hangar and the tanks of autos and planes contained about 200 gallons in addition. Oddly there was no explosion.

Vidal Ship Burned.

More than 500 gallons of gasoline were stored in a subterranean tank outside and a large quantity of oil in a shed close to the flaming building. But a favorable wind blew the fire in another direction and again possible disaster was averted.

Two of the planes in the hangar were new and assigned to Eugene L. Vidal, director of aeronautics in the Commerce Department, and Rex Martin, assistant director. The third was an old ship used principally for Department of Commerce experimental flights.

The tank truck belonged to the department and the automobiles to department employes. In addition there was more than $50,000 worth of airplane parts, engines, tires, propellers and instruments, many of them costly. The interior of the hangar was completely burned out.

In the hangar with Johnson were Carlton L. Norris, a laborer; Emery F. Sheffield, 31, of 1620 Good Hope road, a mechanic; Nelson I. Gaunt, 27, of 143 Third street northeast, mechanic, and Arvid H. Johnson, 44, of 4211 Third street northwest, radio mechanic.

Talent Saves Boy From Sterilization

German Court Refuses to Permit Operation.

The health court refused to grant the local authorities' request for sterilization under the law making possible such drastic action against the insane, chronic criminals, perverts and others. The bench stated the patient possesses such extraordinary talents it must be expected he could bequeath some on his progeny, if any, and sterilization hence might mean greater loss than gain to the community.

Delegates Plan Bill to Destroy 'Racket' in Beer

Measure Would Require $1,000 Fee of State-Wide Distributors.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—A bill designed to eliminate the "wholesale beer racket" in Maryland will be introduced shortly in the Assembly by the Prince Georges County delegation, it was learned here today.

The new legislation, which will take the form of an amendment to the present State liquor law, makes it possible for a dealer wishing a wholesale license to obtain either a license for State-wide use at the present rate of $1,000 a year or a county permit at some reduced amount, probably at about $200 a year.

The measure will define specifically the exact status of a beer distributor and will provide for the elimination of sub-agents. Beer dealers in Prince Georges County have objected strenuously to the latter class of employes, pointing out that firms in Washington and Baltimore are overrunning the county with beer sold by these persons.

It is pointed out that the present license fee of $1,000 is too high for dealers wishing to sell in Prince Georges County and as a result they are evading the law by employing a large group of subagents. The proposed bill will act to break up this practice and to increase the State revenues, it is claimed.

Efforts have been made to divert these license fees to the county, but members of the county delegation explained that this was impossible without a general change in the present State statutes.

Pedestrian Killed When Hit by Truck

C. A. Hammack Struck; Driver Is Fined.

Middletown, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Charles A. Hammack, 59, Middletown restaurant owner, was killed near his home today when he was struck by a truck driven by Oscar Sites, 33, of Franklin, W. Va.

Sites, taken before Trial Justice A. J. Tavenner at Winchester this afternoon, was found guilty of reckless driving. A fine of $10 and costs of $9.25 were imposed. According to testimony, Mr. Hammack was walking south, the truck approaching from the north over the brow of a hill. The left front fender struck the victim, apparently dragging him 20 or 30 feet before the truck could be stopped. One wheel passed over him.

Mr. Hammack is survived by his widow and the following children: Warren Hammack, Misses Isabelle and Anna Neal Hammack, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Evans Kline, of Suffolk, Va., and Charles Hammack, jr., of Middletown. A sister, Mrs. E. M. Kline, resides at Middletown and another, Mrs. Walter Rogers, in Washington.

Fort Near Fall, Paraguay Sees End of Conflict

'Nutcracker' Fighters on Villa Montes, Bolivia's Last Stronghold.

Asuncion, Paraguay, Feb. 6 (AP).—A semicircle of Paraguayan soldiers tightened about Villa Montes today, and so confident was this capital that Bolivia's last major stronghold soon would fall that newspapers began talking about the end of the Chaco War.

"When Paraguay takes possession of Villa Montes and occupies integrally the entire war zone, the war will be terminated for us," El Diario said.

Should Bolivia continue fighting, the newspaper added, "we shall see ourselves obliged to invade its territory."

The Paraguayan press was unanimous in describing the entire Bolivian oil zone as rightfully "part of the Paraguayan Chaco," its claims including the extensive refineries about Camiri.

El Diario said "we will have to impose an indemnity for all damages that have been caused us" upon Bolivia, if the war continues after Paraguayan occupation of the oil zone.

A war ministry announcement that Gen. Jose Estigarribia's ever-advancing troops had occupied Tararire, only 12 miles north of Villa Montes, served to stress the peril in which Estigarribia's "nut cracker" had placed the fort.

The northern jaw of the cracker was apparently based at Tararire after today's conquest, while the southern end reached the Pilcomayo River. The joint, or hinge, of the formation lay to the west, in the Agua Blanca sector, 13 miles from Villa Montes, where fierce fighting was reported.

Beekeepers to Elect Officers on Saturday

Beekeepers from all sections of Maryland will meet in Baltimore Saturday for the annual election of State Association officers, it was announced yesterday at the University of Maryland.

The meeting will be held at the Hotel Rennert with Dr. S. R. Damen, of Towson, in charge. Speakers will include Charles Smith, of Towson, and A. Howard Johnson, of Centerville.

Wife Beater Is Given 10 Days at Hyattsville

Charged with assaulting his wife, Margaret, George D. Moreland, of Riverdale, was sentenced yesterday in the Hyattsville Police Court to ten days in jail.

Wesley Andrew and Mack J. Williams, Berwyn, also were sent to jail in default of $5 fines each for disorderly conduct.

Acting Postmaster Named.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Announcement has been made that John W. Murray has been appointed temporary postmaster at Hampstead, Carroll County, pending a civil service examination for selection of a regular appointee.

Laborite Wins 'Test' District Over Two Foes

Defeats Churchill's Son; Clamor Continues for New Dole Scale.

Liverpool, England, Feb. 6 (AP).—A Labor Party member, J. J. Cleary, won the significant Waventree district by-election today from Conservative opponents, including Randolph Churchill, 23-year-old son of Winston Churchill, former chancellor of the exchequer.

The district, which went heavily Conservative in the 1931 elections, was regarded by politicians as an indicator of public opinion which may decide the policies of the coming general election.

Cleary won with a majority of 1,840 over the national Conservative, James Platt, while Churchill ran third, 5,036 votes behind Cleary. T. Artis Morris, Liberal, forfeited his deposit, polling a total of only 4,208 votes.

"The triumph of the Labor Party," said Cleary, "is a reflection of the tremendous volume of protest which has been aroused throughout the country by the unemployment assistance board regulations."

The victory was the Labor Party's fifteenth in 49 by-elections since the national government came into power.

Clamor Continues For New Dole Scale

London, Feb. 6 (AP).—New scales for the British dole payments were demanded throughout the nation today as protests against nationalization of the system of unemployment assistance continued.

The government's action yesterday in rescinding recently promulgated regulations, which reduced payment under previous scales in some instances, failed to appease many sections of the British Isles.

A number of protest meetings were held, topped by rioting at Sheffield in which nine policemen were injured and 20 to 30 persons arrested when several thousand clashed with police.

Local communities and groups of unemployed in sections where inequalities have been charged—and hardships in some instances officially admitted—demanded adjustment of the scales, which if accepted probably would bring about general increases in the old rates.

Nationalization Plans.

Administration of the dole was formerly local in character, but parliament recently approved the government's nationalization plan under which the new dole board has complete authority.

Coincident with the creation of the board new regulations were arranged which sliced dole payments in some sections and increased them in others.

A general uproar resulted. During recent weeks hundreds of sectional protests, including one demonstration in the public gallery of the House of Commons, have taken place. An estimated 300,000 persons attended various meetings in South Wales alone last Sunday.

Berkeley County Halts Work Relief

Lack of Funds Suspends Activities Indefinitely.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—All work relief in Berkeley County, financed by Federal and State funds, was ordered halted today for an indefinite period by County Administrator Joseph E. Thrasher, following orders from State headquarters at Charleston which said funds were exhausted.

The local director said there was no intimation as to when resumption might be expected.

Budgetary allowances have been reduced in recent weeks, he said, and this week was substantially lower.

Ex-Mayor of Hopewell Aspires to Legislature

Hopewell, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—David A. Harrison, former Mayor of Hopewell, today announced himself as a candidate for the State Senate, subject to the Democratic primary in August. He is a candidate to represent the counties of Prince George, Surry, Sussex and Greensville, and the City of Hopewell.

Senator W. O. Rogers, who has represented the district for several years, has resigned.

Crown Prince's Visit to Hitler Stirs Berlin's Political Circles

German Press Fails to Carry Word About Meeting; Principals Refuse to Comment; Fueher Prepares for "Important Business."

Berlin, Feb. 6 (AP).—Political circles buzzed today over the visit of the former crown prince to Adolf Hitler yesterday, but not a word about the incident appeared in the German press.

The story of the meeting spread like wildfire by word of mouth along the Wilhelmstrasse, in clubs, government offices and newspaper editorial rooms. There was great speculation as to what the meeting signified.

An extremist view was expressed by an old Storm Trooper who exclaimed, "What? Is Hitler looking for a viceroy whose family is later again to become the hereditary royal family?"

From quarters close to both Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Friedrich Wilhelm it was learned there was no thought of reviving the monarchist issue even by implication, and that the former crown prince had not the slightest expectation that the conversation would take such a turn.

However, with the two principals closeted alone and declining to divulge what occurred, there was conjecture of every kind.

The line of reasoning which found the greatest favor was that Hitler, during the first period of his regime, necessarily tried out many whose skill in governing was an unwritten chapter. Many have, in the course of time, been tried and found wanting. Hitler is relegating them to positions of merely making propaganda for his movement.

Hitler today revealed he has canceled all engagements for the next ten days to hold himself free "for important political business."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and weak and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get them two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at druggists. ©1931 C. M. Co.

Inflation Bloc Joins in Fight On Bank Bill

ministration. Previously he had termed the measure a "tentative draft" of the banking bill desired. He explained that the object of sending the bill to the "Hill" was to provide a basis for discussion by congressional banking specialists.

The possibility that the left wing monetary bloc on Capitol Hill would make a fight to insert into the bill provision giving the Government a more rigid control over credit and banking than that proposed was revealed when Senator Bronson Cutting (Republican), of New Mexico, asserted that while the measure was "a step in the right direction, we'll have to go a lot farther than that really to accomplish anything."

Favors Nationalization.

Senator Cutting, a new member of the Banking and Currency Committee and recently named to the Glass sub-committee which last year handled all banking bills, favors nationalization of all banks in the country, starting first with those now in the Reserve system. His argument is that the present economic situation demands a Government monopoly of credit.

The views of the Senator from New Mexico likewise are shared by the tall silvery-haired Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, whose leader of the Senate inflation bloc has been singularly successful in achieving success in his endeavors. Senator Thomas would not go quite as far as Senator Cutting.

Senator Thomas has pending a bill for which he plans to make a fight creating a Government-owned and controlled central bank, brought about by Treasury purchase of the stock of the existing 12 Reserve banks. This bank would be operated by a Federal Reserve Board with powers similar in some aspects to those proposed for the present board in the new banking bill.

Buying Proposal Backed.

Although not much chance is conceded for the success of Senator Thomas' central bank proposal—since many in Capitol Hill believe the same end will be achieved under the Administration bill—one part of his bill has attracted wide support. It is a mandatory provision that the Reserve Board shall expand Reserve Bank deposits by the purchase of United States obligations "until the wholesale-commodity index rises to the approximate level of the year 1926, as ascertained by the Bureau of United States Statistics." The board would be charged with keeping the price index at this level.

A somewhat similar proposal in the Goldsborough bill was passed by the House in 1932 by a vote of 389 to 60. It was blocked in the Senate only after Senator Glass agreed to an expansion of the circulating privilege for national bank notes, which was adopted.

Bitter Clash Is Foreseen.

It became increasingly clear yesterday that the sharpest fight over the banking bill will take place over that kind of a proposal and the provision in the bill to give the Federal Reserve Board control of a committee empowered to formulate the open market operation of the system—the purchase and sale of Government bonds and other obligations.

On behalf of the authority within the Reserve System—not on the Reserve Board, although there is no evidence that the board unanimously favors the proposed bill—it was explained yesterday that the open market committee proposal was the most objectionable in the measure.

It was contended that this proposal actually gave the power to three members of the Reserve Board, named by the President and subject to severe political pressure, to force Reserve banks to buy whatever amount of Government obligations they decreed. Instead of open market operations being used to regulate the flow of credit for the accommodation of commerce, industry and agriculture, it was contended, the tendency would be to exercise the authority for the benefit of Treasury financing.

Those familiar with the Reserve system, who look questioningly at the new banking bill, take the view that such a step is far more objectionable than any other in the bill. They would keep authority over open market operations in the hands of the country's financiers, or at any event, divorced from political pressure and Treasury influence.

Collateral Change Due.

No serious objections came forth regarding the proposal to repeal the specific collateral requirements for Federal Reserve note issues. With Government obligations now, under an emergency act, eligible for both discount and as collateral for note issues, the proposed change only makes permanent what is already in the law and being practiced, it was pointed out.

Publication of the banking bill revealed that Reserve banks would still be required to maintain "reserves in gold certificates of not less than 40 per cent against its Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation."

Instead of the requirement that prime commercial paper in the face amount of currency issued must be given as collateral for Federal Reserve notes, the bill provides that "each Federal Reserve bank may issue Federal Reserve notes which shall be obligations of the United States, secured by a first and paramount lien on all of the assets of such bank."

6-Pound Boy Born To Woman Aboard N.Y. Subway Train

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—When people ask Mrs. Gertrude Rudolph's son where he was born he can say, "In the subway."

He came into the world aboard a northbound Seventh avenue express train today while other passengers wondered why they had been shooed out of the car.

A trainman, noting Mrs. Rudolph's distress, had telephoned ahead for an ambulance, and when the train reached 177th street and Southern boulevard, an interne was waiting to welcome the 6-pound boy.

Police said the father worked in Washington, but didn't know just where.

Navy Awards Oil Contract.

Contracts for 3,495,900 barrels of fuel oil have been awarded by the Navy Department it was stated yesterday. Nine companies shared in the business. The total cost will run around $2,832,571 it was said, and delivery will be made on the West Coast.

Mrs. Atwood Reelected District Y.W.C.A. Head

Mrs. Albert W. Atwood yesterday was reelected president of the District Y. W. C. A. at a special meeting.

Other officers chosen included Mrs. Fred E. Wright, first vice president; Mrs. Herbert E. Day, second vice president; Miss Louise A. Davidson, recording secretary; Miss Margaret R. Fox, treasurer; Miss Mary Jane Winfree, assistant treasurer, and Mrs. William K. Cooper, corresponding secretary.

Tie Vote Holds Work Measure In Senate Body

Plan to Slash $2,000,000 From Bill Wins 10 Members' Support.

The Adams amendment offers a complete substitute for the first 20 lines of the bill, empowering the President to spend the $2,880,000,000 at discretion "to protect and promote the general welfare by providing relief from hardships and alleviation of distress attributable to widespread unemployment and to disorganization of industry and agriculture."

The only positive committee action yesterday was adoption, with but one change, of Democratic amendments agreed to the previous day. These eliminated power for the President to relieve "economic maladjustment," assured a check by the comptroller general and struck out two sections empowering the President to shuffle emergency agencies, "guaranteeing" loans to the needy, and delegating authority to make grants, loans or contracts. The one change returned to the bill provision for acquiring real estate by purchase or eminent domain.

McCarran Amendment.

If the Adams amendment fails this morning, another bitter fight is scheduled on an amendment by Senator McCarran to require payment of prevailing wage rates on proposed work relief projects, instead of the $50 monthly wage the President proposes. If the Adams amendment is agreed to, the McCarran fight may be dropped. Administration friends insist they have the necessary strength to beat both proposals.

Republican members of the committee still are keeping in the background, hoping to avoid a "partisanship" charge. Individual minority members have many amendments to offer, however, notable among which is a proviso that all funds appropriated be spent through existing set-ups.

Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, however, could not withhold comment after announcement that $50,000,000 more has been "found" to continue FERA temporarily.

"Another white rabbit," he said.

a joint patrol of the border. By agreement, members of the Royal Mounted Police accompany American aviators, landing on either side of the line to make arrests. This he considered one of the finest illustrations of cooperation between nations.

Other Holes Unplugged.

But other holes still remain unplugged, the President said, principally the ports of St. Johns, Newfoundland, and St. Pierre, which belongs to France. Only a few days ago, he declared, a ship put in at St. Pierre and transferred, behind screens, a cargo of alcohol which, if it reaches the United States, will cost this Government $3,000,000 in lost revenue.

Newfoundland is now a crown colony of Great Britain, and negotiations are in progress with that government to place restrictions on ship clearances, Mr. Roosevelt said. He added that France has agreed to require landing certificates if the British will do the same at St. Johns.

The President estimated the annual amount of lost revenue because of smuggling from these points off the Labrador coast and other places at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000. Little alcohol gets in from Cuba or Mexico, he said, adding, however, that there are leaks from British Honduras and the Bahama Islands off Florida.

Significance was attached to Mr. Roosevelt's remarks since it was his strongest expression of optimism since the Treasury declared war on bootlegging more than a year ago after repeal. They were received with hope on the part of legal distillers, who pointed out, however, that tax-paid consumption is still suspiciously low when compared with prerepeal figures.

Stimulate Patriotism Of Idle, Booth Urges

Steps to stimulate the patriotism of the millions of unemployed on relief rolls were urged upon President Roosevelt yesterday by Gen. Ballington Booth, of New York, founder and national commander of the Volunteers of America.

"The Government is performing a herculean task in supplying the material needs of these citizens," he declared, leaving the White House, "but we are afraid that to some extent it has neglected the spiritual and patriotic needs."

It Must Be Self-Sustaining.

Secretary Morgenthau's request for amendment of the old-age pensions section of the economic security bill came as a surprise. This measure was drafted after extensive research. The public assumed as a matter of course that it had the indorsement of those responsible for national solvency. Consequently, Mr. Morgenthau's fear that this part of the bill might impose too heavy a burden upon the Treasury arouses considerable apprehension.

There are indications that the President did not realize the deficiencies of the old-age pensions measure when he sent it to Congress. In his accompanying message he approved "compulsory contributory annuities which in time will establish a self-supporting system for those now young and for future generations." But the bill as it stands would not accomplish that purpose. Indeed, the Committee on Economic Security estimated that the Government would have to contribute more than $1,400,000,000 annually to the compulsory old-age insurance fund by 1980.

Mr. Morgenthau's objections to such a tremendous burden on the Treasury are well founded. No element of relief should enter into a system of insurance against old age. The first objective in working out a plan of this sort should be to make it self-sustaining. "We desire," the Secretary of the Treasury says, "to establish this system on such sound foundations that it can be continued indefinitely in the future." To make the plan contingent upon enormous eventual contributions from the Treasury would jeopardize its success from the very beginning.

To put the contemplated compulsory old-age insurance scheme on a sound actuarial basis Mr. Morgenthau believes taxes on pay rolls and earnings must be graduated up to 6 per cent within 12 years. In view of the fact that this tax would come from the same source as unemployment reserves, it may impose a heavy burden upon industry. That angle must be thoughtfully considered. In no circumstances, however, should the cost of this desirable service be camouflaged in the form of obligations against taxpayers of the future.

Calling A Bluff.

President Roosevelt has lost no time in replying to the intemperate statements whereby leaders of organized labor have sought to show that he has been "betrayed" by prominent NRA officials. In letters to the counsel for the A. F. of L., and to its president, Mr. Roosevelt has made it abundantly clear that he is not deceived by this rather fatuous attempt to drive a wedge between him and his responsible subordinates.

The A. F. of L. has overreached itself in endeavoring to act as the only accredited spokesman for all labor, and to establish itself in a comfortable semi-official position where it could obtain special rights without assuming correlative responsibilities. The rebuff it has received, sharply pointed when the President observes that the Automobile Labor Board is responsible to him alone, was invited and merited.

If the national officers of the federation are wise they will diminish their efforts to coerce the Government by threats, and concentrate instead on such reorganizations and constructive policies as will increase the prestige of the A. F. of L., and thereby justify claims which are at present obviously excessive.

Challenge To Hollywood.

To the imposing roster of occupants of the presidential suite at the Congress Hotel in Chicago have now been added the names of Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne. The sumptuous rooms, in which every President since Grover Cleveland has slept, have been entirely renovated for the celebrated backwoods couple. Rococo Louis XVI furniture and ornate gold mirrors bound the young Canadians on every side.

The Dionnes shied a little at the hotel's revolving doors, but took to the elevator like the proverbial duck to water. Elevators they had seen in Toronto. In the course of their stay they will visit a night club, taste their first champagne, visit landmarks and appear in a "homey" sketch at several vaudeville houses. Mrs. Dionne has expressed a special desire to visit the toy and infant's wear sections of the large department stores. She would not be a typical mother if she did not take a little something home to the children—all ten of them.

The Dionnes' theatrical agent is jubilant over the number of prospective bookings he has received for them. Personal appearance offers continue to pour in from Boston, New York, Detroit, and less cultured centers. There is only one fly in the booking ointment. The agent regretfully states that he has not yet heard from the Pacific Coast. It may be that he is a trifle premature in his worries. On the other hand, it may be that the movie city is a bit piqued at the quintuplets' parents. For, up to now, Hollywood alone has enjoyed all the credit for colossal production.

Amending The Reserve Act.

Many of the provisions of the banking bill of 1935 will commend themselves to students of banking theory, as well as to those who regard the proposed changes as an improvement over the present loose administrative system of divided responsibility.

Centralized control over open-market policies will definitely place responsibility for the conduct of such operations upon the Federal Reserve Board. Its powers to change the reserve requirements of member banks will also be a great aid to credit control. On the other hand, the liberalized provisions regarding paper eligible for discount are merely a realistic acknowledgment of the fact that prohibitions upon unwise credit expansion, which these tests of eligibility were expected to afford, have proved to be unavailing in emergencies.

Similarly, the provisions contained in the banking bill for elimination of certain collateral requirements for Federal Reserve note issues are no longer of much importance, since the original purpose of making these note issues responsive to changes in commercial credit demands has been frustrated. Today Federal Reserve notes have become an inelastic type of currency, largely secured by Government obligations. Under these changed conditions, much can be said for giving the Federal Reserve Board greater and more clearly-defined control over the expansion of credit and currency. The supposedly automatic control features of the law are demonstrably ineffective.

Moreover, such concentration of responsibility has the added advantage of making it possible to assign responsibility for mistakes—a fact that may assist better administration, and to a certain extent act as a deterrent to political interference. Certainly there are excellent precedents for concentrating power in the hands of the Federal Reserve Board, since the central bank managements of many other countries operate successfully with relative freedom from the legal prohibitions and restrictive system of checks and balances that have hampered the Reserve Board.

Against such arguments in favor of the new banking bill it must be remembered that present conditions in this country are far from normal. The Government is committed to a lavish spending program which has already brought about a dangerously large concentration of Federal securities in the portfolios of the country's banks. Reporting member banks now hold over $7,000,000,000 of United States obligations exclusive of obligations fully guaranteed, or about $2,000,000,000 more than at the same time a year ago. Meantime, the volume of their other (commercial) loans has declined and more billions of Government securities will undoubtedly find lodgment in the banks during coming months. Under such circumstances the Administration might be disposed to employ a strengthened Federal Reserve Board, armed with authority to compel the Federal Reserve banks to buy Government bonds, as an agency to further its own ends, with little regard for the needs of private business.

It may be argued that the financing program must be put through in any case, either with the assistance of the banking system, or through cruder forms of inflation. However, there is no denying the danger to the banks of a policy of deficit financing that is causing the resources of all the banks to become increasingly immobile and less available for private use. The process of pumping Government issues into the banks is nevertheless likely to be easier, and opposition is less likely to develop before it is too late, if some measure of authority remains vested in nonpolitical banking managements to resist dictation from above.

While it may seem logical to recognize the exigencies of the present situation and legislate accordingly, logic is not always the safest guide to action in matters of banking policy. If public confidence in the banking system and in the public credit is disturbed or destroyed by legislation passed in a time of distress and bewilderment, great damage may be done even if the laws themselves bring no startling innovations. That is apparent from the rather hysterical character of the comment upon the latest banking proposals, which are primarily of an administrative character.

Otherwise, the provisions for changing the basis of note issue, of eligibility, etc., largely sweep away certain fetishes more honored in the breach than in the observance. Nevertheless, they have a psychological value and it is doubtful whether anything is gained by public acknowledgment that they have ceased to be of importance in the eyes of the authorities.

Finally and most important, if spending is not curbed, inflation is inevitable in some form. But the dangers are mitigated if the banking system is divorced from political control. Concentration of power in the hands of central banking authorities whose positions depend upon the wishes of dispensers of patronage is always dangerous. It is particularly so in case of the Reserve Board. For that reason, not because the specific provisions of the bill are breath-taking innovations, its introduction at this time arouses grave concern.

For The Good Of The Service.

It is worthy of note that the present shake-up in the AAA traces back, as does much of the serious administrative disorganization in Washington, to the patronage activities of Postmaster General Farley. The elimination of the post of general counsel for the AAA, now merged with the office of solicitor for the Department of Agriculture, indicates pretty clearly that this position was always superfluous. But Farley blocked the efforts of Wallace and Tugwell to put a man of their choosing in as solicitor, with the result that a new post was created for Jerome Frank, who leaves now the post is abolished.

If Mr. Frank had been occupied by the duties of solicitor for the department he might have had less spare time for those energetic policy-making activities which have now eased him out. But, like others in high position in Mr. Wallace's department, he has throughout been able to concern himself more with the development of a new philosophy of government than with humdrum administrative tasks. It is in no small part due to Jerome Frank that the Department of Agriculture has won for itself the curious distinction of being first a laboratory of political science, and some way after a technical administrative agency.

Dr. Frederic C. Howe, as consumers' counsel, has been equally energetic in putting the formulation of policy ahead of its administration. In his case, as in that of Mr. Frank, what has happened was inevitable. The time was bound to come when those saddled with the real responsibility would have to crack down on those whose chief interest lies in the promotion of interesting theories of social evolution.

It has been the chief weakness of Secretary Wallace as an administrator that he so hates to interfere with the happy little concepts of his philosopher subordinates. Indeed, in the spinning of theories Mr. Wallace has given a lead, rather than any overt discouragement, to his principal lieutenants. So, in the upshot, it was Administrator Chester C. Davis, of the AAA, who was forced to take the drastic steps necessary "to make the administration a more efficient operating unit of the Department of Agriculture."

Over a year ago that revealing volume, "The New Dealers," unwittingly forecast the row which has now somewhat cleared the sultry atmosphere in the Department of Agriculture. After describing Jerome Frank, this book observed that "in sharp antithesis to this feverish legal intelligence is the calm sea-level of Chester C. Davis . . . a very practical man, well-educated and with a disciplined mind and no eccentricities."

Isolated between patronage appointees on the one side and "feverish" intelligence on the other, the practical, disciplined administrators in the New Deal have had no easy job to fulfill their tremendous responsibilities. When they come out of a struggle on top it is cause for congratulation. The absolute prerequisite of good government is careful, conscientious administration. And in the New Deal careful administration by underlings has been all too obviously subordinated to a political theorizing which is not the most essential function of a valuable civil servant.

A Valuable Precedent.

Appointment of Dr. George C. Ruhland as health officer for the District establishes a precedent for which the Board of Commissioners deserves warm congratulations. In several respects the project of securing an eminently capable public health executive for this post has been difficult. But each obstacle has been overcome with tact, courage and perseverance.

Not only did the Commissioners eliminate political considerations in making this appointment, in defiance of the patronage hunters. They also took advantage of expert advice. They have set a standard that will challenge future boards. Indeed, the present board will not find it easy to maintain throughout its dealings with personnel the high principle which has been set up in this case.

There is some disappointment that the position did not go to a District physician. Because of the technical nature of its duties, however, and the necessity of obtaining the services of an experienced man who can effectively reorganize the local Health Department, there can be no valid criticism of the Commissioners on this score.

Organizations which are interested in reserving local positions for local residents may well concentrate their attention upon the attempts of Congressmen to put favored constituents into District positions. In this instance they will have the whole-hearted support of the entire community.

Razzing The Roundsmen.

The little boy who defined "ingenuity" as "a quality peculiar to the American Injun" could never have had experience of French mobs. All mobs are brutal and, therefore, they are generally stupid. Not so French mobs. The Parisian apaches used to scatter marbles for the discomfort of mounted police. Now, according to the cables, the latest rioters in provincial France are displaying ingenuity worthy of a better cause. They have razzed the gendarmes by studding clubs with razor blades.

Here is not only an effective weapon. Here is also evidence of civilization's refining influence upon barbarity. A club decorated in this modern mode is an esthetic advance from the spiked mace of other days and far more humane, unless our memory of French razor blades is even more dulled than the articles themselves.

Besides, like the Grand Canyon of the Arizona, the improvisation provides a thought-provoking contribution to the perplexing problem of how, other than by ceaseless patronage of the Pullmans, to dispose of used razor blades.

Two Miles Of Dogwood.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The suggestion of the Potomac Palisades Garden Club that the white dogwood be used as the main feature in the landscaping of the center parking of the wide double boulevard that has recently been made out of Conduit road deserves the indorsement of all Washington residents, for several reasons.

In the first place, the dogwood is a native American tree, and the demonstration here in the Nation's Capital that this country can furnish a spectacle that would rival the beautiful Japanese cherry blossoms would seem to be quite worth while. In the second place, not only is the dogwood attractive during the period when it flaunts its unique and picturesque white banners, in April and May, but the autumn foliage, which usually turns early, shows brilliant and varied coloring, and the bright red berries hang on far into the winter before they are eaten by the birds.

More than that, in July the buds for the next season's bloom begin to form, and by fall they have become fat and round, about the size of a small pea. These gray buds stand out conspicuously on stiff stems from the tips of the branchlets all winter, unchanged until spring stirs them to expand. The tree is thus of interest at all seasons of the year. It is said that "no other tree of our flora enables the observer so easily to study the life history of its flowers and fruit."

The double boulevard extends for 2 miles, from Reservoir road to the District line. This stretch, planted with dogwood, though lacking the river scenery of Potomac Park, would in a few years become a worthy added attraction for visitors, as well as a satisfaction to Washingtonians.

Geography For Gertrude.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why do you encumber your pages with such drivel as the article by Gertrude Stein, in The Post of February 3? I'll not discuss her apparent unwillingness or inability to write understandable or decent English. I will confine myself to analyzing her reported misstatements of fact, and will suggest that her conclusions, based upon such misstatements can be of no value.

First, she states that only the United States and Turkey have capitals in other than their largest cities. In matter of fact, Barcelona is larger than Madrid; Antwerp excels Brussels (I think), and Amsterdam and Rotterdam both surpass The Hague. Geneva is larger than Berne, Sidney and Melbourne surpass Canberra, Wellington and perhaps Christchurch surpass Auckland. Valparaiso is larger than Santiago, or was until recently, and Montreal would make several Ottawas.

Next, she says of our States, "There may be one or two exceptions," to the rule that the capital is not in the largest city. As a matter of fact, 12 or perhaps 13 of our States have the capitals in the largest cities, and in about 18 others the capital city is a very large and important place, relatively. G. W. EDGERLY.

"A Halt From The Shoulder."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since entry of the United States into the World Court has been squelched by a decisive vote of the Senate, it is time for us to forget any allegiance to the welfare of European nations and think about our own affairs.

We have been acting as a good Samaritan to Europe since 1914, fathering them, giving of our money and resources without stint, and have taken their sneers and cold shoulders ever since.

It is time we took care of ourselves. Enact a protective tariff that will keep out their cheap junk that is being dumped on our markets, closing our factories, owing to the fact that we can not compete against their low production costs. This would allow our factories and industries to open and produce from our raw materials, which are now going to waste, more than enough to fill our wants, with wages commensurate with our costs of living.

Enforce the Monroe Doctrine, tighten up on immigration, stop the influx of Europeans from entering our country for any purpose, and deport those undesirables that have wormed their way to our shores and have caused most of our troubles in fomenting dissatisfaction toward our form of government.

It is time for us to think of ourselves, for it is certain that the selfish nations of Europe will use us for a continuing good thing, unless we call a halt, and a good hard halt right from the shoulder.

Farther Than Radio.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The members of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War have asked me to express to you their appreciation of your generous cooperation in sending Mrs. Elizabeth Young to cover the tenth conference on the Cause and Cure of War. Recent events have shown how great is the need for education of public opinion—it is trite to say that the press reaches farther even than the radio in its effect.

The general opinion of the delegates is that this tenth conference was indeed a fitting anniversary celebration. In this result we feel your help has been of great value.

Against Entanglements In Mexico

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The resolution introduced by Senator Borah to have the Senate conduct an inquiry into "religious persecution and antireligious agitation in Mexico" is one which is fraught with the gravest dangers. It should be repudiated because of its confusion of the religious situation of the times and the international animosity it will create.

As a liberal clergyman who is committed to freedom toward all attitudes and beliefs in religion, I recognize with all other churchmen that the present policy of the government of Mexico toward the freedom of religion is unwise and for the best interests of both religion and government should be mitigated. At the same time, all people must recognize that there is abroad in the world today a revolt against institutional religion, which is not confined to any one sect or faith.

Restrictions have been placed upon the institution of religion in many nations. Mohammedanism in Turkey; the Greek Orthodox Church in Russia; Protestantism in China, and Roman Catholicism in Spain and Mexico have all come under the ban or restriction of those governments, and in each case it is true to say that such action has been caused by the excesses, the ignorance and the intolerance of a great part of those institutions of religion in those nations. There has been no revolt in any part of the world against the spiritual concept of religion, and Christians in China and in Turkey are able to grow into every spiritual concept of their religious faith without molestation.

But there has been a revolt against those institutions of religion which have sought power for themselves and have attempted to hold back the cultural and social progress of the people. The institutions of religion—Mohammedan, Catholic, Protestant and Greek—have in some of their parts and forms been both selfish and reactionary and have resisted cultural and social progress.

The inevitable result has been to create a revolt which undoubtedly has gone further than wisdom and tolerance can finally permit, but such is the inevitable psychological reaction. The necessity which confronts the institutions of religion today is not to protest against the revolt, but, first, to humbly and contritely ask what has caused it. When Mohammedans and Christians will honestly and fearlessly confess the sins of ignorance, intolerance and selfishness, which have so often prostituted the spiritual concepts of religion, it will then be time to state the sins of the civil governments.

REV. RUSSELL J. CLINCHY.
Washington, Feb. 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your publication on February 2 of Jacques D'Armand's dispatch from Mexico is before me. I doubt very much if Villareal is in Mexico at all, still less anywhere near the City of Mexico.

Unless I am very much mistaken, he was the revolutionary governor of Monterey in 1915, occupying his headquarters in the finest residence in the city, confiscated from its wealthy owner, a lady of the highest respectability and standing. I had the honor of knowing many of the revolutionary leaders. Many of them are of fine character and patriotic impulses. But I have to make an exception of Villareal. He was one of the most objectionable of the revolutionary body. He signalized his control of Monterey by many acts of cheap tyranny, one of which was the deliberate destruction of one of the oldest Catholic churches in the city.

To have this individual now show up as one of the leaders of the clerical party gives me a pain in the neck. The national school system of Mexico is one of the most advanced of any country in the world. The leaders of education in Mexico give Dr. John Dewey, of Columbia University, credit for its foundation and inspiration, and Dr. Dewey is one of the world's greatest educators. The leaders of the educational movement in Mexico are establishing schools in thousands of places where no schools existed before the revolution and are determined that these schools shall be free from clerical influence.

I am not attempting to tell the whole story, but Mexico is entitled to conduct her own affairs.

The Pot Impressionist

"Gentleman" Adventurer

Post Office, Thrsday.

ONE of the Column's most able advocates—Mr. Harmon Drury, to wit—thinks that, in our recent Pocahontas discurse, we were a trifle too hard on Capt. John Smith. Mr. Drury suggests, that, if we will refer t all the Captain's records of his reckless career, we shall have a better opinion.

Well, we had referred to those records long before we referred to Matoaca-Pocahontas, Ad. though a fresh reference doesn't alter our opinion in the episode of the Powhatan's daughter, we indeed do feel—as we always have felt.

That, compared to his own accounts of his own life Anthony Adverse "is as moonlight unto sunlight and as water unto wine;"

And that those accounts are today shamefully little known.

* * *

However, even at a time when they were more general familiar, John Fiske remarked how Smith was "one of those persons about whom historians are apt to lose their tempers." The very date of his birth is disputed; the parish records of his baptism are not clear as to whether that sacrament was administered in 1579 or 1580.

* * *

Nevertheless, near England's Lynn, he was born into the stormy period between the massacre of St. Bartholomew and the defeat of the Armada. He must have been about 4 when William the Silnt was assassinated; it was only 19 years after Smith's death that Charles I lost his head. An age of transition: its spirit shaped the existence of this son of yeoman parents, tenants of a copyhold farm under Lord Willoughby de Eresk, who bequeathed the boy "competent means" which he, "no being able to manage, little regarded."

John was apprentied to merchant Thomas Sendal, and Sendall's ships voyaged every ocean, protected by full complements of cannon and musketry. John couldn't wait to lean the routine of mercantile life asore; because Master Sendall "did not presently send him to sea" he ran away.

First he called on his guardians in London. They, more regarding his estate than him, gave him 10 shillings to be rid of him. It was a moment when the French King Henry was at peace with the League; John joind Lord Willoughby's sons, Robrt and Barty, at Orleans.

* * *

It is certain that, during the four years following, until he was 20 years old, Smith had large experience as a soldier in the ranks on the Continent. Then, for awhile, he did seek rest. He retired to Scotland and "a pavillion of green boughs in a little woody pasture" with a horse, a servant, a lance and two books: Macchavelli's "Art of War" and the meditations of Marcus Aurelius! But his could not endure. Soon he was off upon freebooting expeditions and soon in arms against the Turk.

Such was the training that led him, in 1604, to London for the campaign of propaganda which ended in his voyage for the colonization of Virginia. . .

* * *

Smith has been charged with deserting Jamestown. This seems hardly fair. For much of the decade between his return to England and his death in 1631, he sought the royal favor for permission to "try again." Once he was within an ace of getting 20 ships for that purpose. Unfortunately, a contrary wind blew through his monarch's court. Smith, always homeless, had to pass his last ten years, not in his early role of adventurer, but in the character of an unsuccessful pleader.

Perhaps posterity profited by that. At all events, it profited so long as it read what John Smith wrote—and it can profit again if it will only again turn to those volumes.

Because it was then that Smith seriously took up the goosequill. He used it as a means to regain the use of the sword. He wrote of what he had done largely in order to get leave for further exploits. This end, as we have seen, was not attained. Yet nobody who loves stories of adventure will say that the books were failures.

To all such readers we commend the two volumes of Smith's "True Relation," his "General History of Virginia," his "Accidence for Young Seamen"—the first sea grammar ever written—his "True Travels of Captain John Smith," even his "Advirtisements for the Inexperienced."

* * *

So you see that, after all, we do think well of the Captain—in certain respects.

But we also think that his behavior to Pocahontas leaves something to be desired.

* * *

"The milk you left at our house this morning," said our big brother, "was sour."

"But," asked the accused, "how was it ozzerwise?"

* * *

Eastman Report Hits Shorter Railroad Day

Coordinator Indorses Dismissal Compensation to Aid Displaced Employes.

By Anna P. Youngman.

IN his third and most significant report dealing with transportation legislation, Coordinator Eastman takes a strong stand against proposals to shorten the working day as a means of providing positions for superfluous railway labor. He states that the railroad industry today offers about one-half the opportunities for work which it afforded in 1923. To institute a four-hour day as a means of reemploying this displaced labor is obviously impossible, he maintains. The roads could not derive enough income from any source to give their employes a decent livelihood on such a limited working basis.

Nevertheless, Mr. Eastman is not disposed to take a complacent attitude toward problems created by the wholesale dismissal of workers. Even during the prosperous years of the twenties railway labor was being displaced so rapidly that a serious unemployment problem resulted for those immediately affected. Adjustments take time under the most favorable conditions and the active working life of a man is relatively brief. Hence the question of providing transitional relief in addition to retirement pensions for those who are the victims of rapid industrial changes that displace large numbers of workers is of especial concern to the railways.

The Eastman report is conspicuous for its ability to see and present lucidly both sides of the question created by problems of technical advance: that of the railways and that of the workers. The railroads, for instance, must reduce costs and improve the quality of their service in order to attract new business. That necessitates further economies in labor as well as other outlays, as a means of improving the credit of the roads and enabling them to secure the capital that they require.

THE report states positively that the widely held belief that such reductions of expenses could be avoided if railroad fixed charges were materially scaled is not correct. Fixed charges, it is said, are less than one-third of the total of even present subnormal operating expenses. Moreover, Mr. Eastman has the temerity, even in these days in which concern is expressed almost exclusively for the plight of debtors, to suggest that a reduction in fixed charges is not a real saving if it deprives investors of returns to which they are entitled, when railroads are not technically insolvent. And debt reduction through receiverships and reorganizations damages the credit of the roads which must pay a fair return if they are to rely upon private credit support. These are commonplace observations, but it is surprising how frequently they are lost to sight by those who oppose efforts to achieve necessary operating economies through reductions in wage costs.

The efforts of the coordinator to effect substantial savings by cutting wage costs have been blocked so far by the provisions of the emergency railroad transportation act of 1933 which provides that all employes who were serving in May of that year shall have "an absolute protection against loss of employment or demotion by reason of any action taken pursuant to the authority of this title." As this restrictive provision expires next June, the coordinator is concerned to know what, if any, protection should be given workers against dismissal. The record of the industry in recent years indicates the need for some sort of protective system, even in good times when alternative opportunities are open to displaced railway labor. Today, of course, dismissals are frequently a crushing blow to men who may have spent years in the service and be unfitted for other occupations that would yield comparable rewards.

MR. EASTMAN thoroughly canvasses the nonlabor saving economies open to the roads. In the aggregate, he says, the outstanding capital is well below the original cost of the properties. Moreover, the interest rate on the debt is not high, averaging only about 4½ per cent. Consequently, the railroad debt is not considered to be a means of exacting extortionate charges, although it is a handicap to the roads because it entails a fixed charge which must be met if insolvency or bankruptcy is to be avoided.

The financial difficulties of the railroads make it all the more imperative to increase their net earnings by all possible means. Consequently, the process of economizing in utilization of labor must go on. A six-hour day, for instance, without reduction in earnings from the eight-hour day would, it is estimated, cost the railroads about $640,000,000 in a reasonably normal year, providing employment for from 300,000 to 350,000 persons. Such a shortening of the working day would defeat the purpose of its advocates no doubt since the financial burden would increase the incentive to introduce labor-saving devices and further unstabilize the industry.

It is undoubtedly somewhat difficult to reconcile this clear perception of the unfortunate consequences of adding to operating expenses by retaining superfluous workers with demands that the railroads make provision for dismissal wages in addition to retirement annuities. But it may properly be claimed that an industry "affected with a public interest"—one, too, which presents an aggravated case of the maladjustments created by technological unemployment — should be held responsible for assuming part at least of the social costs or liabilities due to changes in operating methods.

THE coordinator, therefore, indorses a proposal for dismissal compensation to mitigate the hardships of employes displaced by labor-saving improvements.

Admittedly, the assumption of such responsibility will make it more difficult for the roads to finance and maintain new equipment and improvements. The increased revenues resulting from better service and heavier traffic will, of course, be reduced by any and all payments of the sort. The argument in favor of dismissal payments, however, is based partly on humanitarian considerations and to a certain extent on the social and political expediency of the policy. Ruthless displacement of workers would, it is pointed out, not only impair the morale of the operating forces but react unfavorably upon public opinion.

The system of displacement allowances as outlined would be difficult to operate, no doubt, since it contemplates making a distinction between those who lose their positions because of labor-saving improvements and because of permanent reductions in traffic. To avoid confusion in administration it is proposed to limit dismissal compensation to those losing their positions as a result of large projects involving consolidations, mergers, and unification of facilities which require governmental authorization or relaxation of restrictions, or else are promoted or stimulated by the Government.

Such a proposal would to some extent weaken labor's opposition to desirable changes in technique. However, it will not appease those who are convinced that the remedy for unemployment lies in progressive shortening of the working day not only for rail labor but for other classes of workers. If a dismissal wage should enable the roads to make some headway against the propaganda spread by those who favor costly, impracticable and self-defeating proposals for improving the condition of the working classes, it has much to commend it, apart from its obvious justice.

Breakfast in Miami.

Waiter—Good morning. Here's the menu, sir.

Elmer (studying)—I guess I'll have an order of Swipes McGurk and a side of Fu Manchu.

Waiter—Oh, I beg pardon, sir . . . My mistake . . . I handed you a dog race program instead of a menu.

Elmer—I thought something was wrong. Have you any combination breakfasts here?

Waiter—Yes. That Number Five is very good. And it's very lucky, too, sir.

Elmer—Lucky?

Waiter—Yes, sir. I had five-five in the daily double last night and it almost won. Phanton Wolf just got nipped at the wire.

Elmer—I was at the dogs last night, too. I had Sands of Pleasure and Jimmy Squeers. Both out of the eight box.

Waiter—Those eight-box dogs are a good bet, but the fours were running last night. I got $18.60 for Lou Ella Step in the sixth.

• • • •

Elmer (trying to get his breakfast)—I guess I'll have a glass of orange juice and . . .

Waiter—I had Lou Ella Step last week. She paid $26.10 for place. She's a Nick Weron dog.

Elmer—A glass of orange juice and two four-minute Ella Steps . . . I mean two four-minute eggs.

Waiter—I can give you a good thing in the fourth at the Miami Beach oval tonight, sir. Rusty Parton to win. He's a cinch.

Elmer (impatiently) — Waiter, please! A glass of Rusty Parton and four two-minute good things . . .

• • • •

Waiter—Do you ever play the horses?

Elmer—I'm going out this afternoon.

Waiter—Our chef has a sure thing in the third. I'll call him out! Oh, chef!

Elmer—Don't bother. I'd like my breakfast, if you don't mind.

Waiter—No bother at all. (To the chef, who comes out of the kitchen): Tony, what was that gee-gee in the third today?

• • • •

Elmer (pleadingly to the waiter) —I'm really awfully hungry. Could I get something to eat here?

Waiter—Oh, that's right. You said something about breakfast, didn't you?

Elmer—Yes. I was afraid you had forgotten.

Waiter (very abruptly)—It's a hunch! I tell you it's a hunch!

Elmer—What's a hunch?

Waiter—Forgotten Lady in the seventh at Biscayne! She did the five-sixteenths course in 34 last week!

Elmer (thumping the table with a show of great exasperation)—Lissen here! All I want in here is breakfast. Have you got my order or not?

Waiter (going over the order)—One glass of daily doubles, two medium boiled Forgotten Ladies and a cup of hunches with one lump of Hialeah. Very good, sir!

Elmer (now gone quite cuckoo, too)—And remember! It must be a dry track!

"Dear Bill."

THE FULL import of the gulf between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. William Green, American Federation of Labor head, became known yesterday when it was learned that as late as December the President was addressing Green as "Dear Bill." When it is understood the President is not now addressing him at all it can be appreciated just how far apart the men have become.

BARGERON.

Indeed, Mr. Roosevelt won't pay any attention to Mr. Green's importunities to be permitted to come to the White House and talk with him, Mr. Green being satisfied apparently that all differences can be ironed out.

• • • •

The "Dear Bill" letter might be said to have been in the nature of a Christmas present. It was sent only a few days before Christmas and dwelt with the resolution passed by the federation at its annual convention demanding the scalp of Mr. S. Clay Williams, of the NRA. The federation said at the time that Mr. Williams, being a big employer in the tobacco business who had not accepted a code, was hostile to organized labor.

Nobody ever paid any attention to whether Mr. Roosevelt replied to the resolution or not. Someone brought it up yesterday and Mr. Roosevelt said oh, yes, and would his stenographer please bring him a copy of the letter he had sent to Bill.

"Dear Bill" was informed by this letter that the President wasn't going to pay any attention to the federation's resolution and furthermore he had full confidence in Mr. Williams. The carbon copy of the letter didn't show, but it was probably signed "F. D. R." or something just as informal.

• • • •

One wonders why Mr. Green kept up his attack after getting such a letter as this. Admittedly the market for presidential letters and presidential autographs has dropped appreciably since Mr. Roosevelt came in because of his informality. The stamp collectors say Jim Farley has also knocked the props from under the value of stamps.

But a "Dear Bill" ought to have some value. In a city where homes and restaurants are decorated with autographed photographs of big men it would seem that Mr. Green would have thrown out his chest in appreciation of his treasure. It would get him a good write-up in the Star when he dies. Mr. Green, confidante of big men, who had a "Dear Bill" letter from the President — that's what his obituary would say.

• • • • •

Now, he knows he never got any such letter from Mr. Coolidge or from Mr. Hoover. They used to appoint men to commissions, the presidential counterpart of the Kentucky Governors' colonels. Mr. Green undoubtedly has been named to many of these commissions in his day, to the commission on making the fireside more homey, the commission to discourage the destruction of wild life and make report thereon, the commission on better and fewer babies and so on.

But this is the first President from whom he has ever got a "Dear Bill" letter and he knows it.

One wonders if the man can't be satisfied. Was his purpose in keeping up the harassment to get more letters of the kind? Was it his hope to work up a series?

Well, it just goes to show that things can be pushed too far. He hasn't received any more "Dear Bill" letters. He can't now even go to the White House. Just think of it, he who was the recipient of such an intimate letter.

And the impression is that if any further correspondence passes between him and the President it won't be addressed so affectionately. The next letter will probably start off, not "Dear Bill," but "Dear Mister William." Then Mr. Green would have a rare treasure, indeed.

J. Leslie Mitchell Bristles With Argument That Maya Culture Came From Mother-Asia.

By Theodore Hall.

J. LESLIE MITCHELL, British archeologist, author of "Earth Conquerors," author of Scottish novels under the pen-name of Grassic Gibbon, now walks into the field of Maya history with many a testy word for those who preceded him. "The Conquest of the Maya" (Dutton, $3.75) has a now-it-can-be-told air which will irritate the specialists who are competent to disagree, but which will please the lay-reader for its sheer spirit.

With a fiction-writer's delight in action and color, Mr. Mitchell recreates the scene of the first and highest Amerindian culture—the triangle of dense forest at the base of the peninsula of Yucatan. Here, in the cities of the old Maya empire, and farther north on the peninsula in the seat of the "new" Maya empire, there flourished from 424 A. D. (first inscribed date) to 1542 (fall of Zotuta, last of the great Maya cities, before the Spaniards) the dark and bloody but remarkably intellectual culture of this enigmatic people.

Setting out to explain them, Mr. Mitchell spanks H. G. Wells and others of "the old school of historians" who believe we can never understand a people so superficially alien to us. Mr. Mitchell declares that there is "a norm of human sensitivity and behavior," and supports it with argument very similar to Shylock's "Do we not bleed?" And to prove it in action, he hypothesizes a typical day in a Maya city with slaves, high priests, young bloods and children acting out their moods of fear, boredom, exuberance, hate, etc., as understandably as in a novel. The chapter is a curiously interesting tour de force of reconstruction.

Of the 1,000 or so years of Maya blooming, of their architecture and calender and handicraft, of wars and decay and subjugation by Europeans, Mr. Mitchell makes a vigorous narrative and exposition. But the crucial section of his book is that in which he sets out to answer the great and basic question—where did Maya culture come from?

NOW students of these matters line up on two sides. One believes that each little pocket of primitive man, after the general distribution over the earth had taken place, evolved its own peculiar and isolated culture. If we find (and we do) a resemblance between Patagonia and Indo-China, for example, that is to be explained by the trend and limitations of the human mind. It is "natural" to have a Sun God, say, and "natural" that axes should look alike.

For this school Mr. Mitchell has only the deepest scorn. The resemblance, he says, can be explained by nothing else but a diffusion of inventiveness or culture from definite points on the earth. One instance—a highly sepcialized kind of tool-chipping, called the Solutrean, appeared in France, Australia and South America. Independent evolution can not account for that, "for there are scores of methods of chipping tools on an equal scale of efficiency with the Solutrean." Hence Mr. Mitchell argues for the migration of such ideas.

At base he agrees with Prof. G. Elliot Smith (who in turn writes a laudatory preface for the volume) that human civilization first seen in agriculture, arose in the Nile Valley about 5000 B. C. and spread from there over the world.

TO bring the matter down to cases, Mr. Mitchell declares that Maya culture was not evolved independently by the primitive Amerindians—it was an importation by Asiatic wanderers who came to Central America about 2,000 or 3,000 years ago, who interbred with the primitives already there, and who taught them the new culture suddenly and swiftly.

How could one tell that? By a resemblance, far beyond anything chance could produce, between the culture and remains of Asia and Yucatan.

So Mr. Mitchell brings forward his evidence, and it is an amusingly embarrassing list to the upholders of independent evolution. The Maya elephant-headed Rain god, Shac, can be nothing else but an overseas change of the elephant-headed Gana-Pati, son of the Hindu god, Shiva. The early Indra has its counterpart in the Maize Spirit of the Maya. And what could the monkey-faced god of the Mayas be but a replica of the Hindu monkey-god, Hanuman?

• • • •

NOR are these all the parallels. Maya stone work holds a recognizable Gorgon's head; the winged disk of ancient Egypt copied at one remove; the Babylonian siggurat, or stepped, pyramidal tower with shrine at the top; a great earth monster which is obviously the makara, legendary beast, part crocodile, part elephant, of India; and even, sculptured at Copan, an obvious Buddhist priest with begging bowl.

In the same ruined city—in the midst of the Yucatan jungle, mind you—there is a monument which bears sculptured elephants, with the flattened head of the Indian elephant, carrying unmistakable mahouts complete with turbans and goads! The carving is pictured in the book and you can judge for yourself. As a matter of fact, those perplexing elephants no longer exist at Copan—"bandits" have mutilated them badly in recent years. Sardonic to the hilt, Mr. Mitchell observes: "Is it too much to suspect that the "bandits," refreshed by this exercise, have now returned to their more orthodox and respectable archaeological pursuits?"

That seems a bit thick. Unpleasant enough is the notion that theorists would go so far, impelled by a fanatic patriotism for the New World, as to remove evidence that our most remarkable native culture was but a sea-voyager's memory of Cambodia and the Valley of the Ganges.

$300 Verdict Returned In $800 Damage Action

Frederick, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—A verdict of $300 was returned by a jury in the Circuit Court yesterday in a suit brought by a local coal company and the Travelers Insurance Co., against State Senator O. F. Kweet and Frank Kweet and Mable D. Kweet, of Ohio, for $800 damages.

The plaintiffs alleged that while a truck belonging to the coal company was descending Big Savage Mountain near Frostburg, last May the automobile of the defendants crashed into the rear of the truck damaging it to the extent of $360. The insurance company paid for the repairs and then sued the defendants for the amount so paid and a claim for the loss of the use of the truck. Five witnesses testified for the plaintiffs, but no witnesses appeared for the defendants. The jury reached a verdict within half an hour.

Questions Of Usage

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

A CORRESPONDENT, who signs himself flatteringly "A Hopeless Addict," asks me some questions, which may be of some general interest.

How does one pronounce secretary, dictionary, etc.?

Now this brings up the whole matter of the secondary accent—and in the United States this is largely a matter of choice and of good taste. One of the most noticeable differences between British and American pronunciations is in such words as military, cemetery, necessary, secretary, etc.

• • • •

Perhaps the best way to point out this difference is to take one familiar word, which is pronounced in exactly the same way by both British and Americans, but is spelled differently. We spell jewelry and the British spell jewellery and we pronounce the word in exactly the same way.

I think the best method for cultivated Americans to follow is not to imitate the extreme British pronunciation, but to avoid stressing the third syllable of all these words. Never say interESTing. Above all, never say posiTIVEly.

• • • •

In response to other questions by my correspondent, let me say that the word address, whether noun or verb should never be accented on the first syllable, but always heavily on the last.

The past participle of the verb wake is almost invariably by the British, woken; I have never heard an American say that.

The past and past participle of light may be either lighted or lit; I think it is entirely a matter of euphony. For example, I think I should prefer to say "I lit the lamps"—but I rather like "The lamps were lighted."

Furthermore, in slang, a drunken lady or gentleman is lit but not lighted.

• • • •

I do not know what is implied by my correspondent's question, "Do you think Samuel Johnson was mentally deficient?" I have never heard of any one more wholly sane, or more highly intelligent.

As to a small inexpensive grammar, I think F. K. Ball's book, "Constructive English" (published by Ginn & Co.) will be found very useful.

'Rigoletto' Cast Fights Battle With Acoustics

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

"Rigoletto," sung last night by the Civic Grand Opera, was a performance that was both brave and pathetic. What with contending with that mammoth mistake, the Washington Auditorium, and an orchestra that knew nothing of the meaning of "support," the singers fought a noble battle, and if their singing died before it crossed the footlights, at least they tried.

Luigi Rifino, as the Duke, became a whispering tenor until he reached his high notes, or was allowed a recitative. His voice, while imperfect, is pleasing. His manner of presenting the debonaire duke is in good grand opera style.

As Gilda, Marie Serena appeals to the eye, but has a light lyric voice that is inclined to become brittle in high ranges. Restricted to middle registers, she produces phrases that are well cultivated and naturally free.

Ciro De Ritis carried off acting honors. If his voice quavered too emotionally, let it be remembered that Rigoletto is a sad, broken old man. But his most notable achievement was his ability to fill the hall without appearing to shout.

Before tonight's performance of Cavalleria Rusticana let mutes be clamped on sawing violins, and a felt hat stuffed down the yawning neck of the tuba, and tickets passed out to help remedy the Auditorium's impossible acoustics. Let the singers be given a chance. And lastly, keep the performance from being half an hour late in starting. K. S.

ABC Inspector Called a 'Sneak'

Richmond Charge Resented by State's Attorney.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—A State alcoholic beverage control board inspector today was called a "sneak" by counsel for Ralph Davidson and nine other persons charged with violating State liquor laws.

After calling inspector D. B. Porter, jr., a "sneak," J. M. Turner, the attorney, said the inspector came to the Westover Club and the Tivoli Sandwich Shop on the night of January 9 presumably to "catch" certain persons while he "admittedly watched others violate the law by drinking intoxicating liquors."

Flames at Annapolis Rout Guests of Hotel

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Fire in a storeroom at Carvel Hall Hotel here this afternoon did slight damage but forced all guests out into the street.

The flames apparently started from spontaneous combustion in a room where mattresses are stored. Damage was estimated at $25. Before the size of the fire was determined, the switchboard operator called all rooms and advised the guests to leave the hotel.

Roosevelt Clarifies Policy Toward Labor

Removes Business Fears That New Deal Supports A. F. Of L. Organization Drive.

By Elliott Thurston.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has notified the American Federation of Labor, in effect, that the Government is not going to do the federation's organizing for it. This attitude will be welcomed by manufacturers and business men who have felt that one of the serious obstacles to business revival has arisen from uncertainty over the New Deal's labor policy. Until now it had been widely assumed that the New Deal, instead of striving impartially to gain acceptance of the principle of collective bargaining, as guaranteed by Section 7(a) of the national industrial recovery act, was backing the A. F. of L. in a drive for organization.

Ever since 7(a) was written into the law, the A. F. of L. has sought to construe it as a special grant of legal authority to go out and unionize plants and industries in which it had not previously been able to extend its sway. Strike after strike has been called in the A. F. of L crusade to enroll new members and extend its dominion. It was apparent to candid observers that in many cases strikes were called in plants where there had been no denial of the right to organize, no refusal to accept the principle of collective bargaining. In other cases, unquestionably, obdurate management sought to deny this principle.

• • • •

NEVERTHELESS, it had become clear that the A. F. of L. was fighting for its own ends rather than for a principle. It was asking the Government to support it in establishing what would amount to a monopoly of control. For the first time, Mr. Roosevelt has made clear, publicly, that he will not permit himself and his Administration to be used for that purpose.

The fact is that Mr. Roosevelt interceded in the threatened automobile strike a year ago and subsequently in the textile strike in time to save the face of organized labor leaders. The A. F. of L. has had another year in which to try to organize the automobile workers, and it has failed dismally. The failure can hardly be blamed on the New Deal or on the employers. It rests squarely on A. F. of L. leadership, which proved unable to command the confidence of the workers themselves. They voted down the A. F. of L. overwhelmingly and have turned to other leaders and other forms of organization more suited to the industry than the loosely-integrated craft-union setup of the A. F. of L. Just which group will finally organize the automobile workers remains to be seen, but it is clear that the A. F. of L. has fallen down on the job.

With truly amazing ingratitude toward a President who has gone so far, even at the risk of recovery, to aid them, the A. F. L. leaders undertook to blame Mr. Roosevelt for their lack of success. He is now saying to them, it appears, that he will not use his office further to force A. F. of L. leadership on labor generally. The New Deal seems to have come to rest at last upon a policy of letting the workers themselves say freely, without Government pressure or corecion in behalf of any labor group or organization, who shall represent them and how. This is a very different thing from having the Government ram the A. F. of L. or any other organization down the throats of the workers or the employers.

THE real friends of the labor movement in this country know the dangers of having this or any other Administration impose labor leadership and organization upon workers and employers. The first principles of democratic procedure demand that the workers shall be free to choose their leaders and the form of their labor organization. No friend of the A. F. of L. wants to see it put itself in the position of asking that the vast powers of government be used to compel workers to accept what they have not freely chosen, without compulsion from above.

There is no reason why A. F. of L. leadership should not adapt itself to the necessities of the times. It needs to win the support of employes and employers alike because they have confidence in its leadership and not because the New Deal clubs them into accepting that leadership. There is no use in pretending that the A. F. of L. has as yet adapted its organization or its leadership to the desires of the great mass of American workers or to the primary interests of the country as a whole.

Mr. Roosevelt's stand, as understood by many observers of the stormy labor scene, serves to bring the A. F. of L. back to realities, which are in the true interest of the labor movement, and to diminish some of the apprehensions which have long inhibited industry and business.

Recital in Constitution Hall by Lily Pons, soprano, assisted by Marcel Hubert, violoncellist; Arpad Sandor, pianist, and Luigi Alberghini, flautist. Program: Arias from "Die Zauberfloete," "Rigoletto," "Lakme" and "Il Barbiere di Siviglia;" songs by Pergolesi, Campra, Bishop, Saint-Saens and Messager; violoncello pieces by Bach, Mozart, Sarasate, Faure, Ravel and Popper.

Those graces of fioritura which have brought Mme. Lily Pons to her present altitude of popular favor were in unimpaired evidence on this occasion. Her vocalizing skill, displayed in roulades, trills, cadenzas, tones sustained through finely graduated crescendi and diminuendi, and the other devices of technique, was at its apogee. Feats of what might be called legerdevoix abounded to the delectation of an audience that applauded tumultuously and exacted from her three extra numbers in addition to her taxing program.

One must note, however, that her tendency to flat, already perceptible last season, has become more pronounced, affecting not only her notes in altissimo but also her entire range. Moreover, her highest tones, attacked with effort after a deliberate pause for preparation, show decided strain; they are pale, extenuated and colorless. The fioritura soprano pays a heavier toll than any other singer in the production of her brilliant effects, and Mme. Pons has not spared her vocal chords. It would seem that they are making signs of rebellion.

In agility her voice is as flexible as ever, but in color it is becoming clouded. Its lyric quality is suffering at the expense of incessant brilliance, although she can still apply it with tenderness when she chooses to do so. Her program was, for the most part, an exhibition of technical artifice and not a disclosure of musical artistry.

Marcel Hubert, making his first local appearance, is a violoncellist of most interesting qualifications. At this one hearing, one would choose as his distinguishing characteristic an extreme sensitiveness. While he has a fine technical equipment in matters of bowing and fingering, his tone is remarkable for its caressing quality and for a rare softness in lyric passages.

This engaging persuasiveness of tone was especially engaging in the lovely "Sicilienne" by Faure and in the Mozart minuet in G. All his selections were played with poetic intuition, even the commonplaces of Popper's Hungarian rhapsody. He is an artist whom one would like to hear in a program fitted to his stature.

Arpad Sandor, who has visited us rather frequently as accompanist for various musicians, revealed again his adaptability to circumstances or rather to the peculiarities of his principal. He was discreetness itself in his support of Madame Pons, in consideration for the fragility of her voice. In his work with Marcel Hubert he was a sympathetic collaborator.

"Cavalleria Rusticana," presented by the Capital Civic Opera Company in the Wardman Park Theater, under the direction of Eugene Martinet. The cast:

Santuzza ..... Esther Ingram
Turiddu ..... A. Douglas McComas
Lola ..... Ruby McQuarrie
Alfio ..... Howard Revere
Lucia ..... Mildred Gethins

Making its initial appearance under conditions not of the best in amplitude of stage and in orchestral support, this amateur organization showed a spirit and a determination which speaks well for its future. Its major asset at the present is a well-trained chorus, and that, as everyone knows, is a sine qua non for effective production of most of the popular operas. This chorus sings with enjoyment—a sure sign that its members are enthusiastic and willing to work.

Esther Ingram disclosed a fresh and effectively dramatic voice in the character of Santuzza. She sang with conviction and with a freedom of tone that betrayed no weakness in quality or placement; her voice has warmth and variety of color. She has yet to learn to address herself less to the audience and more to her interlocutors, and to keep her eyes away from the conductor's baton.

The latter suggestion applies equally to all members of the cast, who were too obviously watching the beat. Miss Ingram stood out among them all, however, by the ease and confidence of her singing. Her nearest rival in this respect was Mr. McComas, a member of the Baltimore Civic Opera, who sang with assurance, but acted with diffidence.

One understands that the Capital Civic Opera has ambitions for permanence, and its first performance should leave it in a hopeful state of mind. A good start has been made, and progress should be expected, provided caution is observed in the operas attempted. The printed program announced a production of "Aida" in April. One advises against this, for "Aida" on a minor scale is a precarious experiment.

$10,000 Suit First In Staunton Court

Sum Asked in Death of Blind Musician.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—In corporation court here Thursday the term will be opened with the hearing of the $10,000 damage suit of the administratrix of the estate of J. W. McCambridge against the Harrisonburg Candy & Fruit Co.

The suit grew out of an accident in which McCambridge, blind music instructor here, was killed, en route to his home by a truck belonging to the candy company.

For many years McCambridge was a member of the faculty of the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind. Among his survivors is a daughter, Mrs. Henry Webb, of Washington.

Rev. Micou Accepts Call to New Charge

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—The Rev. Paul Micou, of Fall River, Mass., has accepted a call from the vestry of Nelson parish, St. John's Church, at Rippon, and the bishop of the diocese of West Virginia, to St. Andrew's Mission and Christ Church Mission, all in this county. He will assume his new duties in May.

The field represents a consolidation of two fields at present—Nelson parish, served by the Rev. Hunter Davidson until he retired last year, and St. John's and the missions served by the Rev. A. B. Mitchell, who will retire in March.

TO WASHINGTONIANS . . .

. . . an announcement of still another step in POST PROGRESS

●

● Beginning Monday, February 18, patrons of the "honor system" newspaper racks will be requested to procure their daily copies of The Washington POST from newsstands, newsboys or by carrier delivery service at their homes.

The POST will discontinue use of the racks on that date.

● Originally intended as a service to the public, the "honor system" racks have performed that service only falteringly.

In rainy weather, in the occasional winter blizzards, POST readers who patronize the racks have found their papers water-soaked, or torn, or both.

Unfortunately, the racks have also proved to be a serious encouragement to petty theft and, at the same time, have reduced the earnings of hard-working boys who sell papers upon the streets, carrier boys and newsstand dealers.

● The POST believes that Washingtonians will approve and appreciate its efforts to eliminate an inefficient system and, coincidentally, to remove temptation from the youth of the city and to provide additional employment and earnings for reputable newsboys, dealers and carriers.

When informed of The Post's new policy, various civic, religious and educational leaders of the community made the following comments:

DR. GRACE HAYS RILEY, President, Washington College of Law.
"This move is important, to my mind, in that it will provide employment for honest carriers and at the same time restore in another way a convenient purchasing method for the public. I feel that the honor system failed as much through carelessness on the part of adults as through intentional dishonesty among youngsters."

COL. LESLIE C. GARNETT, U. S. Attorney for the District.
"Removal of the street newspaper sales boxes takes away the temptation of petty theft and will aid immeasurably to the employment of newsboys. You know, most of our Presidents have been newsboys."

"There is no doubt that the present rack system offers boys on the streets an opportunity for petty theft and, although it will be inconvenient personally to me, a consistent rack buyer, I heartily approve of The Post's action."

THE REV. J. C. BALL, Pastor, Metropolitan Baptist Church.
"I approve heartily of your new plan. It not only saves the situation but also gives an increased number of Washington boys a chance to earn money honestly."

THE REV. J. H. HOLLISTER, Pastor, Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.
"The removal of The Washington Post from the street racks is a very fine thing in my estimation. I also think that the interest which The Post is showing in its carrier boys most commendable."

"The Washington Post is making a very fine move in taking the paper off the street racks. I was once a newsboy myself and know how anxious the boys are to make a little extra money. This plan will do much to smother dishonesty."

MRS. L. B. CASTELL, President, D. C. Parent-Teacher Association.
"Facts seem to indicate that these honor boxes present temptation to both children and adults, leading them to become dishonest. I am glad to hear of their discontinuance by The Post."

DR. COLEMAN W. NEVILS, President, Georgetown University.

RABBI ABRAM SIMON, Washington Hebrew Congregation.
"What was originally installed as a convenience has unfortunately turned out to be a misfortune. I believe it would be wise for all Washington newspapers to agree to discontinue this practice."

JAMES E. FREEMAN, Bishop of Washington.
"I approve cordially of your new policy to withdraw The Post from street racks, thereby removing possible temptation to dishonesty from our youth and, at the same time, providing additional employment for boys who wish to demonstrate their self respect and willingness to work."

DR. FRANK W. BALLOU, Superintendent of Washington Public Schools.
"In my opinion the move is a very desirable one, since it removes temptation from weak people and increases the possibility of boys doing honest work in the sale of newspapers."

"I have felt all along that these newspaper racks put too great a temptation in the way of children and that there is no possible way of checking the success or failure of such an 'honor system' as this constitutes."

MR. W. L. DARBY, Secretary, D. C. Federation of Churches.
"I have been opposed to these racks ever since they were installed. Such administrators of juvenile justice as Judge Sellers have for years agreed with me that the entire policy is wrong and that newspapers should sell through stores and honest carrier boys and should not set up on street corners this temptation to dishonest boys to steal both the papers and cash."

DR. L. A. ALDERMAN, Director of Education, Federal Emergency Relief Administration.
"I feel that this is an important move and a necessary one toward giving employment to honest news carriers and removing temptation from dishonest ones."

DR. GEORGE W. WOODS, Dean, College of Liberal Arts, American University.
"The Post is to be commended upon taking this step, which I feel sure is in the right direction. I have felt for years that it was wrong for this temptation to be placed openly before young boys."

LINN C. DRAKE, Scout Executive, Boy Scouts of America, D. C. Council.
"I believe that it is in the interests of character development for boys to remove the temptation of the racks. The Post's action will save many boys from committing what the law regards as a crime."

"In this time, when so many boys are seeking a chance to make a living, I am glad to see The Post give them a better opportunity."

"It should prove a healthy experiment in that it will place more responsibility on the newsboys and better equip them for business."

FATHER BUCKEY, Pastor, Saint Matthew's Church.
"I think that The Post is making a very fine move in aiding the news boys in Washington and also in depressing dishonesty. The papers which are scattered over the streets from these news racks are an eyesore."

DR. CLOYD HECK MARVIN, President, George Washington University.
"I am not an authority on the moral or ethical issues involved, but if only considered from an esthetic point of view, The Post is to be congratulated on its action to remove from the streets the newsstand racks."

DR. MAURICE SHEEHY, Assistant to the Rector, the Catholic University of America.
"The new plan of The Washington Post, which will remove temptation from some weaker boys and give employment to other deserving youngsters, has my hearty approval."

MAJOR ERNEST W. BROWN, Superintendent of Police.
"I never was in favor of the rack system for the distribution of newspapers. Not only do the racks form obstructions on the sidewalks, but they are a constant temptation to children and grown-ups alike. The Post is to be commended for its action. Children charged with taking papers from these racks without depositing money have long been a problem of our juvenile court."

Funds to Press Crime Inquiry Likely Today

House Audit Committee to Act; Secret Hearings Slated to Continue.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

Appropriation of funds for a broad and fundamental investigation of the causes and possible cures of crime in the Capital is expected to be approved without material opposition when the House audit committee meets this morning.

Representative Lindsay Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the audit committee, approved the investigtaion when the House, on Tuesday, adopted the special resolution cloaking the crime committee with the full authority of the House.

The audit committee report providing $2,000 for the investigators is expected to be approved immediately by the House.

An investigation which shall involve "all aspects of the problem" has been determined on by his committee, Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the crime committee, said.

Will Go Into Fundamentals.

"Some of the testimony and questioning so far has been of a sensational nature which attracts public attention and the committee is going into these aspects thoroughly," Mr. Randolph said. "The committee, however, is determined to go thoroughly into fundamentals. Among the matters we sha.. consider are questions revolving about our murder laws, the parole law, the jury law, the police trial board, the adequacy of the police force and its equipment and the efficiency of operation. Crime conditions in the National Capital is a matter of importance to everyone as well as to the residents of and visitors to Washington."

Further discussion of their announced purpose to hold absolute secret hearings at which witnesses are to give names and dates and places of alleged graft, inefficiency, unfairness and other complaints involving the police, has caused the committee to agree these secret hearings will be held at places and times secretly determined on.

Will Protect Witnesses.

The public has been excluded from the hearings held so far. Newspaper reporters have been preent, however, subject to holding confidential statements made off the record. Many persons, including some police and other District officials, have told stories to committee members involving others. The secret meetings are to be held so these witnesses can tell their stories to the full committee and be protected.

Taking a page from the book of the committee chairman, two or three other members have disclosed their purpose to visit Washington night life "spots" and sections where conditions are reputed to be bad or unwholesome. The committee, however, does not intend to make a night life tour of the city en masse, it was said.

The secret hearings at which charges will be heard from protected witnesses are not to be launched until after the committee has completed its examination of police officials, Chairman Randolph said.

Burke to Testify Again.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, who was on the witness stand on Tuesday, is to resume the witness stand when the hearings begin again at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow. He is to be followed by Lieut. George Little, chief, and Sergt. George Deyoe, assistant chief, of the vice squad. It is not planned to call other police officers at this time, it was said.

When Inspector Burke resumes the stand he will be armed with an affidavit signed by all of the men assigned to the Detective Bureau. The affidavit states each signer has made correct and true reports of his activities and work in the past.

Representative Schulte, on Tuesday, charged that detective sergeants assigned to precincts often failed to report to the precinct. Some, Mr. Schulte said, "never did report" but depended on their partners to report for them while they lay abed. He criticized the detective chief with lack of control of his force, a charge to which Inspector Burke barked denial.

Kraft Cheese Plans Record Construction

Chicago, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corporation today announced a $1,000,000 building program for 1935, with new units to be constructed at Freeport, Ill.; Plymouth, Wis., Atlanta and Montreal.

James L. Kraft, president of the company, said it was "the largest building program in the company's history."

Jewel Tea Announces 5 Per Cent Wage Bonus

Chicago, Feb. 6 (AP).—Jewell Tea Co., Inc., directors today announced that 2,450 employes will receive a 5 per cent extra "wage extra," or bonus, as a "reward for their cooperation" during 1934.

A fund amounting to $70,000 will be distributed April 15 to workers employed during the period from July 15 through December 29, 1934, it was announced.

Tobacco Products Trust Debentures Are Called

The New York Stock Exchange has stricken from listing and registration Tobacco Products Corporation 6½ per cent collateral trust debentures due November 1, 2022.

The bonds were redeemed last week as a result of commutation of the lease held by American Tobacco Co. on certain brands of the Tobacco Products Corporation.

D. C. Police Fail To Nab Senator Wanted in Ohio

Arrest of State Senator John T. Murphy, political henchman of Gov. Ruby Laffoon of Kentucky, was asked of Washington police yesterday by Ohio authorities who claim that he is a fugitive from justice in that State. Washington detectives made no effort to detain him, pending further information and a copy of the warrant said to be held by Sheriff G. A. Lutz, of Hamilton, Ohio.

Senator Murphy was reported to be with Gov. Laffoon at the Hotel Mayflower, but no one of his name was registered at the hotel, and occupants of the Governor's suite denied that he was in Washington. According to the telegram received at police headquarters here, Murphy, a resident of Covington, Ky., has been declared a fugitive from justice for failure to appear nearly two years ago for trial under an indictment charging forgery.

Capt. B. W. Thompson, assistant chief of detectives, conferred with the United States attorney's office upon receipt of the telegram and telegraphed for further information and a warrant. Late yesterday no further word had been heard from Ohio. The telegram read: "State Senator John T. Murphy, Covington, is fugitive from justice from Ohio on forgery charges. Arrest, detain and advise immediately. Extradition papers will follow." It was sent, the Associated Press reported, on advice of Prosecutor Louis J. Schneider.

Murphy, dispatches from Cincinnati state, is charged with having uttered and published a forged instrument while counsel for Mrs. Madeline Corby Webber, wealthy Cleveland, O., resident, in litigation involving her daughter, Marie Theresa, and efforts to gain portions of an estate left by Thomas W. Corby, Detroit, Mich., millionaire.

Senator Murphy, Senate leader under the Laffoon administration, refused to apear in Ohio at the time the indictment was made, claiming he was needed at a session of the Legislature. Gov. Laffoon has consistently stood by his leader, but today Lieut. Gov. A. B. Chandler, Laffoon's political foe, assumed the governorship when Laffoon left the State for the first time in months. He announced he would honor an Ohio requisition for the Senator, according to the Associated Press. Sheriff Lutz acted after it was reported in Ohio that Murphy had accompanied the Governor on his trip to Washington.

Canned Goods Supply Is Lower Than Year Ago

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Inventory figures of canned foods as of January 1 compare favorably with those of a year ago, the trade hears.

Buyers were reported holding 6 per cent less than on January 1, 1934, while packers were holding 8 per cent less in the case of beans to 51 per cent less in corn stocks.

Kroger Grocery Sales Gain.

Hamilton's Bid To Elude Death Denied by U. S.

Texas Outlaw's Offer to Surrender for Alcatraz Term Is Spurned.

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 6 (AP).—Two paths—one leading to surrender and the electric chair, the other to resistance and death by bullets—were pointed by the law tonight for dapper Raymond Hamilton, the Southwest's most widely sought outlaw.

Hamilton, fugitive bank robber and gunman, offered through his captive brother, Floyd, to give himself up if Federal authorities would agree to get him an Alcatraz Island prison term, saving him from death for murder.

U. S. District Attorney Clyde Eastus refused—thus sounding the 21-year-old slayer's certain doom.

Some believe Raymond may be dead already—brought down in some hideaway by bullet wounds received in an escape with Floyd from a police trap at a Dallas apartment house Monday night. Floyd was captured last night at Shreveport and returned here today.

Raymond, who succeeded his late partner in crime, Clyde Barrow, as this region's No. 1 public enemy, is under sentence of death for the shooting of an Eastham State Prison farm guard. He has twice fled Texas cells in bloody escapes.

"If our men capture him, we will try him on the charges we have against him, and then turn him over to the State for execution," Eastus said.

Eastus said Floyd admitted he had seen Raymond recently, but refused to say when.

The district attorney announced the Government would proceed, on February 22, to try Floyd Hamilton and some 20 others on charges of harboring Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, desperado couple recently slain.

Mrs. Shepard 'Drank Heavily,' Servant Says at Poison Trial

Topeka, Kans., Feb. 6 (AP).—A Filipino houseboy testified at the poison murder trial of Maj. Charles A. Shepard today that the graying defendant's second wife regularly drank to excess.

Testimony of the Filipino, Cenon Manoloto, now of Denver, was offered in support of the defense contention Mrs. Zenana Shepard, who died at Fort Riley, Kans., 5½ years ago, was a dipsomaniac and probably committed suicide.

Nervous and stumbling at times, Manoloto was subjected to sharp cross-examination as were other defense witnesses testifying similarly in the face of the Government's charge Shepard, now 63, poisoned his wife for love of blonde Grace Brandon, 35 years younger than he.

Examined by Lloyd Kagey, defense attorney, Manoloto related how Mrs. Shepard "ran me around Omaha buying liquor for her."

Mrs. Veda Snyder, Junction City, Kans., beauty operator, testified Mrs. Shepard, in the lingering illness which preceded her death, June 15, 1929, did not expect to recover. Once, she said, Mrs. Shepard told her she would never get well and asked her to promise to dress her hair for the funeral.

'Baby Face's' Aid Is Held in $55,000

'Fatso' Negri Seized by U.S. and Arraigned.

San Francisco, Feb. 6 (AP).—Joseph "Fatso" Negri, who had been sought as an associate of "Baby Face" Nelson, was hustled into Federal court today, arraigned on two indictments, and held in default of $55,000 bail.

H. H. McPike, United States district attorney, did not disclose when or where Negri's capture was made, but said he had been in custody "all day."

One indictment charged Negri with having brought a stolen automobile from Chicago to San Francisco November 30, 1934. His bail was fixed at $5,000 on that charge and at $50,000 on a second indictment charging conspiracy to conceal Nelson.

Three men identified Karpis from pictures as the person who sought information from them Saturday concerning nearby gold dredging operations. Fearing the outlaw might attempt a dredger raid, Sheriff Elmer Gum placed guards around property of the Virginia Dredging Co., near Lincoln.

Low ff 10 Degrees Today Is Forecast

A temporature of 10 degrees early this morning and winds from the northeast and east carrying rains and possibly snows tomorrow, were forecast officially last night.

Most of today, the Weather Bureau predicts, will be cloudy and somewhat warmer than yesterday, although the temperature will still be below freezing. Yesterday's low was 16 degrees, recorded at 6 a. m., while the high was 23, at 4 p. m.

Ice, appropriately somber with dust and grime by now, still corrugated the streets yesterday. On it, Margaret Reagan, 63, of 210 F street northwest, slipped and injured her left hip. She was taken to Casualty Hospital. Genevieve Richmond, 41, of 203 Dulaney avenue, Virginia Highlands, slipped and fractured an ankle. A taxicab took her to Emergency Hospital.

Canada Snatch Nets American 15 Years in Pen

London, Ontario, Feb. 6 (AP).—David Meisner, American gambler and bookmaker, was sentenced to jail for 15 years today for kidnaping John S. Labatt, wealthy brewery president. It was the first case of its kind in Canada.

The court did not impose the maximum penalty, although Meisner was convicted on three counts—two in connection with the kidnaping and one of armed robbery. The maximum penalty is 25 years and the lash.

The little Cincinnati and Detroit bookmaker heard the verdict calmly. His counsel rested when the sole defense witness, former Detective Leroy Hall, of Covington, Ky., was revealed to have left the country after establishing an alibi for Meisner yesterday.

Justice G. F. McFarland pronounced sentence immediately. The sentences, 15 years on each count, are to run concurrently. The jury was out a little more than an hour.

Meisner's chief counsel suggested to the jury that Detective Hall had "ratted" on Meisner. The detective had given direct testimony yesterday that Meisner was in Covington at the time of the kidnaping last August. Today he was to have faced cross-examination.

Hall was the only witness to testify for Meisner, while the crown produced 23 witnesses. Thirteen of them, including Labatt, identified Meisner as one of the gang.

School Experiment Put Before P.-T.A.

The character education program in the public school system of the District of Columbia was explained by Mrs. Catherine Strube, councillor of McKinley High School, at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Woodside (Md.) School. The program was begun as an experiment in the fall and is being carried out in five white and five colored schools.

A resolution urging that the county immediately widen and pave the street in front of the school and construct a sidewalk and curb there was adopted by the association. Improvements for the road, known as B street, are asked from Georgia to First avenues. It is also requested that the angle parking law be put into effect and enforced.

W. H. Reynolds, Rhees Burket and J. T. Reside were appointed to push the matter, which will be referred to the county commissioners.

The urgent need of the immediate construction of a bus shelter on the east side of Georgia avenue was stressed and the secretary instructed to write to the board of education regarding the necessity for the erection of a building of this type.

$150,000 Worth Sneaked in Since Repeal; Special Probe On Today.

An interstate ring, still operating, has smuggled $150,000 worth of liquor into Washington since the eighteenth amendment expired in December, 1933. The District of Columbia has been defrauded of more than $100,000 in liquor taxes.

With this sudden assertion, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett yesterday cleared the way for a historical session among District grand juries. As 40 jurors out of a special panel of 550 Washingtonians were selected by Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Supreme Court, Garnett announced he would seek from 20 to 25 indictments of men and women who allegedly compose the liquor-smuggling ring.

The special grand jury, whose members will not be named until late today because Justice Adkins has asked court attaches to go over the list to make sure that all 40 jurors are eligible, already has been surrounded by an exciting aura.

To Probe PWA Graft Charges.

Its first task will be to probe charges of far-reaching Public Works Administration graft.

The spotlight turns first to Texas. There, according to Secretary Ickes' announcement some time ago, suspicion hangs over an irrigation project involving a $4,000,000 allocation from PWA.

Some light was thrown yesterday upon this announcement by Garnett, who named the project for the first time. He identified it as an irrigation improvement in Willacy County, Tex., on which $4,853,000 is to be spent.

He also said the charges centered on an attempt to wipe out competition in bids on wooden pipes used in the project, substituting costly California lumber for other woods.

He said two San Francisco lumbermen, H. W. Cole, president of the California Redwood Association, and L. C. Hammond, vice president of the Hammond Lumber Co., had been subpenaed to appear before the District grand jury.

To Seek Indictments.

Attempts to obtain indictments on the liquor charges will follow the probe into PWA. The case here will be submitted by Assistant United States Attorney Henry Schweinhaut who, it was revealed yesterday, has been running down the ring.

As he described it, a group of 25 persons has been smuggling liquor into Washington from New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia distilleries. Centers here, he indicated, have redistributed the alcohol in small lots, with buyers not knowing they were purchasing untaxed liquor.

Members of the local alcoholic beverage control board indorsed the liquor inquiry, while the board's vice chairman, Mrs. William Beverley Mason, said the board had had no information about any "organized gang." Members said they had no power except over licenses. They added that operations of licensed dealers had been checked stringently.

Officers to Seek Narcotics' Source From Prisoner

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 6 (AP).—State Police Superintendent C. C. Reynolds said today a man arrested Saturday and sentenced to six months in prison will be questioned concerning sources of narcotics distributed in Maryland and Virginia.

The man, picked up on a charge of operating an unregistered motor vehicle, identified himself as William J. Hines, of Salisbury, Md., and Richmond, Va.

Arraigned before a magistrate in Bridgeville, he was committed to the Newcastle County Workhouse. There he was placed under a physician's care because of his physical condition, Reynolds explained.

Examination of the car he was driving disclosed a needle and some narcotics, Reynolds explained. These discoveries, the State police superintendent said, led authorities to the belief the man may know something about the sources of narcotics to the two States.

Hazen Ill, Hearing Delayed.

Hearings on the District appropriation bill, scheduled to start in the Senate today, have been postponed indefinitely, it was announced yesterday, because of the illness of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and the priority of national money bills.

It is expected that the hearings will begin next week, providing the public works measure has been disposed of by that time.

Oakland, Feb. 6 (AP).—A mysterious extortionist who outwitted pursuers in one ill-starred attempt to snare was the object of a search tonight upon which all available police strength was grimly centered.

One officer was shot immediately by a fellow patrolman when a trap designed to catch the extortionist—signing himself "Sangre Diablo" (Blood Devil)—failed to click.

The extortionist demanded $10,000 on pain of death from Henry Joost, 81, wealthy retired real estate man, who had been instructed to leave the cash last night in Sanborn Park, near Joost's home.

Fellow watchers fired, thinking the moving officer might be their quarry. Berwick was critically wounded. No trace of the "Blood Devil" was found.

"Since you dare to disobey Sangre Diablo you have put both your life and your wife in jeopardy," one penciled note read. "You remember that between now and the time you die a natural death you stand a chance of dying a very unnatural one unless you get the cash to us before."

Lundeen Tells VFW of Battle For the Bonus

Dr. Paul C. Hartig Also Addresses Veterans at Alexandria.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Representative Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, and Dr. Paul C. Hartig, department commander of Minnesota, addressed a meeting of the Eighth District Veterans of Foreign Wars last night in Lyceum Hall, Alexandria.

Mr. Lundeen told of the activities of himself and other Minnesota Congressmen looking to soldier benefits, particularly the bonus bill. He said he favors the Patman bill, which provides for immediate cash payment of the bonus in currency, and which is favored by the V. F. W., but that if the Vinson bill, providing for the issuance of bonds, is preferred he is willing to support that, rather than have any obstacles placed in the way of payment.

In the event there should be a deadlock, he said, and neither bill appears likely of passage, he has a bill of his own which he believes will prove satisfactory to both sides.

He spoke of the petition he sponsored in the Seventy-third Congress to have the committee discharged from consideration of the bonus bill, which resulted in an overwhelming vote in the House for its passage.

Dr. Hartig told of veteran activities in Minnesota, and said that State had the largest per capita enlistment in the World War of any State. He described the cooperation between the various veterans' organizations in Minnesota and their success in influencing legislation.

Owen Creegan, senior vice commander of Russell Mitchell Post, V. F. W., presided. Letters of regret at being unable to attend were read from Senator Harry Flood Byrd, Representative Howard W. Smith and Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, as well as officials of the V. F. W.

A new bus company, to operate between Alexandria and Washington, will come to Alexandria as soon as the city council grants permission for the use of certain streets. A special meeting of the council will be held February 15 to hear the arguments both of the new company and any person or corporation which may oppose the granting of the desired authority.

The new company is understood to have headquarters in Baltimore and to have been chartered in Virginia for interstate traffic. Equipment valued at $150,000 is said to have already been purchased and the company is ready to start operations immediately.

The matter was brought before the council by Attorney Harry F. Kennedy and a resolution was offered by Concilman Clift to refer the matter of permission to use the streets to the newly formed traffic board. However, it was later decided to hold another meeting for consideration of this matter.

The A. B. & A. Transit Co., which has recently changed its status from a privately owned line to a corporation, has for a number of years enjoyed a monopoly of the Alexandria-Washington bus traffic. Another company, known as the Blue Line, operated for some time, but was purchased by the A. B. & A., at the time owned and operated by Robert L. May.

Dan S. Hollenga, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, yesterday appeared before the Rivers and Harbors Committee of Congress, backing the project for a deep water channel in the Potomac River to Alexandria. Hollenga stated a large company, which he did not name, proposes to build a large warehouse and water terminal at Alexandria, contingent upon the deepening of the channel. This company would employ 300 people.

The regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. in Gadsby's Tavern, presided over by Mrs. E. Burnett Ale, the president.

Mrs. Lydia L. Spofford, past State president of American War Mothers in Virginia, and a past secretary of the auxiliary, will give a talk on the recent national defense conference held in Washington. Vocal numbers will be by Mrs. Margaret F. Bailey.

A resolution providing for a temporary loan of $200,000, for current expenses of the City of Alexandria, pending collection of current taxes, was presented Tuesday night to the city council, and held over under the rules.

An ordinance to regulate traffic, paralleling the State laws, was presented and adopted. One of the new provisions was the formation of a traffic board, composed of the mayor, city manager and chief of police, with power to prescribe regulations covering certain conditions, subject to revision by the city council.

Attorney John Barton Phillips was elected president of the Alexandria Bar Association at its annual meeting yesterday. Stanley King was chosen vice president, and Joseph Pencoast, secretary and treasury. Members of the executive committee elected were Albert V. Bryan, Leo P. Harlow and J. Randall Caton, jr.

The committee on minimum fees made a report which, however, was held over for further consideration, at a special meeting to be held in the near future.

Funeral services for Mrs. Missouri Mills Zimmerman, who died Monday night, will be conducted from the residence, 108 South Columbus street, by the Rev. Ernest W. Aaron, pastor of the M. E. Church South, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Burial will be in the Methodist Protestant Cemetery.

Hold up Murder Charged to Two By Grand Jury

Twenty-three indictments were returned by the District grand jury before Justice Oscar H. Luhring in the District Supreme Court.

In addition, the jurors reported there were nine instances in which there was insufficient evidence to indict. The indictments ranged from murder to grand larceny and joy-riding.

John Homer Cummings and Willett Marcus were indicted in the shooting of Joseph Wushanick, 42, meat truck driver, who was killed by bandits who held up his truck at Tenth and B streets northeast January 4. The indictment charged that Cummings fired the fatal shot.

A former assistant auditor of the Community Chest, James M. Yates, was indicted for grand larceny. Yates was charged with having removed many dollars from cash envelopes sent to the Chest. In place of the donations, it was charged, he substituted three allegedly bogus checks.

A charge of assault with a dangerous weapon was lodged against Thomas Mitchell, 46, who was said to have shot at a refrigerator repairman and two policemen. Police were called when the repairman complained, and they added their complaint when Mitchell allegedly fired at them.

Other indictments charged Edna Gray, colored, with performing an illegal operation; Milton Ketchum, attacking an elderly woman, and Tony Petro, a statutory offense; Birney Whiting, Howard Actor and Joseph Pierce, housebreaking and larceny; James Yates, Wilbur B. Johnson, grand larceny; Milton Smith and Wilbert Jenkins, receiving stolen property; Lorenzo Gray, Joseph L. Sewell, Joseph F. Broglino, Elwood J. Early, George Hayden and James Simms, joy-riding.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

SENTIMENT for the establishment of a Department of Public Works with an additional Cabinet post is growing on Capitol Hill as debate advances on the $4,880,000,000 works bill. The plan is said to have the indorsement of chambers of commerce, engineering societies and a large number of other organizations throughout the country.

BAKER.

The need for such a department is held to be greater now than ever before. At present seven bureaus in four departments are concerned with nonmilitary public works activities. The grouping together of all nonmilitary public works activities of the Government under a single administrative head would make for efficiency and result in economy by avoiding overlapping and the duplication of equipment and personnel, proponents of the plan emphasize.

According to Dr. George C. Havenner, cost supervisor of the Government Printing Office, who is recognized as one of the Nation's leading authorities on Government service, the organizations and functions that should be assigned to a Public Works Department include:

The Office of the Supervising Architect and other public work functions of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department.

The Soil Erosion Service, Interior, the soil erosion studies of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, and all activities relating to soil-erosion control and irrigation and drainage of farm lands of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering of the Department of Agriculture consolidated into the Bureau of Reclamation.

All nonmilitary activities of the Corps of Engineers of the Army pertaining to the improving of rivers and harbors and to flood-control work, the Mississippi River Commission, the California Debris Commission, the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors and all other civil work activities except those pertaining to the Survey of Northern and Northwestern Lakes and the functions of the supervisor of New York Harbor, now under the War Department.

While Dr. Havenner advocates the inclusion of the supervision of all Federal public work activities financed by funds allotted by the Public Works Administration under Secretary Ickes only after the present emergency is over, several members of Congress feel that the PWA should be the first and major unit of the new department.

The Washington, State and Alaska Society's dinner and reception last night, at 1032 Connecticut avenue northwest, in honor of the Congressional delegation was enthusiastically attended, reports the society president, Emmett R. Carroll (C), Veterans' Administration. The dinner arrangements were made by Miss Annabelle MacLeod (P).

Carl W. Jennison (C), assistant examiner of trade marks, Patent Office, has just returned to his desk after recovering from a major operation at Providence Hospital. Mr. Jennison is in charge of the class trade marks applied to alcoholic liquors. Since repeal, his section has been one of the busiest in the District.

Appraisers Are Sought.

Civil Service Commission announces applications will be received until February 16 for the positions of associate land bank appraiser, associate engineer appraiser and assistant engineer appraiser for service in the Farm Credit Administration. The salaries range from $8 a day or $2,600 a year to $10 a day or $3,200 a year.

"Some Botanical Aspects of Perishable Food Product" is the title of an illustrated article by Dr. Charles Brooks, principal pathologist, Bureau of Plant Industry, in the current issue of Scientific Monthly. In the same issue B. Y. Morrison (F), in charge of the Division of Foreign Plant Introduction, Bureau of Plant Industry, writes on "Painting the Hills Green," telling of soil erosion and its remedies.

Traffic Delays Scored.

Public ownership of District transportation facilities is urged in a resolution adopted by the Society of Federal Translators, copies of which are being forwarded to citizens' associations. The resolution points out that:

"Both the Federal and District governments are vitally interested in seeing that their employes arrive on time at their places of employment and . . .

"It is a matter of common knowledge that it is becoming increasingly difficult for most of them and virtually impossible for many of them to do so, owing to the steady deterioration of transportation facilities in the District under private ownership and operation . . ."

The organization also protested against the efforts of "certain" individuals to have translations made for them through official channels thus depriving commercial translators of an opportunity to make money.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

N. B. C. breaks through with a new dramatic serial today on WMAL, 8:30 p. m. It's called "Red Trails," and tells the story of the babyhood and adolescence of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. Sergt. Tim Clone, a typical policeman, will get his men as exploits of the early days are presented.

A 30-piece band furnishes musical background. The first episode is called, "The Mark of the Breed." The second, "The Fangs of the Wolf," will be heard at the same time, same station, next Thursday.

Arch McDonald's Hot Stove League (baseball fans organization) will gather several thousand strong at 77 P street northeast on Saturday. Time is still undecided. League members will be served chocolate and cookies, and will have their pictures taken with Bucky Harris. This is the first meeting of baseball addicts, and it should be a good one.

Two C. B. S. script writers are in town at present, working on dramatizations of that network's March 4 program, "Of the People, by the People and for the People."

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Department of Justice Investigation Bureau, speaks on "Crime Prevention," WRC, 12:30 p. m. today. He will tell you what crime costs industry and business, and outline his ideas for keeping the country's youth from becoming criminals.

International affairs occupies the attention of a series of talks, "The United States and World Affairs." The first one, 8:15 tonight, WMAL presents Raymond Leslie Buell, on "World Trade and Tariffs."

"Economics in a Changing Social Order" program introduces Dr. N. I. Stone, of the Tariff Board, and Dr. Levering Tyson, director of the Advisory Council on Radio. Their subject: "Public Works." WMAL, 10:30 p. m.

Bessie Clarke Drouet, founder and president of the American Student's Foundation, discusses "Scholarships" on WJSV, 4:45 p. m. She will tell you of the work of the foundation and point out scholarship possibilities generally unknown to aspiring students. In addition to her talk, she presents Marian Morrey, pianist, who holds a scholarship at the Juilliard School of Music.

Along musical lines, NBC Music Guild presents Saint-Saen's F major trio, 2 p. m., WMAL . . . Waring's Pennsylvanians play tunes from the new movie, "Love in Bloom," WJSV, 9:30 p. m. . . . Phil Spitlaney's "Hour of Charm," pays tribute to Nora Bayes with "Shine On, Harvest Moon," her composition, WJSV, 8 p. m.

Paul Whiteman presents Helen Jepson, newest Metropoltan soprano, on his program, WRC, 10 p. m. She will sing, "Connais tu," from "Mignon," and a duet, "Sweetheart," with Harry Stockwell

Rudy Vallee's guests are Ethel Barrymore, Tom Howard, Kitty Carlisle and Tom Terris. Miss Barrymore will play an excerpt from "School for Scandal," lovely Kitty sings two songs from her new pictures, "He Is My Heart." Tom Howard adds comedy relief and Terris goes dramatic with a story of an Egyptian mummy and the disaster it brought its owners.

In response to calls about the lack of the "Outstanding Events" box, this explanation is offered: Due to limited space, the box has been temporarily dropped. "Outstanding Events" will appear in this column until space permits the return of the box.

Mrs. Robert Is Honored At Luncheon

Mrs. Harold Walker Is Hostess to Visitor at Curtis Club.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The luncheon given by Mrs. Harold Walker yesterday in honor of Mrs. Lawrence W. Robert, jr., wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, at the Curtis Club was a delightful gathering of distinguished and interesting women.

The Curtis Club is a charming place for any kind of a party, and yesterday the large drawing room where the guests gathered was alight with sun and firelight; brightened by colorful chintzes, and huge bowls of white lilac, yellow roses and blue delphinium. Cocktails and pale sherry with delicious hors d'oeuvres were served in this room, and later the guests went to the glass-inclosed dining room, where they were seated at five tables. Large vases of spring flowers were on each table, and the luncheon surpassed even the reputation of the Curtis Club, for a cheese souffle which appears perfectly turned for a gathering of such a size requires the most expert cook's attention.

Daughter Assists.

Mrs. Walker and her guest of honor received the guests, and Mrs. Evelyn Walker, daughter of the hostess, assisted in making everybody happy. The hostess wore a handsome gown of gunmetal lame, with a large hat of black velvet, and Mrs. Robert was in a gown of maroon colored crepe with a small black hat. Mrs. Evelyn Walker wore a severely plain black crepe frock with a real Russian turban of Persian lamb. It was most becoming, and unlike most of the hats of that type which are so papular this season, was of generous proportions, and so lost none of its native charm.

The guests included Mrs. Harlan Fisk Stone, wife of Associate Justice Stone; Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Associate Justice Roberts; Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Minister of Austria; Senora de Arcaya, wife of the Minister of Venezuela; Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Minister of Hungary; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. James A. Farley, wife of the Postmaster General; Senora de Campos-Ortiz, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Mexico; Senora de Gonzales-Fernandez, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Colombia; Senora de Fuentes, wife of the first Secretary of the Mexican Embassy; Mrs. James Couzens, wife of Senator Couzens; Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of Senator George; Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis; Mrs. Warren Austen, wife of Senator Austen; Miss Ida Guffey and Miss Paulette Guffey, sisters of Senator Joseph Guffey; Mrs. Henry Corbin, Mrs. Matthew Hanna, wife of the United States Minister to Guatemala; Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, Mrs. Stanley Rinehart, Mrs. James F. Curtis, Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan, Mrs. Louis Titus, Miss Patten, Mrs. Leonard Cresswell, Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Mrs. Harry O. Chalkley, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy; Mrs. Woodbury Blair, Mrs. Armstead Davis, Mrs. Rose Merriam, Mrs. Edward R. Finkensteadt, Mrs. Henry Leonard, Mrs. Francis Walker, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman and Mrs. Boaz Long.

Other Guests.

Also Mrs. Chandler P. Anderson, Miss Mary Sheridan, Mrs. Bowler Hull, Mrs. George T. Marye, Mrs. Fred A. Never Fails to Make Dull Teeth Shades Whiter

Antiseptic cleansing works wonderful transformation...stain and discoloration you think permanent quickly disappear

If your teeth are so stained, so dull or discolored you feel self-conscious and ashamed when you smile—and if the daily care you give them doesn't whiten them a shade or stop decay—start cleaning them the new scientific way and see what a wonderful transformation takes place in a few days.

Use It New Way

Tomorrow morning do what more than 2,000,000 people are going to do. Clean your teeth with antiseptic Kolynos. Use it as you would any ordinary toothpaste with these TWO EXCEPTIONS: Use only half as much of this highly concentrated dentifrice as you would normally use. And put it on a dry brush. Do not dilute or weaken its effectiveness with water. Scrub your teeth for a couple of minutes.

You Have a Charming Smile

Then see what this first brushing does. Your teeth look brighter. They feel cleaner as your whole mouth does. Soon they are lustrous as pearls, clear and white as can be! And you know that your smile is charming.

Why It Cleans Faster

This exceptional whitening and cleansing power of Kolynos is due to two things: Unlike ordinary, lifeless preparations Kolynos multiplies 25 times when it enters your mouth and covers every tooth surface, every pit, fissure and crevice with a cleansing, polishing foam. And at the same time Kolynos kills 80% to 92% of the germs which collect on the teeth and cause them to look dull, stained and discolored.

Now see how gleaming white you teeth can be! Give up old-time, ineffective methods and start using Kolynos today.

KOLYNOS DENTAL CREAM

New Neckwear Way to Revive Old Wardrobe

Touch of Color Injects New Life Into Somber Frocks.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF YOU'RE BIDING your time for a new spring frock, and yet you're weary unto death of somber winter outfits, try this recipe for turning an old dress into the belle of your wardrobe: First of all, decide on your color scheme. Say your dress is black, why not a touch of red or bright orange, canary yellow, or the ever-refreshing white? Now, consider your neckline. If the neck of the dress is high, you can use a Peter Pan collar. If it's low, try an ascot. The next step leads you to a local store, where a brand-new shipment of neckwear has just arrived and is selling for $1.

The theme of this neckwear story is built around two things, pique and colors. The first batch includes some attractive ascots finished off with one large button. The pique is in both small and large design.

The second batch is made up of smart little Peter Pans in numbers of gay irresistible colors. Along with these pert collars come a set of cuffs, to make your costume complete.

Hair Rinse.

There are many women who wonder why in comparison with others they look drab and faded. They compare clothes, complexions, and ages, and find no solution. The answer in hundreds of cases centers on the hair. Nothing gives a woman a brighter, smarter appearance than a coiffure that is truly a crowning glory. But no matter how nicely it's curled and arranged if it's lifeless, and dull, the effect can not be flattering.

It costs almost nothing to tint your hair and now, thanks to the achievements of science, it can be done in a short while right in your own home. A local store is featuring some rinses which are made from harmless vegetable coloring. After you've shampooed your hair you simply use the rinse. It brings out the highlights, makes mouse-colored hair have a decided color, brings out coppery glints in brown hair, and makes blonde locks truly blonde. Don't fear that the rinse will change the color of your hair. It simply accentuates it and brightens it. There's really no quicker, easier and less costly way of taking ten years from your age than by giving your hair a good rinse.

It costs only 25 cents a package and comes in a dozen or more shades.

A New Mascara.

The surest way to give your lashes a dark luster that will stay from the party's beginning to the wee small hours is to use a certain new mascara that comes in a neat little black leather case. Inside this is a tube of the darkener and a handy little brush. The whole outfit is well adapted to any purse, from evening size on up.

You can use the mascara just as it is from the tube or you can weaken it to suit yourself by adding a drop of water. It's the simplest thing in the world to apply. Just dampen your brush, and take the merest bit from the tube, brush this lightly over the lashes and behold, they seem longer, more lustrous than ever.

The set costs only 50 cents, is guaranteed to be harmless, and all in all is a first-rate cosmetic buy.

Shoppers' Haven.

Even those who know their Connecticut avenue might miss a certain little shop which you reach by a climb of one flight of stairs and a trek down a labyrinthine corridor.

Here every day is sale day and every dress a bargain. Among the variety of frocks displayed now are some adorable woolen sports dresses selling for $4.75. Besides, there are numerous linen suits, washable sheers, silk crepes, and a delightful assortment of tennis frocks. There are also dinner and evening dresses ranging from soft velvets to whispering taffetas.

Nothing in the shop is over $22.50 and the majority of things are far less.

Strictly Speaking

What About These?

1. "Just when did the word impecunious come to mean 'stingy or miserly?'"—A Reader.
2. Who was Nancy Hanks?
3. What was George Sands' real name?
4. What is a pettifogger?

Answers Here.

1. It doesn't. That was a mistake, for which the writer of this feature bows her head. She was thinking of parsimonious instead of impecunious (which, as you know, means "penniless").
2. The mother of Abraham Lincoln.
3. Armadine L. A. (Dupin) Dudevant.
4. An inferior lawyer, especially one resorting to small or tricky methods.

Viola Mitchell, Violinist, Symphony Soloist Today

A concerto written by the modern composer, Malipiero, will lead off the program to be played in Constitution Hall this afternoon by Viola Mitchell, above, who has mastered the violin in her early twenties.

Gave Up Tennis and Golf, She Says, Because of Muscle Strain; Here Without Manager, Maid or Press Agent.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

AT A SIGNAL in Constitution Hall this afternoon from Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony, a rather short, merry-faced young woman will walk out in front of the big orchestra, cuddle a violin beneath her chin and swing into the Malipiero concerto. She is Viola Mitchell, a 20-odd-year-old Pittsburgher, who has lived in Europe so long she unconsciously seasons her conversation with French phrases.

Unlike most artists of her musical stature, Miss Mitchell came to Washington unaccompanied by maid, manager, relative or press agent. She has been at the Mayflower since Tuesday morning, resting, writing letters, going out occasionally for social engagements and for two rehearsals with the orchestra.

She doesn't go in for the strict regimen of an opera singer on the day of a public appearance; thinks it is unnecessary for a violinist. But she does keep regular hours pretty much the year round and keeps her social activities at a minimum.

Practice? Just whenever she feels like it, she said with a mischievous grin which crinkled her small nose and made her seem even younger than she is. She admitted, however, that the violin has cut down her participation in sports to the vanishing point.

"I had to give up tennis," she explained, "because it was hard on my wrist muscles. I used to play a good game, too. Oh, I wasn't an expert, but I did play well and I enjoyed it. But I had to stop it. Those wrist muscles are too important."

Golf has gone by the boards for the same reason. And, lest she sprain an ankle or break a leg in skiing, Viola Mitchell has also given up that sport. She knew a musician who hurt himself not long ago skiing. He had to cancel his tour. "The risk is too great," she said. "No sport is worth it."

A violinist's muscles undergo much greater strain than most persons realize, she explained. "That's probably why there have been so few first-rank women violinists. You see, the arm that holds the instrument is constantly twisted out of shape. Its muscles are pulled and turned. That's why the violin is considered a man's instrument. But, personally, I think a woman has as much endurance and strength as a man."

Longs for Violin Music.

Another thing that discourages would-be violinists, both men and women, she said, is the small amount of good music written for the instrument.

"Oh, if we only had a Chopin as pianists have," sighed Viola Mitchell. She's thrilled about the Malipiero concerto, a brand-new work by the famous contemporary composer. Malipiero, upon the recommendation of Pierre Monteux, presented the composition—his first work for violin, by the way—to the young American violinist. She is the only person permitted to play it in this country until July. Then it will be released generally.

"It's beautiful," said Miss Mitchell. "It's modern, of course, which means it should be heard more than once to be appreciated. But today's audience can't possibly suffer much because the concerto is only 16 minutes long," and her brown eyes blinked roguishly.

Looking at Viola Mitchell it was hard to imagine any audience suffering even if she played "Turkey in the Straw."

What TODAY Means

"Aquarius."

IF FEBRUARY 7 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. until 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

Do not be afraid to assert yourself today, for otherwise someone may try to take an unfair advantage of your good nature. Strive in business transactions to keep from showing any sense of irritation if you are subjected to sarcastic remarks from an ill-bred person. Market conditions are liable to show an optimistic trend, but conservative buying probably will be wise.

Social expectations probably will be realized in a rather unexpected manner. Today be careful into whose ear you pour confidences of a private nature, for a talkative type of person may unintentionally let slip something you do not wish to have repeated.

There may be danger of damage being done to the contents of parcels or letters received in opening them if caution is not used. Married and engaged couples, as well as those seeking someone's favor, may avoid hurting their adored one's feelings if they remember that the truth sometimes hurts, so at times it is advisable to cloth it in diplomatic language.

If a woman, and February 7 is your birthday, you are likely to be very gratified by a generous gesture on the part of a friend or relative. Financial problems will probably be worked out very shortly in a satisfactory manner. If anxiety is causing you mental disturbance, it might be good judgment to satisfy yourself thoroughly that you really have some definite cause for worry. Most feelings of apprehension are without a firm foundation and are only figments of our own imagination. Laboratory or library work, music, stenography, or acting as saleswoman may be productive of satisfactory earnings. A matrimonial career is likely, however, to be the best for you.

The child born on February 7, as a rule when he heaches his teens, may develop a rather egotistical streak, and an overreadiness to express his opinion upon any and every subject. If promptly squelched, as soon as it is noticeable, life will be more bearable for every one concerned.

If a man, and February 7 is your natal day, you will advance your interests and gain in popularity if you refrain from bragging. Boastfulness never has and never will accomplish any good, so the wise man will never indulge in it. Law, medicine, printing, and selling offer money making possibilities that should not be ignored

Green Salads Are Preferred By Most Men

Complicated Mixtures Fail to Tempt Masculine Taste.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE TRUTH is out—men are afraid to tackle salads. Perhaps not all the men in the world lack the courage to delve into a plate of salad, but the American men, for the most part, find it a worthless venture. What has happened to the dish that for centuries was acclaimed by monarchs and kings?

The first thing a man says when questioned about his disliking for salads is, "Salads, bah! I have no use for them." Further questioning brings to light all the hidden grudges against the poor unsuspecting salad. Strangely enough, most of the men asked to tell why or why not they enjoy salads, had the same ideas about this dish. One man's comment was brief and to the point, and covered the same idea expressed more elaborately by several others.

His remark was stated something like this:

"Salads are usually as complicated as a Swiss watch. When a woman starts to make a salad, she either puts carrots on it or adds jelly, plus one or two other bits of food, until the salad resembles a child's model of the Taj Mahal."

Plates Too Small.

Still another man rebels at the salad because of the way it is served. "The plate is too small. Why don't Americans serve salad in its proper place, the bowl, as the Europeans do? After all, they originated the salad."

Restaurant salads have a reason to offend the men, too. Men are as particular about the attractiveness of their food as the women. First of all, they want their salads to be attractive. The chief complaint with a restaurant salad is its floating appearance. The lettuce looks as though it has been ducked in water and placed on the serving plate immediately. Frequently the salad greens are wilted, and won't cut properly and the dressing is too thin.

Men who have eaten salad abroad simply refuse to touch the American version. One man went so far as to insist that Americans didn't have the right idea about salads at all. He wants his salad, entirely of greens, chopped, placed in a bowl and mixed with a French dressing. He forgot to mention the cut garlic clove that was rubbed around the inside of the bowl before the salad was mixed, but that is one requisite of a good continental salad that missed his attention.

The American men vote first for salads made entirely of greens. Their second preference seems to be for sliced tomatoes and lettuce. The man who spoke most enthusiastically about this salad of greens explained it this way: "Everything must be green, and that means that even tomatoes are out. Lettuce, chicory, endive, romaine, watercress, a little bit of onion and a bit of green pepper make the perfect salad. It should be served with Roquefort dressing, too. Tell the women that we men like the Roquefort blended with our French dressing in little lumps, but not mashed so fine as not to be distinguishable as the cheese that it is." In other words, the housewife who is liberal with the Roquefort will be considered a far superior maker of salads than the one who skimps.

Roquefort Dressing Favorite.

Roquefort dressing ranks first in popularity, French dressing second, with mayonnaise a very weak third. Mayonnaise is probably the least popular because not nearly so well adapted to the green salad so much preferred by men. The thin sharp dressings, either French or roquefort, are more pleasing accompaniments for salad greens.

Here is a recipe for an excellent French dressing. The French always rub the bowl in which the dressing is to be made with a clove of garlic.

French Dressing.

3 tablespoons oil
¾ to 1 tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice
¾ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon salt

These ingredients make a simple French dressing. Mix the oil, salt and pepper and slowly add the vinegar or lemon juice, stirring constantly.

If the dressing is made before the meal, the addition of a small amount of egg white beaten with the dressing will make the emulsion more permanent.

Depressed Feeling Is Symptom Of an Abscess of the Brain

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

NO one will deny the importance of preserving the physical integrity of the brain. Nature has provided a thick bony covering (the skull) in order to prevent injuries to this structure. In addition the brain is encased by a tough membrance and is surrounded by a thin membrance of fluid, protective in character. As a rule, it takes a rather severe bump to bring about injury to the brain substance.

Infections of the brain or of its coverings are quite another matter. When bacteria gain entrance to the circulation they sometimes reach the brain. Many of them no doubt are destroyed in the blood stream, but several varieties are known to attack the brain covering, resulting in meningitis or encephalitis.

Again the brain lies in such close proximity to some of the sinuses (frontal, ethmoid, and sphenoid) that infection of these sinuses may, if severe, actually invade the brain substance. Burrowing infections of this character may cause meningitis or abscess of the brain.

From 40 to 50 per cent of brain abscesses are the result of chronic ear disease. The infection may extend to the brain along blood vessels and nerves. Anything that tends to block the outflow of pus from the middle ear may, by pressure, reflexly force infection into the brain.

There are a few general signs of brain abscess that are of importance. If it is necessary to wait until signs of pressure develop the abscess may become so extensive that drainage is not possible. As with any localized collection of pus the first symptoms may be chilly sensations accompnaied by vomiting, rise in temperature, and headache. Although these symptoms are not diagnostic of brain abscess they must be considered in connection with the presence of pus in any other part of the body.

When, If Ever, Should a Foster Child Be Told of His Adoption?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Five years ago my husband and I, after learning we could never have a child of our own, and wanting a son badly, adopted an adorable 3-month-old baby boy. His father was killed in an automobile accident three months before he was born and his mother, who was in a hospital for weeks after the accident, died a month after the child was born.

• • • •

The boy, who is legally adopted and who bears my husband's name, is as dear to us as if he had been born to us, and we have brought him up just as our own. Three years ago we made a change of residence, coming to Washington for the cultural advantages we felt we could obtain here for our son. He enters school next year. He is an exceptionally bright child and my husband and I have been troubled for some time with the thought that some day we may have to explain to our son the circumstances surrounding his coming to us.

• • • •

No one here knows that he is not our own child, which is one reason why we chose to live in Washington, which is thousands of miles away from our native home. Yet we fear that some day, by some happenstance, he may hear from others' lips the fact he is not of our own flesh and blood. We wish to anticipate that eventuality as tactfully as possible.

• • • •

At what age do you think we could safely acquaint him with the truth, not only about his real parents, but with the fact that he is dearer to us than our own life? Or should we say anything at all, and just trust to Providence he will never know? These are questions which torment my husband and me constantly, with increasing pain as our love for him grows.

• • • •

Please advise us, Miss Haworth, and help two parents to solve a great anxiety. Sincerely,

ANONYMOUS.

Soon as Possible.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Yours are questions one would have to be well-nigh omniscient to answer with certitude. However, I believe the emotional pattern of the child's future life might be best safeguarded in acclimating him at an early age to the truth concerning his parentage. The earlier he hears it, the more likely he is to accept it as a matter of course.

• • • •

Children as young as 3½ or 4 years of age, when reared in an atmosphere of orthodox Christianity, display a lively and charmingly naive curiosity in the Biblical interpretation of the creation of the world, in the existence of God and in the reality of heaven. It seems to me it would be a comparatively simple matter for a foster-father or mother to explain to a beloved and happy foster-child that his own father and mother have been recalled to heaven and that a wise and protective Providence has placed him in the care of two other parents, whose child he now is.

• • • •

Such an explanation, casually given now, should obviate not only the necessity of a more halting and painful statement of fact later on but the possibility of his hearing it more baldly from others and having his sense of social security, as well as his implicit confidence in his foster-parents' trustworthiness, rudely shaken, if not completely destroyed.

• • • •

I don't believe in holding back from meeting an issue bearing so vitally on the child's psychological well-being, blindly trusting in Providence to keep the truth from coming to light.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

"HOW MANY mothers utilize the educational opportunities afforded by such commonplace events as sitting down to the breakfast table?" "Take the spoon beside the child's plate, as a single instance. Miners dug the ore and carried it to the surface of the earth. How was it transported—by land and sea or both? The ore was refined in one place; the metal sent to another factory to be made into a spoon. Salesmen sold it to the store, where Mother bought it. The adventures of the spoon are exciting, and following the steps in its production gives the child a new concept of the number of unknown people who have worked for them, to give them what we consider the most ordinary conveniences of life."

Such conversational subjects are bound to stimulate the child's interest. They will be even more effective if they are used as scrapbook material. Instead of a hit-or-miss scrapbook, try making one on some educational topic. Search magazines and newspapers for suitable pictures. Sometimes a page in the book will be vacant for months, waiting until you find a picture of some particular process or phase of the whole series. But the search for proper material makes the project all the more interesting.

New Blouses Are Needed With Spring Approaching

Pattern No. 880.

NEW SUITS need new blouses. With midwinter suits knowing a popularity they haven't had in years, and spring not so very "far behind"—it is well to think of new blouses. Here is a dress blouse with a gracefully twisted scarf and girdle and demure puff sleeves. Taffeta is suggested for this blouse. Another version (both are in one pattern) is double-breasted in a jacket effect. This more tailored blouse has a swing pleat in the back below a straight yoke.

The sizes for this pattern are 14 to 42. Complete yardage requirements are on the pattern envelope.

Irish Linen Promises To Be Summer Favorite

Irish linen has come to the fore as the leading fabric in the Paris fashion picture. Cables from the French capital promise that next spring and summer women will be wearing suits, dresses, hats, shoes, bags and even lingerie of fine Irish linen.

The fact that linen used to crush badly was responsible for its not having been more universally used before. It was always an ideal summer fabric, porous and cool, yet strong and long-wearing. Now Irish linen has been specifically processed, so that the linens which will be imported for next summer's fashions are as nearly uncrushable as any fabric.

Bill to Widen D. C. Officials' Powers Fought

Opposition to two features of the proposed bill to broaden the powers of the District Commissioners was voiced yesterday by the Board of Public Welfare and the District Dental Society.

Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the board, objected to the provisions of the bill, which would give the Commissioners almost absolute control over the board.

The board seeks to retain its present control over the agencies and employes under its jurisdiction. Under the present law the Commissioners have full control over the welfare budget and buildings, as well as over the appointment of members of the board and its employes, after recommendation by the board.

The Dental Society objected to the provision which would alter the present system of appointing members of the Dental Examining Board. Under the existing law, the Commissioners appoint the members upon recommendations by the white and colored dental societies. The proposed bill would empower the Commissioners to appoint the members without such recommendation.

Mr. McReynolds pointed out in his letter that "the present act contains an admirable system of checks and balances, and the powers granted the board are only those that the Commissioners have not the time to study and make intelligent decisions upon."

Other features of the bill, which would give the Commissioners veto power over the Board of Education, the Board of Library Trustees and the National Park and Planning Commission, have been opposed by the respective groups, as well as by many citizens' assoications.

Maugansville Seeks New School Building

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—A bill authorizing the board of county commissioners to issue $45,000 in bonds for a new school building at Maugansville, Washington County, will be introduced this week in the Legislature, following a petition from property owners. The request may be incorporated in a measure already presented asking authority to issue bonds for new schools at Sandy Hook and Sharpsburg.

The board has reached no decision on the proposed six-room addition and gymnasium for the Williamsport High School. The estimated cost is $55,000.

Clarence Baker Named County Investigator

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Clarence S. Baker has been appointed county investigator and yesterday qualified following his appointment by the board of county commissioners.

Baker was recommended by the Republican State central committee. The position carries an annual salary of $2,200.

Broadway —Goes to Miami

By Ed Sullivan

Underneath the Miami Moon

Miami Beach, Feb. 6.—This is strictly a party town. At midnight a gentleman called me on the phone at the Deauville Beach Club. We had just driven in from Savannah, and we were dead tired.

"All you will need," said the voice over the phone, "is a dinner jacket and flannels. Be there at 11." I thought that I must be talking to a madman. "Don't bother me," I snarled. "Go away and don't call this room again."

A few seconds later, the phone buzzed again. It was the dinner-jacket-and-flannels man again. "I am the chairman of the Ed Sullivan dinner committee," he said hastily. Didn't you read about it in the papers?"

It developed then that shortly after your correspondent left the slushy sidewalks of New York, this lusty community determined to give him a party. The committee includes, I learn, such veteran Floridians as Helen Morgan, Harry Richman, Jack Pearl, Mrs. Jack Warner, Sophie Tucker, Ben Blue, Jack Waldron and the three Ritz Brothers.

The chairman of the committee on lighting effects for the party is another famous Floridian, Earl Carroll, and the dance arrangements have been left to Veloz and Yolanda. "There is also a committee on bouncing," the man told me. For a moment, I thought that he ment a special committee had been appointed to regulate the second bounce of my rubbery checks, but he disclaimed this motive. The bouncers will be the Four Yacht Club Boys.

Just to show you, however, what can happen down here in 24 hours . . . One night, I'm the honored guest; the next, I will only be on the reception committee.

• • • •

OBSERVATIONS:

Deauville Beach Club is swankiest of local spots. . . . This is built on the site of the dog track and arena which Tex Rickard planned. . . . The circular track which Rickard proposed for dog racing is now a circular swimming pool, the most gorgeous thing you've ever looked at. . . . Dorothy Dey, conducting a breezy chatter column in a local paper, could improve her title for it by naming it "Night by Dey."

MIAMI NOTES:

The town is excited over the statement of Stephen Early, President Roosevelt's secretary, that Franklin D. will do some fishing in local waters in the latter part of March . . . Florida would consider such a trip in the nature of a national pardon for the attempted assassination of the Chief Executive . . . The Earl Carroll beauties here have the town in an uproar . . . I met one of them in a Rolls-Royce yesterday morning on Flagler street . . . "That damned yacht broke down again," she said, "so I'm shopping for an anchor" . . . The poor kids are doing all right . . . Sailor Baruch was partied the other night and hasn't been seen since . . . It takes five days to recover if the party is a good one . . . Vincent Lopez has gone to the dogs . . . His band is playing at the Biscayne Kennel Club . . . Jack Pearl, who left last night, paid for his trip with his winnings at the dice tables.

• • • •

Gambling in clubs and casinos, banned so far, created a brisk demand for headache powders among the local proprietors and concessionaires. Each one of them imported expensive shows and big-name bands, counting on the gambling to defray the additional expense.

It appears now that the ban will be lifted entirely or relaxed. Several of the local spots are operating their gaming rooms, and the clicking of roulette wheels and the soft purr of dice skidding along the green baize dice tables now rises on the night air.

With the race track, the dog races and the gambling casinos are in swing. Miami offers you every possible way of losing your dough. If you have any left over, you pay the hotel bills. One hotel here charges $35 a day for a room, and if you are hungry, you can get a steak for $8, providing you have a personal letter from the cow that supplied it.

One influential New Yorker was complaining bitterly to me today. "It's terrible," he moaned. "Just because I didn't have enough money for breakfast, the hotel is holding my wife for ransom."

Virginia Justice's Salary Garnisheed By Paper Concern

Chatham, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—Magistrate Charles R. Warren tonight was believed to be the first such official in Virginia to be garnisheed for his salary under a proceeding filed against him by the Virginia Paper Co. of Richmond for $408 and costs.

The papers were filed January 31 with C. E. Terry, county treasurer; A. H. Moses, county auditor, and the Pittsylvania County Board of Supervisors.

Warren filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States court at Danville Tuesday listing no assets but enumerating his liabilities in the form of notes in the bank and open accounts totaling $4,328.50.

Warren, who formerly operated a weekly paper here, practiced law at the local bar until he was named trial justice by Judge Turner Clement.

True Dream

Grocer Wakes Up and Shoots Intruder.

Baltimore, Feb. 6 (AP).—Samuel Winokour's dreams came true, but they were about a burglar. He sent the intruder to the hospital in serious condition with a bullet in his side.

Winokour, a grocer, went to sleep last night and dreamed someone had broken into his store. He awoke with a start to hear footsteps on the stairs leading from his living quarters on the second floor to the store below.

Pistol in hand, he investigated. He came face to face with his "dream," and in the ensuing struggle he shot Lawrence Green, a colored man, who was in the building.

Hagerstown Invites Nice.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 6 (AP).—Gov. Harry W. Nice has been invited to attend the annual Lincoln Day banquet in the Masonic Temple here on February 12.

Judge George W. Maxey, of the Pennsylvania supreme bench, will be the principal speaker.

134 Million Tax Paid in Virginia

State 7th Largest Contributor to U. S. Revenues in 1934.

Virginia was the Nation's seventh largest taxpayer in 1934, according to the Associated Press.

This was shown yesterday in an Internal Revenue Bureau report which disclosed increases in all Federal tax payments in the State over the previous year.

The total paid in the Virginia collection district was $134,073,751, an increase of $22,000,000 over 1933. The States ahead of the Old Dominion on the list were New York, Illinois, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, California and Ohio.

The income tax total for the year was $9,576,212, against $8,014,603 for 1933. Miscellaneous internal revenue, including the tobacco taxes, increased from $101,570,773 to $115,918,178. Agricultural adjustment taxes were $8,569,353 in 1934, compared with $2,352,457.

Slayer Will Get Hearing Tuesday

Richmond, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—After a week's observation James M. Gibbs, confessed shotgun slayer of his lifelong friend, David F. Lester, will be given a preliminary hearing in police court next Tuesday.

He was brought into court today, but the case was continued until next week to allow authorities to determine whether he is mentally fit to be released under $3,000 bond.

In a signed confession Gibbs said he shot and instantly killed Lester after the latter threatened to choke him.

Spine Is Injured But Bus Driver Stays at Wheel

Jack Aspen, of Philadelphia, Greyhound Line bus driver, on the New York to Washington run, who is well known here, yesterday drove his bus 10 miles suffering a spinal injury before he asked for aid, according to the Associated Press at Baltimore.

The driver was lifted from his seat by station workers at Baltimore and taken to a hospital where physicians said he was suffering from a possible spinal fracture.

Report Due Today On Liquor 'Plot'

Several Face Indictment at Harrisonburg, Va.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—What the Federal grand jury here has discovered about an alleged whisky conspiracy in Franklin County, Va., is expected to be revealed in a report tomorrow. The jury has been at work since October in an investigation of supposed wholesale violations of the internal revenue laws.

Finding it impossible to complete its work today, even by recourse to a night session, the jury adjourned to meet again at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. When it meets then it is expected to act quickly on the question of indicting additional persons whose names have been brought into the investigation and probably will present its report to Judge John Paul during the day.

Whether the evidence gathered by Federal revenue agents who operated for a year in what the Wickersham report called "the wettest county in the United States," during the latter part of the prohibition era, would result in one blanket indictment or several individual true bills, was one of the secrets of the jury room tonight.

Reassessment Sought in State

Five Counties in Western Maryland Also Ask Return of Roads.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 6 (AP).—Immediate reassessment of real estate in Maryland and return of lateral roads to county supervision were requested by county commissioners from five western Maryland counties at a meeting here today.

Because of the absence of representatives from several counties on account of stormy weather, the commissioners decided to hold a meeting here next Monday to form a permanent organization of Western Shore commissioners, similar to an association on the Eastern Shore.

Jerome A. Loughlin, attorney for the Howard County commissioners, was named temporary chairman and R. M. Hill, assistant clerk of the Allegany County board, was appointed temporary secretary. Frederick, Allegany, Washington, Carroll and Cecil counties were represented at the meeting.

Monday's meeting was called also to determine the sentiment of the Western Shore commissioners on various issues scheduled for consideration by the Maryland County Commissioners Association. The attorneys for the various boards were asked to attend.

Farley Will Dedicate Postoffice at Norfolk

Norfolk, Feb. 6 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley will dedicate Norfolk's new postoffice and Federal office building March 6, a telegram received here today said.

Earl W. White, chairman of the program committee, said Senator Harry F. Byrd and Representative Colgate W. Darden, jr., would take part.

Case Postponement Granted Lindsay

Manslaughter Charge Denied by Former Lawyer.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—David H. Lindsay, 34, who was Commonwealth's attorney of Gloucester County during the "oyster war" days, today asked time to prepare his alibi defense against charges of involuntary manslaughter placed against him last night when he was arrested after a fatal hit-and-run accident.

The police court hearing was postponed until February 15. Meanwhile, Lindsay, who now is a radio salesman, is being kept in jail in default of a $5,000 bond.

He told the court today that he was visiting a young lady on the boulevard at the time Monday night when an automobile crashed through a Broad street safety zone, killing H. G. McCalister and injuring two young women. He asked for continuance to allow time to bring into court his alibi witnesses.

Cold Facts about Quick Starting

WHAT WE GUARANTEED

Under the terms of our Introductory Cash Refund Offer, Aerotype ESSO* was guaranteed to—

(1) "fire" faster and start quicker
(2) attain peak performance in less time and with less "warm-up"
(3) deliver more power
(4) afford higher "anti-knock" qualities
(5) assure better acceleration
(6) develop more speed, and
(7) possess greater flexibility
—than any other fuel made

Modeled after U. S. Army Fighting Grade Aviation Fuel—hence its name.

Confirmed by 1½ Million Users

From the very start, we avoided making extravagant claims for Aerotype ESSO.

There was no doubt in our own minds that it would outperform all other motor car fuels. But we wanted Aerotype ESSO, itself, to prove what it would do.

Therefore, we introduced it under an unconditional guarantee*—offering to refund in cash the premium paid for it, to any user who did not find it the most efficient motor car fuel he had ever used.

Quick Starting a Feature

Among the things Aerotype ESSO had to prove were that it would "fire" faster . . start quicker . . and deliver peak performance in less time and with less "warm-up" than any other fuel made.

How well it demonstrated its ability to fulfill these requirements is disclosed by the following simple and conclusive data:

INTRODUCTORY GUARANTEE OFFER IN FORCE—DEC. 1 TO DEC. 21, 1934

No. purchasing Aerotype ESSO	1,529,752
No. refund requests for all reasons (less than 1 out of every 10,000 who bought)	113
Users who endorsed product	1,529,639
Amount of Aerotype ESSO sold (approximately)	$3,000,000.00
Total amount of cash refunds	$31.20

Consequently, in urging other motorists to try Aerotype ESSO we do so with the conviction that they will be as favorably impressed as the millions now using it.

Local Bills Are Offered Two Houses

Measures Introduced So Far Affect Six Counties of State.

By Laurance F. Stuntz,
(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6.—A flood of bills streamed to the rostrums of both houses of the Legislature today as the members began the serious work of the session, after introduction of the budget last night.

Local bills included measures affecting Montgomery, Anne Arundel, Charles, Allegany, Wicomico and Worcester Counties. A local law for Hagerstown was also introduced. Among the State-wide bills were proposed heavier taxes on movie theaters, changes in the license fees for the race tracks, and a reduction in the minimum size of oysters which may be taken in State waters.

The terms of the mayor and town council of Glen Echo will be increased from two to four years by the bill introduced by Delegate Ruth E. Shoemaker (Democrat), of Montgomery County. The measure has the approval of the town authorities. The other Montgomery measure was a resolution of approval for the construction by the Federal Government of a bridge over the Potomac at Great Falls. It was offered by Delegates Joseph A. Cantrel and Walter M. Magruder (Fusion), of Montgomery County. The resolution gives State approval to the construction only if all the cost is paid from Federal funds.

Anne Arundel Bills.

The Anne Arundel County bills provide for economies in the office of the county treasurer, for weekly statement of county expenditures and for financial statements to be furnished the Civic Board of Herald Harbor.

The number of clerks in the county treasurer's office is reduced from five to three, and the appropriation for their salary is cut from $6,500 per year to $4,000. The bill providing for the weekly itemized list of expenses provides that the list shall be published in one weekly paper in the county. The third measure gives the civic board of Herald Harbor sole authority to decide what roads in the town shall be improved. It also stipulates that the county treasurer shall furnish the town a quarterly statement showing how much money has been spent for town purposes.

The date of publication of the Charles County delinquent tax list is advanced from August 1 to April 1 by the terms of the bill introduced by Delegate Rudolf A. Carrico (Democrat), Charles.

The Allegany County bill merely continues the rate of pay of the tax collector in the first tax district at the same rate as in 1933 and 1934. The arrangement will be extended through 1938. The collector gets 90 per cent of the amount of his commission on collections in 1931. The change from a straight commission basis was made in 1933, when smaller collections decreased the amount of his pay.

Pawnbrokers' Reports.

A bill offered by Senator Ernest W. Miller (Republican), Washington, provides that all pawnbrokers in Hagerstown shall make a daily report to the chief of police of all property bought or left as a pledge. It will enable stolen articles to be located as soon as they are sold, and is similar to a law now in force in the City of Washington.

Wicomico County taxes would be payable in four installments under the bill introduced by Senator O. Straughn Lloyd (Republican), Wicomico. The payments would be due in January, April, June and October. Another bill affecting both Wicomico and Worcester Counties will allow the county liquor control boards, which operate the county dispersaries, to buy liquor from dealers out of the State without taking out a wholesaler's license. This provision, although provided in the Montgomery County law, was inadvertently left out of the Worcester and Wicomico laws when they were passed at the special session of 1933.

The bill decreasing the minimum size of oysters will add to the income of oystermen by allowing them to sell a larger proportion of their catch. The minimum is reduced from 3 inches to 2½ inches. Another bill offered today will permit the use of automobile license tags until April 1, instead of having them expire on January 1. Still another proposed measure will establish the same salary scale for colored school teachers as for white.

Betting Tax Boosted.

The change in the race track taxing scheme will reduce the daily license fee, but increase the tax on the amounts wagered. The daily fee is cut from $6,000 to $5,000, while the betting tax is increased from 1 per cent to 2½ per cent. This bill has the approval of the tracks, and was introduced by majority leaders. The proposed tax is only one-third of that suggested by Republican Gov. Harry W. Nice, whose party is in the minority in both houses.

The higher taxes proposed for movie theaters are double the present sliding scale, with additional taxes imposed on chains of two or more theaters. The new taxes are $50 for the second house of a chain, $100 for the third, $150 for the fourth, and $200 on each theater over four. Half the amount of the tax goes to the town where the movie house is located. The sponsor of the bill pointed out that the legalization of Sunday movies two years ago gave the theaters 52 more business days a year, and that they were therefore able to pay the tax.

Other measures introduced in today's session included a bill to forbid house-to-house sales of drugs and medicines, to make claims for wages preferred in bankruptcy cases, and to examine and license barbers and optometrists.

The House Ways and Means Committee reported unfavorably on the bill establishing an auto inspection station in each county. At a committee hearing, it was objected that the bill would increase the number of State jobs and that the work of enforcing the inspection regulations would take all the time of the State police fores.

Rents Apartment Through Post Ads

Alimony Defaulter Likes Jail; May Stay on Indefinitely

Prisoner Reported Saying He Favors Cell to Paying Ex-Wife.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Unless William Almer Barnes, of New Windsor, changes his mind, Sheriff John Shipley, of Carroll County, believes he will be on his hands for an indefinite time. Barnes is in jail for contempt of court for nonpayment of alimony. Barnes is reported to have said he does not intend to pay, adding that he likes the jail and is beginning to feel at home.

Barnes' alimony difficulties date back to 1924, when his wife, Mrs. Hazel E. Barnes, was awarded a divorce. During the last few years Barnes has been before the court several times for defaulting payments.

On several occasions his hearing was postponed when he promised to pay, but at the recent November term of court he failed to give an excuse for being nearly a year in arrears. Chief Judge Francis Neal Parke ordered him to jail.

City to Fete Washington On Birthday

Cherry Tree Ceremony Will Take Place in Fredericksburg.

Descendant of General to Attend; Mayor Will Speak.

By Wilbur Jennings
(Special Correspondent of The Post).

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 6.—The story of George Washington and the cherry tree, age-old and known to every child and grown-up in America, will be brought to life here on February 22, in honor of the 203d anniversary of Washington's birth, when a cherry tree will be planted with appropriate exercises on the George Washington boyhood farm near this city, as near the spot where George is reputed to have taken his father's hatchet and chopped down the young tree as is possible to obtain through stories that have grown up with today's generation.

George Steptoe Washington, 70-year-old resident of Philadelphia and a collateral descendant of the famous Revolutionary general, will plant the tree after an address is made by some distinguished citizen of Virginia.

The tree planting, arranged by the Chamber of Commerce in connection with National Cherry Week, will also be marked by the unveiling of a marker on the farm which ranks next to Wakefield and Mount Vernon in the life of Washington.

Exercises Start at 2 P. M.

School children of the city will have a full holiday to attend the exercises which will begin at 2 o'clock. The program will include band concerts, an address by Mayor R. J. Payne, the planting of the tree, and a talk by a speaker as yet undesignated.

The farm on which the celebration is to take place has been made famous in classroom history. Every American school child has heard it through the story of the cherry tree and Washington's destructive hatchet. It also is the place where George, as a young boy, broke the neck of his mother's favorite colt and from which he tossed the Spanish dollar across the Rappahannock, a feat never before or since accomplished by any other.

It was closely identified with the life of the Washington family and was owned by George Washington from the time of his father's death in 1743 until about 1775, when Washington sold it to his friend, Gen. Hugh Mercer, afterwards killed in the fighting at Princeton.

Farm Given to George.

The Washington family moved to the farm when George was a boy of about 7 and since one of Washington's sisters, Mildred, was born there and died there, it is the only place at which the entire Washington family ever lived. The elder Washington, too, died on the farm, willing it to his eldest son. It was the only piece of property left to George Washington by his father.

New Leaders To Supervise Apple Event

Chairman, Treasurer and Director All Wish to Be Replaced.

Several Foreign Lands Mentioned as Winner of Queenship.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—With several of the heads of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival saying they do not desire reelection this year, it appeared today that a new group of directing heads may have charge of the 1935 exhibition, the twelfth since 1924.

William E. Cooper, local groceryman, who has been chairman of the executive committee since 1924, has indicated that he will not accept reelection. Clifford D. Grim, treasurer of the fete, has declared that he will not be a candidate for reelection this year.

The position of director general, the official who has charge of whipping details into shape and of arranging "the big show," probably will be filled by a new head, it was understood with an announcement from J. Pinckney Arthur, director general for the last two years, that it was his desire to step aside.

A meeting of the board of directors of the organization is to be held soon at which Dr. Lewis M. Allen, chief marshal of the fete's feature parade, and a nominating committee will make nominations for the above positions.

The perennial question, "Who will be queen this year?" has again started. During the last 11 years, queens have been chosen from Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Belgium and England.

The Apple Blossom Festival is held annually to glorify the blossoming of 11,000,000 apple trees in the commercial apple orchards of the Shenandoah-Potomac-Cumberland belt of Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

In the selection of the 1935 blossom queen, France, Germany, Holland and Argentina have been mentioned.

Relief Setup For Virginia Is Reorganized

Staunton Is Among Cities Selected as Area Headquarters.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Staunton has been selected as an area headquarters in the new setup of the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration, with Howard G. Chandler, formerly of Woodstock, as area administrator.

The district embraces the counties of Augusta, Rockingham and Highland, and the cities of Staunton and Harrisonburg. Under the old arrangement there were 118 administrations in Virginia—one each for the counties and cities—while under the new set-up, there will be only 28 area administrations.

Miss Harriet Tynes will continue as district field supervisor in charge of the social welfare department. J. Frank Glover has been made district engineer, and Payne Terry will continue as district auditor.

In the southern area embracing Alleghany, Botetourt, Rockbridge and Bath counties and the cities of Buena Vista and Clifton Forge, Phillip Day, of Lexington, will be administrator. He was formerly projects engineer in Buena Vista and Rockbridge County.

Area headquarters for the southern and northern districts have not been announced, according to information available here.

Legislators Try Effect of Drug In Cigarettes

Marihuana Called 'Powerful Stimulant at Hearing in Annapolis.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Two members of the House ways and means committee who heard marihuana cigarettes described as "a powerful stimulant" at a hearing on a bill to ban them, were later found to be smoking the exhibits in the House chamber "to see what effect they really have."

One member said that the only effect on him was that he was not thinking so clearly as usual.

The cigarettes exhibited before the committee were provided by Lieut. Robert A. Bradley, of the Baltimore narcotic squad, who said he bought 15 of them in Baltimore for $2.10. There is no law against possession of them now.

Delegate Jacob Blum, of Baltimore, author of the bill, said that the cigarettes had been found on sale, available to school children, in Upper Marlboro, Hagerstown and Annapolis. It was Mr. Blum who said the cigarettes were a stimulant.

In addition to Lieut. Bradley, others who appeared on behalf of the bill were Dr. Robert H. Riley, director of the State board of health; A. L. Tennyson, counsel of the Federal Commission of Narcotic Work; Dr. R. L. Swain, deputy food and drug commissioner of Maryland, and Boyd Martin, Federal narcotic agent.

Winchester Woman Freed in Negro's Death

Winchester, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—A jury in Corporation Court today returned a verdict of not guilty for Mrs. Rena Johnson, young white woman, accused of murder in connection with the shooting of Lewis Washington, colored, at her home several months ago. Mrs. Johnson pleaded self defense.

Attorneys for Mrs. Johnson placed witnesses on the stand to substantiate the self-defense plea. The defendant said Washington attacked her, and that a pistol she had taken from a sewing machine drawer exploded during the scuffle. The State contended that Washington was shot during a dispute over his failure to pay for liquor he had obtained at the Johnson home.

'Annaburg' Once Was Rendezvous of D. C., Virginia Society.

By Robert Knight
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

Manassas, Va., Feb. 6.—Annaburg, estate of the late Robert Portner, brewer, stands at the outskirts of this town today as a deserted monument to the mauve glories of the Victorian Age.

The crumbling remnants of a swimming pool, weed-covered bed of an artificial lake that once held swans and schools of bass, bronze fountains and a tract formerly stocked with deer, all have become mute and lifeless surroundings of the empty 30-room mansion.

And today only the highly imaginative and a few of the old-timers can picture Annaburg as it was in the opening years of the twentieth century when it was the rendezvous of Washington and Virginia society. Although the mansion was built of brick and wood seasoned on the premises four years prior to erection, little of the smart and groomed appearance remain. Peeking through windows crusted with dirt, an oil portrait of the entire Portner family can still be seen hanging in the living room. Almost 20 by 15 feet in size it was too large to be removed. The music room has a fading ceiling, embossed with angels, said to be the faces of the Portner children.

Had Famous Liquor Cellars.

Deep and extensive cellars tunnel beneath the house. It was here the Portners kept their famous supply of fine liquors and ales.

A hundred yards west of the house stands what was known as the beer tower. It is a replica of an old tower Mrs. Portner admired on her many trips to Europe with her husband. Covered with ivy and reaching 30 feet into the air, it gives the grounds somewhat a medieval atmosphere. Although it was filled with relics and curios, the fine collection of mugs and other beer-drinking facilities was considered the feature. During warm summer weather, gray-heads recall that the top of the turret was sought as an elevated beer garden.

The deer park, with the artificial lake along the course of historic Bull Run Creek, was well stocked for hunting. The ponds sported bass for fishing and a tremendous school of rare-colored tropicals for ornamental purposes. A yacht floated majestically on the comparatively confined waters.

Fire Companies' Service.

Annapolis Gets Dewey's Flag

Relic Came From Widow of the Olympia's Quartermaster.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6 (AP).—The flag which flew at the masthead of Admiral Dewey's flagship, the U. S. S. Olympia, in the Battle of Manila Bay, was presented to the Naval Academy today.

E. Leroy Pelletier, of Detroit, Mich., who received the flag from the widow of Quartermaster Bass, of the Olympia, presented it to Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers. He accepted it as superintendent of the academy.

Pelletier was accompanied to the academy by Grover Farnsworth, of Boston, Mass., and David Glasglow Farragut, great-nephew of Rear Admiral Farragut.

"Grand Old Girl," Opening Yesterday at RKO-Keith's, Is Eulogy of Teachers

May Robson Is Star of Drama Of Small Town

Auxiliaries Are Excellent; to Begin Movies in Air; Amusement Notes.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

"GRAND OLD GIRL." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Wanda Tuchok, adapted to the screen by Milton Krims and John Twist, starring May Robson, with Mary Carlisle, Alan Hale, Fred MacMurray, Etienne Girardot, William Barress, Hale Hamilton, Edward Van Sloan, Ben Alexander and Gavin Gordon. Directed by John Robertson. Reviewed Tuesday afternoon.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Based on those sturdy virtues that have won the country's profound respect for the profession of school teaching, this frequently tearful subject at times becomes just a little maudlin in its endeavor to glorify a superannuated educator.

May Robson, as Laura Bayles, affectionately nicknamed "Gunpowder" by her charges, is a sort of militant Carrie Nation in her zeal in ridding the little town of Avondale of the blight of a "soda parlor" with a vicious back room where the pupils in the high school over which she has presided as principal for 38 years may drink and gamble to their hearts' content. This ominous establishment is operated by one of her former pupils who enjoys the protection of the town's political "big shot," whose young daughter is one of Miss Bayles' major problems.

Single-handed "Gunpowder" sets about "getting the goods" on Clarence "Click" Dade. She finally manages this by winning a large sum of money from him with a pair of his own crooked dice, which she has secured upon a previous visit when she gained entrance to the back room by arranging a heavy chain and an ice cream truck in such fashion as to yank off the iron-barred door!

Earns Long Suspension.

At this juncture, the political powers of Avondale decide that Miss Bayles has gone far enough and extend her a gratuitous leave of absence of indefinite duration, placing a progressive young man from the big city in her place. The future holds out little hope of reinstatement until the President of the United States, a former student who profited by her guidance, puts in an appearance in the old home town and, with his arm around the elderly guardian of Avondale's youth, delivers a ringing eulogy of the woman and her work.

The unannounced and unexpected visit of the President was inspired by a telegram from the rascal, Dade, of all people, who, after all, it seems, had a heart of gold.

While there is much of merit in the veteran Miss Robson's portrayal of the stellar role, there is also much in the development of the story that so far transcends the logic of the circumstances as to make certain of the incidents appear a trifle grotesque. For example, it is a bit far-fetched for the high school principal to enter into active competition with Dade's back room by opening a jazz parlor called the Front Room, where the village young people may indulge their innocent tastes for lively, but innocuous, entertainment at modest prices.

The Whole Town Reforms.

It also places a slight strain upon the credulity that Dade, the gay and irresponsible Gerry Killaine and even the boss politician himself should, in the end, fall under the regenerating influence of a woman whose fine character and example had been an active factor in the little city's life for an unbroken period of 38 years without visible effect upon either their morals or motivating impulses.

Miss Robson contributes an earnest and at times deeply moving performance in the role of the crusading principal who is guide, philosopher and friend to the student body. There is much humor in her characterization as well as a generous measure of pathos.

The supporting cast is quite equal to the tasks imposed upon it, always with the reservation that the material with which its members have to deal imposes a sometimes insuperable handicap.

Mary Carlisle is the town hoyden who occasions so much concern and Fred MacMurray, a stalwart young man new to these eyes, is the strong-willed and strong-armed truck driver who assists Miss Bayles in bringing her to her senses, if any. Hale Hamilton is the town boss and Etienne Girardot an especially efficient assistant principal. The President of the United States, whose back only is seen, is played in reverse by Gavin Gordon, who sounds sufficiently erudite and literate to lend the role some auricular realism. The others whose names are recited in the small-type paragraph preceding these remarks play with varying degrees of skill.

Some Excellent Auxiliaries.

Four items comprise the supplementary features of the new bill at RKO-Keith's. "Stranger Than Fiction" is a new issue of Universal's freak reel to which James Wallington, the well-known radio announcer, contributes running comment and description. The Pathe News, for some inexplicable reason, yesterday carried, completely restored, the Hauptmann trial pictures that were ordered off the same screen last Saturday. A "Scrappy" cartoon comedy, "The Gloom Chasers," is based on an original idea and is genuinely amusing.

The most engaging subject on the program, however, is "The Spirit of 1976," a musical travesty cut in tabloid size from the pattern of "Of Thee I Sing," in which the populace rebel against so much wealth and leisure and go on strike for the restoration of work. The piece is well acted and splendidly sung. But, of course, its premise is utterly fantastic! Who ever heard of bootlegging labor?

A touch of what may be described as the antithesis of professional jealousy asserted itself during the performance of Verdi's "Rigoletto" by the Civic Grand Opera Company in the Washington Auditorium last night. Eleanor Tibbett, a cousin of Lawrence Tibbett, the Metropolitan's leading baritone, a member of the ballet, sprained her ankle just before the minuet number. In the emergency her place was taken on short notice by Dania Krupska, prima ballerina, who volunteered her services, not only to preserve the balance of the dance, but quite as much to save a ballet girl her job. It is not unusual for a chorus girl to essay a solo dancer's task, but when a prima ballerina becomes a chorus girl, so to speak, that is something else again—a little like the man biting the dog.

Pictures on the Wing.

For the first time in the history of aviation, a motion-picture will be screened during the regularly scheduled flight of a passenger airliner and the proceedings broadcast on Thursday of this week, February 7, when a group of distinguished guests will see the inauguration of this "Flying Theater" while en route to Pittsburgh, Pa., via Central Airlines.

This flight is described as a forecast of the air service that will characterize the near future.

Among the guests on the inaugural flight Thursday will be Gen. Douglas C. McDougal, assistant commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps; Senator Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania; Gene Vidal, director of air commerce, and Stephen A. Cisler, general superintendent of mails. Philip De Ivernois and C. B. Neill will have charge of sound and projection on the trip. The broadcast announcer and newspaper correspondents will occupy the remaining space.

Plane To Be Christened.

The plane will be christened before leaving Washington Airport by Mrs. William Frank Allen, the former Kathleen King, daughter of Senator King, of Utah. She will be escorted by a special guard of 18 Marines from the Marine Barracks.

The ship will leave at 5:35 p. m., making a regular flight and carrying United States mails.

The picture selected for this special showing is "Devil Dogs of the Air," the new Cosmopolitan production, released by Warner Bros., and is especially appropriate since it was filmed with the cooperation by the Marine Corps flying forces.

Representatives of the Navy Department and the Marine Corps, Senators, Representatives and other Government officials will attend a reception for the first "Flying Theater" guests at the Mayflower at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

It was not so long ago, you will recall—or will you?—that a great many motion picture theaters were no larger than a modern passenger plane. So why not?

Eight dances never before seen in the United States or Europe are said to be embodied in the action of "Rumba," in which George Raft and Carole Lombard will be seen on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning Friday. These are a real West Indian interpretation of "La Rumba," of which this writer never heard during five years' residence in the West Indies; La Jota, an arm and leg dance; Son, Donson, West Indies tango, Rumba Negrita, Rumba Cubana and Rumba Tap Rhythm. The "little Negro rumba," the "Cuban rumba" and the "rumba tap" are fairly comprehensible, but one would be interested to know what the "Son" and "Donson" are and in what language they are named.

Pandemonium Note.

With the editorial offices of The Post in process of transplantation from where they are to where they're going, with the opening of the new addition to The Post Building, it is Master George "Last Line" Considine who hands me this on a slip of otherwise undefiled copy paper: "There's so much confusion around here, mightn't one well say, 'And so to bedlam?'"

One not only might, George, you did! Or hadn't you noticed?

Offers Tip-Off to the Ladies

Minna Gombell, whose smiling countenance is pictured above, will vouchsafe her sister Americans some valuable hints in the matter of garb if one is to judge from the title and role she plays in the new Monogram picture, "Women Must Dress." This subject tells the inside story of the fashion marts and what happens when women forget the dictum embodied in the name of the play—something, by the way, of which Miss Gombell, one of the screen's smartest dressers, never has been guilty.

Hollywood

Hollywood, Feb. 6.

THE MOVIE fans deny that they are the guys with the soap and water who go around washing up actors and actresses. They insist that they are not that cruel; that they do not give old favorites the finger. The producers can't pass the blame to them and go unanswered. Many letters said: "Put Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall together in a picture and see us go to the box office." The sentiment expressed in most of the letters is: "I couldn't be that mean to the different stars who have given me hours of pleasure. I'm very grateful to them for escape from a very dull existence . . ."

The general opinion is that bad stories help to wash up the stars quickly, and that stars getting old refuse to do so gracefully.

Among the hundreds of extras in the mob scenes for De Mille's "The Crusaders," thankful for the opportunity to make $7.50 for the day are: Vera Steadman, a former leading lady, a former Mack Sennett bathing beauty who shared a dressing room next to Gloria Swanson and Carole Lombard; Alice Lake, who once used to be stopped by autograph seekers, but who now stops the stars and asks for their autographs; Harry Meyer, a big star when he made the silent flicker, "A Connecticut Yankee;" King Baggot, a former matinee idol and one of the first big name directors in pictures.

GARBO has been playing tennis with Willis Goldbeck, a scenario writer, at the court on Dolores Del Rio's estate. Goldbeck wrote a scenario, "Lili," and gave it to Greta to read. The principal character in the scenario is Garbo, herself, and it tells of her adventures with a sailor. Greta didn't like it.

They are trying to renew the old Garbo-Dietrich feud for publicity purposes. Greta and Marlene have three things in common. They both have been going with Felixe Rollo; they both have the same manager, Harry Edington, although at present Garbo has been ignoring Edington; they both go to the same tailor, Watson. It is really the tailor who is most concerned. He sees to it that Garbo and Dietrich never order the same style suit or the same fabric.

Ted Fio Rita goes off that soup program because of his battle with Dick Powell. My favorite popular song right now is "Isle of Capri." I like it because of the lyric—it's the only song I heard in which the fellow doesn't get the girl. He makes love to a married woman and is afraid to take a chance. At least it's different from the usual clinch under the usual moon. At a table in the Paramount commissary a group of writers and directors were discussing artistic and commercial pictures. "Consider Lubitsch," said a writer, "his 'Broken Lullaby' was a fine picture, but it didn't make any money." "It did for me," chimed in Lubitsch from the far end of the table.

PETER LORRE, that fine actor who gave one of the screen's greatest performances in "M," has been at Columbia for months now waiting to begin his first American flicker, which will be "Crime and Punishment." Lorre is a mild, pleasant person, but he still terrifies anyone who saw him in that picture. It is amusing to watch actors and actresses when they are introduced to him. Lorre tells of an incident which occurred during the filming of "M." A friend of his, a police inspector, was always on the set when Lorre was working. When it came time to make the scene in which the criminals hold court, Lorre and the director, Fritz Lang, decided to get odd types. They wanted men different from the usual types who portray movie criminals. They toured the slums of Berlin in recruiting strange-looking characters to become movie actors. On the day when they shot the scene the police inspector left the set, returned with several policemen, stopped the scene and arrested four criminals they had been searching for.

Sam Goldwyn, who speaks with a slight accent, looked at the rushes on an Anna Sten picture and hurried to the set. Goldwyn told the director that one scene would have to be made over again, because in it Miss Sten spoke with too much of an accent. Miss Sten was called into the conference and was a bit disturbed by Goldwyn's criticism of her accent. "Vell, then, Mr. Goldvyn," she answered, "how vould you say the line?"

The censors eliminated one of Ann Harding's lines in "Biography of a Bachelor Girl." They wondered how they ever passed it when reading the script. The line is Miss Harding's answer to the question concerning what kind of a person Edward Horton is. She answers: "He's fun occasionally." The censors discovered that the line read okay, but sounded risque when read fast.

4 Republicans Seeking Posts as Magistrates

Frostburg, Md., Feb. 6 (AP).—One woman and three men, all Republicans, are actively seeking appointments to the people's court for the magistrate posts now held by Owen L. Porter and Earl Cobey, Democrats.

Women's Place In Home, Pastor Tells City Club

Pocomoke City, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—The Rev. John A. Ditto, pastor of the Baptist Church of this city, discussed "Why God Made Women" before approximately 50 women gathered to celebrate the ninth anniversary of the Woman's Club of this city this afternoon. The Rev. Ditto said women should be home makers and business and political reformers.

The other speakers of the day were Mrs. J. K. Lang, president; nine former presidents, Mrs. C. F. Wilson, of Harrington, Del., and Mrs. Grady Powell, of this city, all of whom gave short talks. The meeting, held at the White House, was preceded by a luncheon.

Smuts Reported Improved.

Cape Town, Union of South Africa, Feb. 6 (AP).—Gen. Jan Christian Smuts' condition was greatly improved today and his temperature normal. The 65-year-old statesman was taken ill several days ago.

Maryland Race Bill Calls for Track Tax Cut of $5,500 Daily

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

SURE, and the supply of Irish champions has been sadly unequal to the demand during the past two decades which have seen the Italians, the Poles, the Jews, the Slavs and even the Americans crowd the celebrated Celts out of the sporting picture, but steps are being taken.

Within the past month the transatlantic steamers have deposited on our shores a pair of likely-looking lads from County Cork, culled from the hills of the Ould Sod by American promoters who think in terms of gate receipts. One Jack O'Mahoney, a fine broth of a lad, is already engaged in gainful occupation on America's wrestling mats, and now comes Irisher Jack Doyle, hailed as the greatest Irish-born heavyweight fighter since mighty Jim Coffey.

Jimmy McLarnin stands alone as the last of a long line of Irishers who have contributed more than any other race to championship prize-fight history, and his magnetism at the turnstiles is well known. Just why an Irish fighter or an Irish wrestler is supposed to be a great attraction is a mystery unless it is explained by the popular conception of the cartoon-type of Irisher pictured with a brickbat in either hand and willing to take the consequences, come what may.

Maybe the whole business is governed by the same economic theory of supply and demand. The natural demand for Irish champions has been whetted by their scarcity, no doubt, and thus we find American promoters combing the hills of the Emerald Isle for sons of Erin who can fight a little, or maybe wrestle a bit.

BOSTON, particularly, represents ready money for any Irish lad with a fair share of ability. The huge Irish element in the Hub tumbles over itself in hero worship each time a likely-looking Celt comes to town. Palooka Jim Maloney, who couldn't get out of the way of a fire plug in his best days, packed them in Boston when he was never better than a fourth-rate heavyweight. And now this Dan O'Mahoney, a wrestler, is the new darling of the galleries in Boston.

It was O'Mahoney's success in Boston, no doubt, that sent Walter Friedman post haste to bring back his Irish heavyweight boxer, Doyle. In two bouts in Boston against the Dusek brothers, Rudy and Ernie, O'Mahoney wrestled to a gate of 32,000 fans, winning both matches, of course, and at this writing would fill Braves Field with fans against any opponent.

And now, no less a personage than Jack Dempsey is collaborating in the build-up of this Doyle, who is described as a handsome, brawny lad of 6 feet 3 inches and 220 pounds, who is better looking, a sweeter singer, a better actor and a harder hitter than Maxie Baer. Other than that, I suppose, he has no talents.

According to Dempsey, Doyle will be brought along slowly, meaning that he will not be matched with the big shots in the heavyweight class until he makes his own reputation in the United States. But if he hits harder than Baer, methinks they will have trouble bringing him along slowly.

OF the two, O'Mahoney and Doyle, the wrestler is a far better bet to arrive at the world championship. O'Mahoney is under the personal direction of Mons. Jacques Curley ,who makes and unmakes champions almost at will, and, with Jim Londos' drawing power apparently fading, the mantle of world champion can be draped very becomingly about the shoulders of the good-looking Irish boy.

Thus far, O'Mahoney has wrestled only three times in America—each time against the Duseks, Rudy and Ernie. O'Mahoney, at his present rate of packing 'em in, does not figure to lose a bout until he meets Londos and then the result doubtless will be the crowning of a new champion.

Doyle, the fighter, can be dragged only just so far up the fistic ladder by the Dempsey influence. Then he will be strictly on his own. The first fighter to beat Doyle will have a reputation and the Irisher will be on the spot every time he steps into the ring.

There hasn't been an Irish heavyweight who made capital of the fact since Corbett. Fitzsimmons was an Australian and Gene Tunney never did capture the fancy even of the Irish. Doyle, as champion, would restore the tradition of the Irish, but the difficulty is that he'll probably have to earn the title.

Navy Rallies To Top Va., 34 to 25

Three Rivals Ejected; Dornin and Ruge Lead in Comeback.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Playing in the best form it has exhibited this season, the University of Virginia basket ball team threw a scare into the strong Navy squad today, holding a lead more than half of the way, but finally succumbing to the higher local pressure in late stages when the Middie mainstays hit into their stride. The score was: Navy, 34; Virginia, 25.

Johnny Wilson, Navy's head coach, elected to send his second stringers into action to start hostilities. It early became apparent that the understudies would be unable to hold the Cavaliers in check. Though off somewhat in finding the range of the rims, the Virginians were passing in fine shape, and held command of the situation. Both combinations, in fact, put forth a strong defense in the scoring zone, with the result that baskets were few and far between.

At the end of ten minutes, Virginia led, 6 to 3. Then the Navy regulars went in, but instead of bringing about an immediate change in the situation, the Cavaliers, with Sturm and Zeisberg leading the attack, more than held their own, and at the intermission were in front, 16 to 10.

Dornin, Ruge Lead.

Dusty Dornin and Ruge, the latter a former Plebe, whose fine play lately undoubtedly has clinched him a regular varsity berth, led a second-half Navy rally that produced telling results.

Dornin started things with a double-decker, Ruge accounted for two, and Buzz Borries, captain and ace, registered one. Meanwhile, the best that the Cavalier's efforts produced were two goals from the penalty strip. Five minutes elapsed while this run of scoring was under way, and it knotted the count at 18-all. From then on the Tars were much the best, although the Cavaliers continued to battle gamely. During the next five minutes the Middies took the lead by five points, at 24 to 19, and the Virginians never again threatened.

Three are Ejected.

In the meantime, the Cavaliers busied themselves so much in guarding Borries that the Navy pilot frequently was crowded, and three of the visiting group, Rogers, Zeisberg and Smith, were ejected from the game via the personal foul route.

Dornin was Navy's outstanding star, registering seven times from the floor to lead the field in scoring with 14 points. Sturn was the "big gun" for the Viginians, collecting 5 goals and scoring twice from the strip.

Favorites Upset In Writers' Golf

Sims Beats Beach, Hughes Tops Fontaine Fox.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 6 (AP).—Hal Sims, the bridge expert, took clubs as trumps today and shot a 72 to eliminate Rex Beach, the writer, from the annual tournament of artists and writers, 6 and 5.

It was a day for the "dark horses" as Beach, the 1933 champion, and Fontaine Fox, defending titleholder, fell by the wayside. Fox bowed to Charles A. Hughes, Detroit, 1 up.

Grantland Rice, veteran sports scribe and former tournament champion, alone of the "old guard" survived. Rice defeated Fred Price, 2 up, to enter the semifinals.

Nats Will Play First 6 Games At Home

Twin Bill With Yanks on May 30 Lone Holiday Date Here.

By Shirley Povich.

THE 1935 American League playing schedule makes slightly disappointing reading for the Washington firm of Griffith Stadium, Inc., which is not dealt with too kindly by the little figures which command who plays who, when and where.

The Nats are one of the four teams which draw only one holiday date at home, where the larger profits accrue, as contrasted to the four clubs which drew two of the holiday plums recognized as Decoration Day, July 4, and Labor Day.

In the matter of Saturdays and Sundays, which rank as the choicest dates outside of legal holidays, all clubs shared alike. The schedule technicians were able to allot each club a dozen Saturdays and an equal number of Sundays at home.

Here Decoration Day.

Any sins committed against the Washington Club in the name of the schedule are offset in a great measure, however, by New York's presence at Griffith Stadium for the

Rowe Spurns $8,500 Salary, Demanding $12,000 Contract

EL DORADO, Ark., Feb. 6 (AP).—Schoolboy Rowe today was reported still dissatisfied with the contract offered him by the Detroit Tigers, although it was said his opinion would be reserved until he reports for spring training on March 1.

Rowe was understood to have received his first offer some two months ago and returned it promptly without revealing the terms. He was said to have been offered $8,500 and to be asking $12,500.

No confirmation of reports concerning Rowe's contract troubles could be obtained here, as the hurler was visiting his mother, Mrs. W. T. McGlothin at Dallas, Tex. His father, Thomas Rowe, said the Schoolboy was expected to return Monday or Tuesday.

Added to Rowe's worries today was the theft of his sedan given him by a Detroit manufacturer and Tiger fans after the El Dorado 6-footer almost broke the pitching record with 16 straight victories last year. The car was stolen from its parking place on an El Dorado street.

Virginians to Hold Show in Camden

Camden, S. C. Feb. 6 (Spl.).—The Virginians Horse Show will be held at the Virginians Stable here on Saturday afternoon, February 16, with Mr. and Mrs. Rigan McKinney, of Aiken and Westbury, Long Island, as judges. There will be ten classes as follows: Best steeplechase type, model hunters, middle and heavyweight hunters, open jumpers, green hunters, bridle path hacks, ladies' hunters, lightweight hunters, touch and out over 4-foot fences and steer class. Three ribbons will be awarded in each class.

The Virginians are a group of young people who formerly spent the winter in Warrenton and Middleburg, Va., and now pass the season in Camden. The committee includes the Misses Jean Finlaw and Wilhemine Kirby, Mrs. Damon de-Bois Wack, Randolph Duffey, J. North Fletcher and Thomas Waller.

The twenty-fifth annual Camden Horse Show has been set for March 13 and 14, with entries closing on Thursday, March 7.

Dizzy Refuses To Ride With Bosses

NEW YORK, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Dizzy Dean left today for Hot Springs, Ark., shunning an opportunity to ride last night with his bosses, President Sam Breadon and Vice President Branch Rickey, of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I was supposed to go last night," Dean said, "but I canceled my reservations when I found out Breadon and Rickey were riding the train."

Dizzy said he was going straight through to Hot Springs without any stopover at St. Louis. He will go to his winter home at Braden, Fla., in about two weeks "to await developments."

A four-day series of debates failed to bring a settlement between the star pitcher of the world champions and his bosses on his demands for a salary of $25,000 for next season.

He has asked the Cardinals to meet his figure or trade him. He said the New York Giants would pay $100,000 for his contract and he thought other clubs would welcome a chance to add him to their pitching corps.

Chicago, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—The Chicago Cubs are not interested in Dizzy Dean with a $100,000 purchase tag and a $25,000 per year salary, President Philip K. Wrigley said today.

"We've found out you can't buy a pennant," said Wrigley. "We're not interested in $25,000-a-year pitchers. We wouldn't take Dean if we could get him, if we had to pay him that figure."

Wrigley's statement sheds light on his stand regarding Chuck Klein's 1935 salary. It is believed Klein drew $22,000 last year, and it is known he has been trimmed down to a figure nearer what the other players are making.

Mike Martin on Air.

The highlights of his 23-year career as trainer of the Washington Baseball Club will be told tonight by Mike Martin over Station WOL at 8 o'clock, when he will be interviewed by Joe Holman.

Virginia Freshmen Defeat Episcopal

Rally in Last Quarter to Triumph, 27 to 22.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Virginia's freshman basket ball team defeated Episcopal High School this afternoon, 27 to 22, in Stewart Memorial Gymnasium.

A stirring last quarter rally, led by Frankie Watson, Episcopal High captain of last season, netted the visitors 10 points, while Episcopal was getting only 5.

The game was nip and tuck all the way, Virginia jumped off to a 5-point lead, but sensational shooting by Tyler Wilson, captain, and Al Wilson, brought the Maroon and Black back into the game. Episcopal held a 14-to-13 advantage at the half.

Malone Becomes Cardinal Holdout

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 6 (AP).—Big Pat Malone, fast ball pitcher traded to the St. Louis Cardinals last fall by Chicago, lined up alongside Dizzy Dean as a holdout today with announcement that he had returned his contract unsigned to the Cardinal management.

"If Branch Rickey thinks I will play ball for the figure he offered me, he's crazy," said the National League strikeout king of 1929, who is here with his wife.

"I am financially fixed to where I can rest this year, if necessary. I want to play ball this year, but not under Rickey's present terms."

Irish Captain-Elect Held Out of Danger

Post to Distribute Baseball Schedules

The vest-pocket edition of the official 1935 American League baseball schedule is being made available to baseball fans by The Post.

Fans desiring the handy little booklets, which give the date and place of all American League games with space to inscribe the scores, may obtain them by addressing the Baseball Editor of The Post and enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope.

2½% Boost In 'Take' Is Provided

Would Allow 4 Plants to Increase Purses by $300,000.

Increase in Interest Is Seen After Measure Is Introduced.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Predictions of a marked revival in Maryland horse racing were made here today following a hearing of representatives of the Maryland Horse Breeders Association before the Senate finance and the House ways and means committees of the State Legislature.

Association officials declared themselves in favor of the bill introduced in the House today by Delegate Kent R. Mullikin, of Prince Georges County, majority floor leader and chairman of the ways and means committee. The measure, which was termed an emergency act and would go into effect immediately upon passage, provides for reducing the daily tax paid by the four major tracks, Laurel, Pimlico, Bowie and Havre de Grace, from $6,000, the present rate, to $500 daily. Provision also is made for increasing the tax on sums wagered from 1 to 2½ per cent. The bill exempts bona fide county fairs and agricultural exhibits.

In Marked Contrast.

The bill is in marked contrast to that introduced earlier in the session by administration leaders which would levy a 7½ per cent tax on pari-mutuel betting and a $1,000 tax daily on the tracks. Race track officials had branded the latter measure as sounding the "death knell" for Maryland horse racing.

Officials who appeared before the joint committee hearing were C. L. A. Heiser, president of the Maryland Horse Breeders Association; G. L. Stryker, treasurer of the association, and Charles W. Williams, member and spokesman for the delegation.

Heiser pointed out that tax relief for the Maryland tracks was vital in order to insure the continued growth of horse breeding, which in recent years has grown to large proportions in the Old Line State. A total of $12,000,000 now is invested in breeding farms in Maryland, Heiser stated, with 38 major farms. Thirty-five establishments have been organized in the last 15 years.

Competition Cited.

Preservation of racing standards in Maryland in the future as in the past depended, Williams declared, on the extent to which the Legislature gave tax relief to the tracks. He stated the Northern tracks were furnishing Maryland with keen competition and offering larger daily purses, with the result that the better stables were sending their horses to other than Maryland tracks.

As proof of the extent to which Maryland racing has suffered from heavy taxation and consequent reductions in purses by the tracks,

Navy Needs Goat; So Offers Pour In

The Navy football team needs a new mascot and every goat raiser in Texas wants to do something about it.

Rip Miller, Navy coach, happened to mention recently that the present mascot was too weak, too small, and didn't have any fight. These remarks fell on the ears of Carl Runge, president of the Sheep and Goat Raisers Association of Texas, who was visiting Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, and the word soon got back home, the Associated Press reports.

Now, it seems, dozens of fine, robust, tough Angora goats, which can easily withstand the rigors of a Navy football campaign, have been offered.

Columbus Reduces Prices for Boxing

Determined to lure some of those 10,000 collegiate boxing fans to Columbus University's matches, Dean John R. Fitzpatrick, director of Columbus' athletic program, last night announced a one-price admission of 40 cents for Saturday's bouts with Villanova.

All seats will be available on a first come, first served basis at Tech High School, scene of the match. The Tech gym will accommodate approximately 5,000 customers.

Villonova's team is reputedly one of the East's best and Columbus will be no better than an even-money choice against the Wildcats despite its overwhelming victory over M. I. T. last week.

Possibly the smartest and most dangerous of the visitors is Ed Kershner, a southpaw welterweight who has a propensity for knocking out boys standing in his way. Kershner's opponent Saturday will be Paul Desch who kayoed his opponent in 38 seconds last week.

Georgetown Prep Ties for Loop Lead

Rallies in Last Minute to Beat Gonzaga, 22-20.

Georgetown Prep jumped into a tie for first place in the Private High School Basket Ball League yesterday by rallying in the last minute of play to beat Gonzaga, 22 to 20, at Garrett Park.

The victory ended Gonzaga's undisputed leadership in the series. It was the second straight series game which the Little Hoyas have won with a strong finish after trailing for most of the way. The Prep defeated St. John's in much the same fashion last week.

With a minute and a half to play, and the score 20-17 in favor of Gonzaga, Lloyd Rice, Georgetown Prep tallied for 20-19 and Billy Dettweiler put the Prep in the lead with a snow-bird in the closing seconds. O'Shaugnessy added a foul shot at the end of the game.

Favorites Upset In Writers' Golf

Sims Beats Beach, Hughes Tops Fontaine Fox.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 6 (AP).—Hal Sims, the bridge expert, took clubs as trumps today and shot a 72 to eliminate Rex Beach, the writer, from the annual tournament of artists and writers, 6 and 5.

It was a day for the "dark horses" as Beach, the 1933 champion, and Fontaine Fox, defending titleholder, fell by the wayside. Fox bowed to Charles A. Hughes, Detroit, 1 up.

Grantland Rice, veteran sports scribe and former tournament champion, alone of the "old guard" survived. Rice defeated Fred Price, 2 up, to enter the semifinals.

Cafe Arena Lets Londoners Watch Hockey While Dining

By Paul Gallico.

LONDON (By Mail).—We are always so eager to discover how backward our neighbors on this side of the ocean are when it comes to sports or efficiency or central heating that it always comes as a considerable shock to discover that they know how to do things in certain cases in a much more handsome manner than ever we dreamed of. There is, for instance, ice hockey at the Empire Pool and Sports Arena at Wembley. There they have constructed a great hall that seats some 9,000 for hockey and there isn't a post or pillar in the place. And, mind you, they only have amateur hockey in England.

The professional game is twice as fast as that played by our own amateurs in New York, and still several grades below the worst professional hockey team that we have in the United States or Canada. But the customers love it just the same. They pack the place and they behave exactly in the same roaring, hysterical manner as do

But what I was getting to was the convenience of the arena restaurant, where you may give a dinner party, sit comfortably and eat a delicious meal, and as you do so watch the athletes skate up and down and thwack one another lovingly over the skulls with their mallets. No one ever thought of that at home. The side arena seats rise and slant backward right from a row of boxes below. On one side a large section of these seats has been cut away, from the center of

Good Harvest 1½ Lengths In Rear

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Writer).

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, Fla., Feb. 6.—Roman Soldier, coal-black son of Cohort and Blossom, racing for William Sachsenmaier, of Miami Beach, spurted back into the limelight as the early favorite for Florida Derby honors when he handily defeated four other crack 3-year-olds in the Coconut Grove Purse, the mile feature of a strong eight-race card at Hialeah Park this afternoon. The B. B. Stables' Good Harvest was second, and the Silver Stock Farm's Blackbirder, third.

Then came Brahnon, winner of the recent Hialeah Stakes, and Elwawa, the fast but faint-hearted early pacemaker.

Ridden by Coucci.

The fast son of Cohort established himself as an outstanding Derby hope when he defeated older horses in the Inaugural Handicap on Hialeah's opening day. He had many friends when he went to the post in the Hialeah Stakes against a strong field of his own age, but racing luck was against him that day and he was jammed back turning out of the back stretch and could never regain his racing stride.

In the Coconut Grove, with Silvio Coucci handling the reins in masterly style, Roman Soldier redeemed himself in full. He swung along behind the early pace set by Elwawa to the stretch turn and then moved up to subdue the early leader. At the end the Sachsenmaier colt was not fully extended to hold a length-and-a-half margin over the tenacious Good Harvest.

Blackbirder, still a race removed from his best form, trailed his field to the final furlong pole and then moved up with a rush. He will be troublesome in future engagements for horses of his age.

Brannon Disappoints.

Brannon's effort was a distinct disappointment. He had no excuses. Wright reserved him off the pace under stout restraint for 5 furlongs, but when the sorrel-top from Idaho asked him for his best, Brannon failed to respond.

The ill-luck which has dogged the fortunes of E. R. Bradley and his contract rider, Don Meade, disappeared when the crack light-weight rode Bold Lover to win the Daytona Purse, the 7 furlongs supporting feature. It was the first victory at the meeting for Meade and the Bradley silks. Hug Again, the favorite, was second, and Quel Jeu, the early leader, third, in the field of six.

Meade had a running horse under him. The little fellow had difficulty restraining Bold Lover off the pace set by Quel Jeu for 5 furlongs. When he gave the Bradley gelding his head, the latter easily subdued Quel Jeu, but was all out to stave off Hug Again's belated bid by a neck at the end.

Bold Lover paid $7.20.

Empty Bottle Wins.

William Zeigler, jr., uncovered a likely candidate for the colts division of the Nursery stakes when his Empty Bottle graduated from maiden ranks at the expense of 13 other 2-year-olds in the Helpful purse, the weekly welfare race. The Zeigler colt was under a mild drive to finish a length in advance of Playful Tour, while five lengths back of the latter Nedvive was third. The winner paid $7.70.

The Maemore Farms' Nankin, winner of the first race, and the Amalgamated Stable's Fredrick, which won the third number, combined in the daily double to reward their supporters with $158.50.

Nankin led all the way to last a nose decision over Sun Chance in the 6-furlong opener. Lady Laura was third. Nankin paid $10.50 straight.

Fredrick paying $17.40, easily turned back 11 other ordinary sprinters in the 6-furlong third event. Erebus, a rank outsider, was second, and Bing Bin, the early leader, third.

Chastity Triumphs.

Charging from last place in the field of six, the Royal Stable's Chastity, paying $8.90, snatched a head decision over Black Target in the mile and a furlong sixth race. Garden Message, the favorite, stumbled at the start, but recovered quickly and finished third.

Mrs. R. B. Fairbanks' recent purchase, Little Cynic, was much the best of the 12 platers in the mile seventh race. He won by six lengths and paid $8.10. Shalot was second and Masked Queen third, with Mantados, the favorite, getting the fourth call.

Silver Spring Swamps Landon Prep Five, 24-9

Silver Spring High School's in-and-out court team was in long enough yesterday to register its tenth victory against ten defeats, winning over Landon Prep, 24 to 9, at Silver Spring.

The visitors were scoreless during the entire first half and did not tally until the host second-stringers were inserted.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NANKIN, $10.50, $5.70, $4.00; SUNCHANCE, $4.20, $3.50; LADY LAURA, $12.70.

NANKIN broke alertly, rushed into lead, raced VERA CRUZ into defeat, drew away entering stretch, but tired suddenly and just lasted to win. SUNCHANCE slipped through on inside in stretch and finished with a rush and was wearing the winner down. LADY LAURA, away well, followed pace and held on gamely. She is sure to win races. VERA CRUZ was used up racing with the winner and stopped badly. GOLDFIN closed a big gap. BLANDISHMENT stopped.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs; Nursery course (straightaway). Purse, $800. Claiming price, $2,500. The Helpful. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post, 2:53. Off at 2:56½. Winner, William Ziegler, jr.'s, b. c. (2), by Jock—Bit o' Regret. Trained by J. F. Schorr. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:35.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EMPTY BOTTLE, $7.70, $4.40, $3.70; PLAYFUL TOUR, $17.70, $8.60; IRISH PLAY, $4.00.

EMPTY BOTTLE, showing his true form, ran into lead soon after the start and drew away at end. PLAYFUL TOUR, a rapid breaker, showed good speed and held on well. IRISH PLAY was a bit slow getting into his stride, but finished fast. MARY CARMEN was pinched back just after the start, recovered and finished fast. PHYLLIS R. ran a good race. NEDVIVE and CAITIFF were both knocked out of it at the start.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. Claiming prices, $2,000 to $1,500 For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post, 3:23. Off at 3:29½. Winner, Amalgamated Stable's blk. g. (6), by The Porter—Slow and Easy. Trained by J. Zellner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FREDRICK, $17.40, $8.90, $7.40; EREBUS, $37.80, $18.30; DING BIN, $10.80.

FREDRICK, showing startling improvement over recent races, was driven away from the gate, followed pace closely to stretch, ran into lead, drew away and won nicely in hand. EREBUS, slow to get into motion, worked his way up and finished very fast. DING BIN displaying keen speed, set fast pace, but weakened suddenly in final sixteenth. RIDGE MOR was in close quarters in early part and finished fast when clear. GENTEEL LADY tired chasing the pace. LUXURO was practically left and had no chance. SUN TEMPEST ran a poor race. LEGIONARY slipped through on inside, but tired at finish.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,500. The Coconut Grove. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post, 3:37. Off at 3:37½. Winner, W. Sachsenmaier's blk. c. (3), by Cohort—Miamba. Trained by P. Reuter. Value to winner, $1,100; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:37 2-5.

ROMAN SOLDIER	114	2	3	2½	2½	2½	1½	1nk	Coucci	$4.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROMAN SOLDIER, $4.50, $2.90, $2.60; GOOD HARVEST, $3.60, $2.90; BLACKBIRDER, $3.20.

ROMAN SOLDIER was perfectly ridden. He got away well, but was eased back off the fast early pace to the middle of the turn, where boy sent him up on the outside, ran into lead and drew away easily at end. GOOD HARVEST was under stout restraint for the first 6 furlongs, moved up fast when straightened out in stretch, but could not catch the winner. BLACKBIRDER trailed far back, came around and in stretch and closed fast. BRANNON was rated along in a contending position, but failed to close any ground in final quarter-mile. ELWAWA rushed into long lead, displayed keen speed and ran a good race for 6 furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. The Daytona Beach. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post, 4:06½. Off at 4:36½. Winner, E. R. Bradley's br. g. (5), by Black Toney—Cleopatra. Trained by W. Hurley. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:24 3-5.

FIDELIS	108	5	6	5h	5h	6	6	Wright	31.85
SPEEDMORE	104	4	5	4h	5h	5h	6	Seabo	41.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOLD LOVER, $7.20, $3.30, $2.50; HUG AGAIN, $3.20, $2.40; QUEL JEU, $2.30.

BOLD LOVER broke very fast, raced along with QUEL JEU for 6 furlongs, made him stop, then drew away and gamely stalled off the determined bid of HUG AGAIN. The latter, under light weight, was outrun as usual to the turn out of the back stretch, where boy took her to the extreme outside, and she closed with a rush. QUEL JEU had plenty of speed, attempted to run out on turn, but tired suddenly at end. MAINE CHANCE came with a powerful rush on the inside in final quarter-mile. SPEEDMORE had speed for half a mile. FIDELIS can win in cheaper company.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000. Claiming prices, $4,000 to $3,500 For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post, 5:08½. Off at 5:11. Winner, Royal Stable's ch. f. (4), by Chance Play—In Favour. Trained by J. S. McDonald. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHASTITY, $8.90, $4.60, $3.20; BLACK TARGET, $11.70, $4.30; GARDEN MESSAGE, $2.50.

CHASTITY was perfectly ridden. She broke fast, but was allowed to drop back and trail field for 5 furlongs, was taken to the outside around turn, closed gamely under a hard drive and won in final nod. BLACK TARGET handled his weight well, was rushed into lead and rated along and held on gamely. GARDEN MESSAGE was a bit slow at the start, was sent up with a rush in run down back stretch, and the early effort told on him and he tired. TOWN CRIER, away fast, showed good speed for 7 furlongs and then tired. TAUNTON broke from outside of the barrier and, away back, never had a chance. WEST MAIN does not like a route.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:37½. Off at 5:42. Winner, Mrs. R. B. Fairbanks' br. g. (3), by Wise Counsellor—Isabella. Trailed by W. W. Taylor. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:39.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE CYNIC, $8.10, $4.20, $4.50; SHALOT, $5.40, $3.80; MASKED QUEEN, $5.60.

LITTLE CYNIC much the best. He took lead when ready and just galloped along to the finish. SHALOT stood long drive gamely. MASKED QUEEN came with a rush in final furlong. MANTADOS ran a fair race GRASSWRACK and PRETTY SOFT both tired after showing early speed.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and one furlong. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 6:08. Off at 6:08½. Winner Mrs. A. M. Creech's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAW CAW, $11.00, $5.30, $4.40; FOXLAND HALL, $7.40, $4.80; UKRAINE, $11.70.

CAW CAW followed pace to far turn, ran into lead and won nicely in hand. FOXLAND HALL had all of his speed and held on gamely. UKRAINE closed big gap. PASS moved up gamely around turn, but weakened in final sixteenth. OWEN had early speed.

Post's Tourney Field Looms As Record

All Outstanding Unlimited Quintets of Section to Compete for Title.

A RECORD entry list in the unlimited division of the District A. A. U. basket ball tournament which The Washington Post will sponsor starting March 4 at Tech High School was forecast yesterday by Winfree Johnson, A. A. U. basket ball chairman.

Johnson indicated that virtually all of the outstanding league teams in the District and within a 15-mile radius of Washington would enter. This means that such out-of-town teams as Saint Mary's Celtics, of Alexandria; Rockville A. C. and Silver Spring Merchants, Company F, of Hyattsville; Mount Rainier A. C., the Young Men's Club of Falls Church, will vie with Sholl's Cafe, 1932-33 District A. A. U. champions; Bureau of Investigation, Trinity, Olmsted Grill, Twin Oaks, Fire Department, Mount Vernon, Delaware & Hudson, Stewart's Pharmacy, just to mention a few.

Many Others to Enter.

Among other quintets which will enter are Mount Vernon, Calvary Drakes, Pepco, Corr's Sport Shop, National Guards, Bureau of Standards, Katzman Tailors, Washington Tobacco, Renroes, Warwicks, Grace Church, Maryland A. C., Internal Revenue, Rinaldi Tailors, Marvin Methodist, Merrick Boys' Club, Lawrence A. C., Government Printing Office, Sigma Alpha Kappa, Atonement, Ninth Street Christian, St. Joseph's, Dunlkers, National Umber, Mount Pleasant, Acacia, Farm Credit, West Washington Baptist and Dome Oil Co.

Also, the Flying Eagles, Olympia, T. E. Clark Co., Peoples Drug, National City, Virginians, Shamrocks, Ninth Street Christian, Marvin Methodist, Home Owners Loan Corporation, NRA, Satellites, St. Joseph, Anacostia, Southeast Flashes, Brand, Royal, Levy's Marions, Sigma Nu Sigma, Never Wins, Majestics, Basketers, Flashers, Stone's Pharmacy, Monarchs, Georges Radio Store.

Chairman Johnson has stressed the importance of having all players and teams register by February 15, the deadline. Registrations must be filed with Joe Aranoff at the Boys Club of Washington, 230 C street northwest. Entries will close February 27.

There will be competition in the 100-pound, 115-pound, 130-pound, 145-pound and girls, unlimited. Entry blanks may be procured at the Boys Club of Washington, Spaulding's, Atlas Shop and The Post sports department.

Cunningham's 'Second Wind,' Gained Prior To Race in Warm-up, Helps Him Outlast Foes

(This is another of a series of articles on the training and conditioning of athletes by Roland Logan, trainer of Glenn Cunningham and Jim Bausch when they won world track championships, trainer of the Boston Red Sox and coach and trainer of teams at George Washington University.)

By Roland Logan.

YOU have often heard references to so-called "second wind" among athletes, that physiological condition which permits an athlete to compete beyond what seems to be the limit of his endurance. In today's article I shall explain "second wind" and the interesting conditions leading up to that.

The condition preceding "second wind" is more important from the standpoint of the athlete, for in this period just before he finds himself able to continue strenuous competition he actually suffers physically.

Properly trained and physically sound, an athlete will suffer a ghastly feeling of suffocation, regardless of the form of activity, at some stage of strenous exercise. Usually this feeling comes at the earlier stages of competition.

What actually happens is that the blood takes on an increased amount of carbon dioxide, this increase in turn stimulating nerve centers in the brain and increasing the respiration rate.

The sudden appearance of this physiological activity and its accompanying ill-feeling often frightens athletes, especially the more youthful and inexperienced.

Strangely, the condition immediately preceding "second wind" may overtake an athlete at any time. Athletes in contests such as football, basket ball and baseball often get this feeling at intervals of rest, such as a huddle, time-out, etc., and in this respect these athletes are fortunate. But the track athletes are not so fortunate, for they do not enjoy any rest intervals in a race.

Distance runners are most unfortunate as they often suffer in the first quarter of a race the sudden suffocating feeling bringing a rapid readjustment of blood circulation. The sudden overdose of morbid matters in the system often cause a condition of rigidity, the muscles becoming tense or "tied-up."

The muscles, particularly those of the chest and arms, become bound up, causing loss of rhythm in stride. But better luck is just around the corner, so to speak.

The carbon monoxide is finally centered and proper respiration follows. Then comes "second wind," that precious relief which enables the competitor to rally and go on to greater effort.

Many persons wonder why Glenn Cunningham, world's mile record-holder, runs so far and hard in the warm-up before a race. The reason is that Glenn gets his "second wind" prior to competition. He is compelled to do this, more or less, due to poor circulation in his legs caused by scar-tissue, the result of severe burns he received in childhood.

Strenuous warming-up is not advisable for most runners, especially young ones. But Cunningham, due to his great reserve strength and stamina, is able to expend this excess energy without hurting himself. Consequently, in competition he doesn't have to let up at any stage. Many times he runs faster and faster as the race progresses, finishing the final quarter in faster time than any of the first three.

Coaches and trainers can determine whether an athlete is capable of standing the rigid test of hard warm-ups prior to competition. An athlete should never try to determine this without consulting a coach or trainer.

Many athletes fear that they lack sufficient vital strength to carry them through a strenuous contest, and consequently they do not warm up sufficiently.

Buster Charles, American decathlon champion of 1929 and fourth-place winner in the Olympic decathlon of 1932, could have achieved a better mark had he not feared the warm-up bugaboo. This was proven in all of his running events. At about the three-quarter stage of his races, ranging in distance from 100 meters to 1,500 meters, Charles picked up speed.

Closely connected with this subject is the much-discussed "athletic heart." I do not believe there is such a thing as an "athletic heart."

The heart develops, like any muscle, with exercise. Leg, chest, arm muscles increase in size in proportion to the amount of functioning. If there are no organic lesions or diseases in the heart, it will thrive and develop proportionately with other muscles with an attendant healthy condition of the entire body.

However, in cases of enlargement due to exercise, the athlete should not quit competition and training abruptly. He should taper off his activity in order to allow the heart to adjust itself normally to decreased strain. Bill Bonthron, world's mile champion, has said that he will not continue competitive racing after next year, but that he will gradually decrease his activity before finally retiring.

G. W. Five Flashes Best Form to Rout Wake Forest, 42 to 25

Goldfadden Is Star With 18 Points

Southerners No Match for Colonials, Despite Morris' Work.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A SMALL portion of the George Washington student body cranked up their basket ball flivver and went to town last night, flattening a hapless Wake Forest quintet on the way for their tenth victory of the season. The score was 42-25.

It was a speedy, carefree ride, with the old bus purring around the H street hippodrome after the fashion of a V-16, and before the Colonials proceeded very far it was apparent that they would be home early.

Ben Goldfadden, the husky forward, took the wheel as the machine rolled away from the barrier and drove the boys into a 25-12 lead by halftime. Ben was relieved coming into the home-stretch after tallying 18 points.

Morris Visitors' Star.

Only one obstacle confronted G. W. over the entire grind. His name is Doyt Morris, a big, broad-shouldered forward, playing his third varsity game. Morris hung up 15 o fthose Wake Forest points and missed several more by the width of an eyelash.

But, man for man, team for team, the Southerners were no match for G. W., which displayed its best form of the season. Kiesel, Leemans Berg, and Capt. Jim Howell set up Goldfadden's shots for him with a smooth, unstoppable passing attack that never faltered, never missed. The boys were right.

G. W. Pulls Away.

Wake Forest never came closer than 10 points to its host, then the visitors made it 20 to 30 by getting 8 points to G. W.'s 4 early in the second period. But when the Deacons threatened to pare that lead too lean, G. W. simply applied the gas and pulled away.

Nats to Play First 6 Games at Home

Decoration Day double header, Washington's only holiday attraction. The Nats were favored, too, with a Labor Day double-header at Boston, where the attendance figures will boom in view of the Red Sox's new claims to fame.

The lone sour note in the schedule arrangement, as far as the Nats are concerned, are their dates with Philadelphia, which looms as the East's poorest baseball town. Instead of cashing in on the first home showing of either the Red Sox or the Yankees in their spacious parks, the Nats are scheduled to open the Athletics' season at Philadelphia on April 23, besides playing the A's in the Quaker City on the choice July 4 date.

Here First Six Days.

Manager Bucky Harris will be on view before the home folks with his new charges for the first six days of the pennant race before taking leave on the first swing around the circuit.

The Athletics will inaugurate the season here on April 16 in the first of a three-game series and over the week-end Joe Cronin will lead his newly-acquired Red Sox into the Capital for a three-game visit that will pit the old and the new managers of the Boston Club against each other.

Following the three games with the Red Sox, the Nats sally forth to Philadelphia on April 23 on a trip that will take them consecutively into Boston and New York before they head West for skirmishes with the White Sox, Browns, Tigers and Indians.

Kennel Club Selects Officers, Committees

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—The Western Maryland Kennel Club, last night at the Cumberland Jockey Club, Fairgo, elected officers and committees were appointed to formulate plans for holding field trials for hunting dogs and staging whippet and greyhound racing at the Fairgo plant. The officers are: President, Harry A. Manley; vice president, J. George Smith; secretary, Arthur G. Ramey; treasurer, Milton W. Wonn, and chairman of bench show committee, Clifton Jeffries.

J. W. Kelley, Lester Fresh, Roy Martin and R. E. Beall were named a committee to ascertain details for the holding of field trials for hunting dogs.

Woodberry Forest, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Woodberry Forest defeated Swavely School here today, 32 to 22.

The visitors staged a second half rally which threatened to overcome the locals' lead, but the Orange team braced in the final stanza and, led by Hine and Pratt, increased its lead to a comfortable margin.

Hardell Grumbles at Tech's Relay Outlook, But Many Feel He Has Four Aces Up Sleeve

Rain Threatens To Delay Golf At Caliente

The forecast called for added rain after a heavy downpour here early this week had left the course sodden. If it comes, officials said play might be held up one day for the 72-hole event with its $5,000 in cash prizes along with 10 per cent of the pari-mutuel wagering on each round.

Except for Gene Sarazen, winner of the first event here five years ago, and Paul Runyan, national P. G. A. champion, most of the country's best players were on hand. Runyan was called away on business while Sarazen refused to start because of the establishment of betting on the players this season.

Three Champions Listed.

Three champions here, including the defender, Wiffy Cox, were on hand to try their luck again. Fred Morrison and George von Elm completed the titled threesome. Others looked upon with favor to walk off with the $1,000 first prize money were Harold McSpaden, Kansas City, Kans., leading money winner in the California tournaments this winter; Vic Chezzi, Deal, N. J., Los Angeles Open champion; Macdonald Smith, who won the medal play at Oakmont, and Horton Smith, who always has placed high here.

Under the pari-mutuel betting system, the public may select any one of the 60 outstanding players, or the field, and wager $2 or more that his choice finishes first, second or third on each round. No tickets will be sold for the aggregate score of the tournament.

Of this, the winning ticket holders receive 90 per cent, with the remaining 10 per cent of the total waged going to the first three players on the basis of low medal scores.

Coach to Let Boys Run in Penn Tests Saturday, 'Just to See!'

By John R. Vesburgh.

"JUST to see how they stack up with those New York teams before the Penn relays" is the explanation Coach Hap Hardell will give you for entering his Tech High mile relay quartet in the Eastern indoor interscholastics at Newark Saturday.

In reality it will mark Tech's first bid of the year for continuation of the brilliant record it blazed last year when it rose to the front ranks of the country's scholastic relay teams.

"They probably won't win anything," says Hardell, as dubiously as ever, "but it will be good experience for 'em. Those boys up in Philadelphia, New York and New Jersey specialize in indoor track. These boys haven't felt a board track under their feet all winter."

Despite the customary Hardellian comment, followers of Tech's track destinies are already whispering that the slight, little producer of champions has another ace up his sleeve this year—or rather four of them.

Two of them, Byron Hayden and LeRoy Green, were members of Tech's great team of last year, which flashed an unprecedented 3:28-mile in the interhigh championships and in the Penn relays turned in another sensational time in winning the national classified high school championship.

Hardell has taken George Bogan, a 10-second sprinter, and Monty Emmerich, fleet hurdler, and molded them into the vcaancies left by graduation of Norris Theis and Harold Davis. Both of them do the quarter in 53 seconds and under. Bogan was a highly able back in football, and Emmerich was all-high end.

Green is the interhigh quarter-mile champion and holder of the record which he set in winning the title last year in 51 2-5 seconds. Hayden is former interhigh champ and another 51 2-5 man. As alternate, Everett Fellinger, a sudden "find," has the inside track.

Hardell is of the opinion that it is foolish to believe that Tech can have as great a track team in '35 as it had last year. The 1934 outfit has been accepted as the finest in interhigh history.

Tech also is entering Frank Haskey and Paul Lynch in the 70-yard sprint in Saturday's meet, and Harry March and Justin MacKern in the high jump. Panzer College, of New Jersey, is putting on the event, which is attracting the fastest teams in the Northeast.

Cards to Face Rocky Road, Is Opinion

By Alan Gould.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6 (AP).—Now that the aggressive new administration of President Ford C. Frick has helped the Boston club to escape from the financial shoals, for the time being, and paved the way for the first major league experiment with night baseball, National Leaguers can give their undivided attention to getting ready for a pennant race that may come close to duplicating last year's sensational scramble.

The storm signals already have been hung out. The holdout troubles of the New York Giants, if any, appear to be on the way to rapid settlement, but the world champion St. Louis Cardinals have a flock of arguments to settle with hired hands before they become one big, happy and rollicking family again.

Led by the lanky Jerome Herman (Gabby) Dean, several of the Cardinal stars have joined in a salary war that probably won't subside until the spring training season is under way at Bradenton, Fla. It's the natural consequence of prosperity.

Cards Face Troubles.

St. Louis was the only National League Club to show a clean profit on the 1934 season, but it doesn't care to risk carrying too much pay roll overhead, even with one of the most colorful teams in the game. They pay off only on the winners, in St. Louis, and the Cardinals' "front office" so far has shown no signs of being stampeded by the fact that the club is a favorite to repeat its pennant victory. All of which leads to the twin prospect that the world champions may be the victims of some discontent, if not actual overconfidence, as well as up against stronger competition.

Outside of the fact that the Cardinals happen to be a very rough, confident outfit, fortified by speed, power and the greatest pitching pair in baseball—the Deans—they are nothing for their rivals to worry about. For all their all-around class and confidence, however, they won't be conceded the pennant in advance by any club in the league, particularly the Giants, Cubs and Pirates.

Bethesda Team Routs Wash.-Lee High, 41-15

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High increased its victory percentage to 14 out of 16 yesterday by toying with the visiting Washington and Lee five for a 41-to-15 triumph.

The defeat was one of the worst suffered by the Little Generals this year. Coach Kupka inserted substitutes freely and his men ran up a 17-to-7 lead at the half and increased it at will in the next two periods.

Meeting at Frederick To Map Tourney Plans

Frederick, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Fourteen teams, ten from this city, two from Middletown and one each from Poolesville and Damascus, Montgomery County, have been invited to a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night when plans will be discussed for the third annual basket ball tournament early next month. The games will be played at the Parkway School.

One of the questions to decide is whether to conduct the tournament on an elimination or round-robin basis. Sentiment seems to favor elimination, as the round-robin will continue playing for several weeks.

Terps Will Face Stern Court, Ring Foes

Richmond Five Unbeaten; Penn State Boxers '34 Champions.

TWO werra werra worried gentlemen tramp across the University of Maryland campus to their daily chores with wrinkled brows and far-away looks in their eyes that portend the advent of a crisis in their lives. The two worried gentlemen are Jack Harmony and Burt Shipley, coach of boxing and basket ball, respectively.

Saturday night at Ritchie Coliseum the shoot, pass and punch artists under their direction participate in the most important twin-bill Maryland has harbored this season. Penn State, an undefeated aggregation of champions and near-champions, faces the Terps in the ring, while Richmond, another undefeated party, will be Maryland's court rival.

Shipley Optimistic.

But as worried as Shipley looks, his conversation fairly oozes with optimism. After all, Maryland hasn't the worst team in the world and there's no law against optimism.

"If they play as well as they did against Virginia, Richmond's gonna lose its first ball game," he predicted yesterday. "Everything the boys did that night was right, and if they do it once they can do it again. Oh, Maryland won't be a set-up, you can lay to that."

This Penn State boxing outfit appears to be the most "bodacious" bunch of boys the District will see this year. Russell Criswell fought at 115 pounds for the Lions last season and won the Eastern collegiate title, and this year he's a substitute. The reason, and it's a good one, is Francis McAndrews.

McAndrews is the third of the McAndrews brothers—a trio of fighting Scots—to don the mitts for State, and if he upholds the family reputation he'll be a champion.

State has a champion 125-pounder in Mike Zeleznock, undefeated for two years and still going strong. As if that isn't enough, Coach Leo Houck's squad boasts a former national A. A. U. heavyweight titleholder in Izzy Richter. A clean, hard puncher, Richter has just completed his first year in school and Maryland will offer him his first opportunity of showing his wares.

Londoners Watch Tilts While Dining

the ring to the end, about 20 tiers up, and here a balcony restaurant has been built. Behind it the seats continue on up to the roof.

No need then to miss supper or turn up late at the game because of dinner. No need, if you do not wish to, even to buy seats in the arena. You buy your seats at your dinner table. You may come early enough to finish dinner before the match begins, or you may dally through your meal while the game is going on, and gaze at the whizzing figures through the yellow-green of a glass of good wine. It cost them probably 1,500 seats to put that restaurant in there at the rinkside. No American promoter would think of sacrificing that much possible revenue for the sake of a meal to be enjoyed by his patrons. But that's how they do it here.

The hockey players are recorded as amateurs, and the teams I saw play were called the Paris All-Stars and the London All-Stars, and were two teams made up of the best players in the French leagues and the English leagues. For instance, the London All-Stars were made up of the best men of the Wembley Lions and the Wembley Canadians. Of course, all of the hockey players, French as well as English, are Canadians. And there is fairly little pretense of amateurism made. The British call them "Shamateurs." Our own name for that class is "Promateurs." They are supposed to have jobs and make no money out of hockey, but they play some two or three matches a week, leap back and forth across the channel to play in Paris and are almost constantly on the road, so you may draw your own conclusions. The day after the match I noticed a little squib to the effect that the French All-Stars, having been beaten, challenged the London All-Stars to a return match in Paris for 100 pounds a side, and that the challenge had been accepted. The paragraph was hastily yanked out of the paper for the next edition, but it was true, nevertheless.

Webb, LaRowe Wits Ride on Teams' Mits

By Bill McCormick.

VIRGINIA'S fistic war with the Naval Academy, which will reach a climax Saturday at Annapolis in the "rubber" dual meet between the two institutions, has been more than a pitting of fist against fist, punch against punch. It has been, throughout the four encounters, which have been evenly divided between the two boxing squadrons, a duel of wits and strategy between two of the greatest collegiate boxing coaches in the country—Spike Webb, of Navy, and Johnny LaRowe, of Virginia.

WEBB

The first meet between the two schools in 1928 found the Navy barely squeezing through to a 4-to-3 victory over the LaRowe larrupers, who were just beginning to test their wings in big-time competition. Hampered by a lamentable lack of material and facing one of the strongest teams in the Navy's history, Virginia again bowed to the Middies in 1929, this time by a one-sided 5-to-2 score.

Following a suspension of ring relations, Navy and Virginia again started taking punches at each other in 1933 and the seasoned and thoroughly ring-wise Cavaliers punched out a surprising 5-to-3 victory over the Midshipmen in their own back yard. Last year, just for luck, Virginia engaged Navy in a skirmish in Charlottesville, and triumphed over the embryonic Admirals by the same score.

Both LaRowe and Webb are stylists in the matter of instructing their charges in the fine art of knocking noggins. They both turn out fighters of a pattern, perhaps the best fighters of their own particular design.

With the exception of Bobby Goldstein, who was a finished fighter when he matriculated at Virginia, every LaRowe coached boxer has specialized in a left jab, quickly followed by a right hand, then another left. Practically every Navy boxer has developed, under the careful tutelage of Webb, a sizzling left hook to bolster whatever other natural attributes with which he might be equipped.

Weakness of the Virginia boxers, if there be any standard weakness, lies in their susceptibility to right-hand punches. The left jabs to the face which they are continually tossing sometimes make perfect openings for rights to the body if they miss. Practically every member of every Virginia squadron boasts more stamina than usually is found in a collegiate boxer, and they are uniformly cool, calm and collected under fire.

LaROWE.

Navy boxers, of late, have developed one more slight weakness, through no fault of their own. Usually those facing Navy boxers are so awed by the impressive records of their opponents that they do not dare to carry the fight to them. This unwillingness to press a Navy boxer has in some cases resulted in the Middies forgetting the answers when the battle is carried to them forcibly. Virginia's victory of last season was largely made possible by a concerted attack predicated on the theory that some of the Navy battlers might have become rusty on their counter-fighting.

Each of these little weaknesses, and they are little weaknesses, will be taken advantage of by the two smart coaches who overlook little. LaRowe, who has been confined to his bed by illness for some two weeks, probably will not be able to make the journey to Annapolis, but, bed or no bed, it is a certainty that he will carefully map the plan of battle for each fighter.

Webb, who eats, sleeps and dreams the problems of his charges, undoubtedly is developing numerous headaches from hours of careful planning to repulse the onslaught of the Cavaliers. All of which should make for a very interesting meet.

Clubs Outside A. A. U. Hit By Rule

Will Not Be Permitted to Stage Virginia Bouts After Monday.

RICHMOND, Feb. 6 (AP).—Amateur boxing clubs in Virginia not affiliated with the Virginia State Association Amateur Athletic Union will not be permitted to stage boxing shows independent of the A. A. U after Monday. This announcement was made last night by Dr. William H. Parker, chairman of the registration committee, at a rules meeting of the boxing committee of the State organization.

After that date, Dr. Parker explained, all amateur clubs desiring to sponsor regular shows will have to belong to the A. A. U. The State Boxing and Wrestling Commission, the chairman said, will work in conjunction with the A. A. U., although leaving the interpretation and executing of amateur rules to the registration committee. It is an obvious fact, Dr. Parker said, that the State boxing commission would not permit a club to stage a show that did not have the sanction of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Dr. Parker also issued an appeal to all amateurs to become affiliated with some club. He said the practice of being "unattached" was not only harmful to the boy in that he would lack proper supervision and training, but the true purpose and spirit of the A. A. U. could not be impressed upon the boy who was not affiliated with an A. A. U. unit.

Shenandoah Meets Roanok

Dayton, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—After its sterling performance against Davis-Elkins in the last game, which the West Virginians won in the last few minutes of play, Shenandoah College will go into battle on even terms with Roanoke College when hey clash here tomorrow. Shenandoah is enjoying one of its most successful seasons in recent years.

Maryland Race Bill Cuts Tax $5,500 Day

Would Allow Four Tracks to Increase Purses by $300,000.

Williams said that total pari-mutuel betting had declined from $50,000,000 in 1929 to $25,000,000 in 1934. It is expected that the proposed legislation, if enacted, will gradually bring about increased public interest and race revenues.

William J. Reedy, stable agent for the Sagamore Farms, one of the large Maryland breeding establishments, declared that if present conditions continue his stable would do all its racing in the North next season.

Enactment of the proposed bill will allow the four major tracks to increase their purses by $300,000 in 1935, it is estimated. The bill provides for a total "take" of 7 per cent, with 4½ per cent going to the tracks and 2½ per cent to the State. This compares with 6 per cent and 1 per cent, respectively, under the present law.

Indorsement was given the "totalizator" machines now in operation at Pimlico by the Horse Breeders Association and it was recommended that their use be extended to the other three major Maryland tracks. It was declared the public was in favor of the machines, as they gave them accurate knowledge before the races of the exact odds.

Ken Overlin Signed to Fight On Chicago Boxing Carnival

CHICAGO, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Nate Lewis and Jim Mullen, the world's most successful boxing promoters during the past 2½ months, today announced a boxing carnival—10 6-round bouts—for their next show at the Chicago Stadium February 15.

It will be the first time one of the country's major arenas has attempted to develop new talent by putting on an all-star program without a big name on the card.

"There's a shortage of boxing talent," said Mullen. "The idea of our carnival is to develop new names and new faces. We believe there are plenty of promising fighters all over the country who've never had a chance to show their wares before the public.

"We expect to put on these carnivals from time to time to give the public a chance to see the up-and-coming fighters in action. The boys who make good will be given every chance to fight their way to the top of their respective divisions at the Chicago Stadium."

The pairings for next week's carnival have not been completed but the following eight boxers will appear on the card: Eddie Hogan, Hartford, Conn., heavyweight; Ken Overlin, Norfolk, Va., middleweight; Lou Halper, Newark, N. J., welterweight; Wesley Ramey, Grand Rapids, Mich., lightweight, who has just returned from a successful Australian tour; Mike Belloise, New York featherweight; Joe Tei Ken, New York bantamweight; Dutch Weimer, Arizona light-heavyweight, and Bobby Matthews, Paducah, Ky., Southern middleweight champion.

Bouts will be staged in every division except the flyweight.

The show will be staged at popular prices, $1, $2, and $3, and the promoters will be satisfied with only a small profit.

Celtics to Pay Last Tribute To Wood

Will Attend Funeral of Former Star Hurler, Killed in Crash.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.). The death of Johnny (Buck) Wood, former star pitcher for the St. Mary's Celtics, who was killed when his automobile collided with a freight truck on the Richmond Highway near Woodbridge last night, brings to a close one of the most colorful athletic careers in Alexandria.

Wood, who sparkled on the mound for the Celtics in 1927 and 1928, retired from the diamond game in 1929 to take a job with a construction concern working on the Lincoln Memorial Bridge in Washington. He later took a position as labor foreman with another company, with whom he was associated at the time of his death.

The St. Mary's Celtics ball club will attend the funeral.

The Junior Loop will hold its next meeting at 8 a. m. Saturday.

Alexandria High School basketball team will play host to Washington and Lee of Ballston in the Armory Hall Friday night at 8:15. The Alexandria Reserves are slated in a preliminary game against the Alexandria Light Infantry.

The Twins will take to the road Saturday, journeying to Fredericksburg for a game with the Yellow Jackets. The Girls' teams of the two schools will clash in the opening game at 7:30 p. m.

G. U. Cubs Trounce Maryland Frosh

The Georgetown University Freshmen basket ball team rang up its sixth victory in as many starts by trouncing University of Maryland yearlings, 34 to 24, yesterday afternoon in Ritchie Coliseum, College Park.

In opening their short court season, the Old Liners showed lack of previous competition and missed one of their ace performers, "Little Knocky" Thomas, who is scholastically ineligible. Waverly Wheeler, Maryland forward, showed the way for both teams by scoring 14 points.

Emmitsburg Five Wins Northern Cage Crown

Walkersville, Md., Feb. 6 (Spl.). Emmitsburg won the pennant in the northern division of the county high school league by defeating Walkersville in easy fashion, 38 to 18. The victory entitles Emmitsburg to meet the winner of the southern division for the championship.

At the same time, Emmitsburg girls nosed out Walkersville lassies, in a hard-fought tilt, 17 to 15. The victory advanced Emmitsburg into a tie with Walkersville for first place in the pennant race. Both teams have one scheduled game remaining with Thurmont.

Wheat Closes Mixed on Fear Of Gold Case

Chicago, Feb. 6 (AP).—Unabated anxiety as to the outcome of gold clause cases kept a clutch on grain markets today, curtailing business and tending to pull prices down.

Cheaper offerings, too, of wheat overseas, both from Canada and Argentina, were reported. In addition, a British trade authority reduced by 32,000,000 bushels his estimate of Europe's wheat import requirements for the season.

Wheat in Chicago closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ of a cent lower; May, 94⅜@94½; corn, ¼ off to ¼ up; May, 82⅜@82½; oats, unchanged to ⅛ down, and provisions at 2 cents to 7 cents advance.

In the late dealings, wheat price losses were partly overcome by support from cash interests and by increased attention given to the fact that this is the usual time for a beginning of high winds Southwest Fears were expressed in regard to prospective winter wheat crop impairment as a result of soil drifting.

On the other hand, reports of more or less moisture today Southwest and West, together with forecasts of warmer temperatures, acted earlier as a contributing bearish influence.

Cotton Market

Business picked up slightly in the last hour, however, when May sold off to 12.31 under renewed liquidation. Offerings were absorbed at this figure, however, and May closed at 12.34 with the general market closing steady, net unchanged to 5 points lower.

The opening was quiet at a decline of 1 to 2 points in response to disappointing Liverpool cables. Comparatively light offerings were absorbed by covering or trade buying and the market held generally steady within a range of 2 to 3 points during the middle of the day, when there may have been a little buying on reports of a further reduction of about 130,000 bales in estimates of the Indian crop.

Exports today, 8,084, making 3,075,711 so far this season. Port receipts, 2,212. U. S. port stocks, 2,780,039.

(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

New York, Feb. 6.—While the outstanding volume of commercial bank loans has declined in recent months, despite more active business, there has been a noteworthy expansion in the volume of installment financing. Such increased use of installment credit facilities, in fact, partly explains why a larger volume of business is being done without a corresponding expansion in the reported total of "all other" loans of the banks. The installment finance companies obtain only a portion of their resources from the banks and these are largely carried among acceptance holdings by the latter.

The greatest expansion in installment financing activity has occurred, of course, in the automobile field. There has also been a noteworthy increase in the volume of business of finance companies which discount installment paper and accounts receivable in other lines of business. In fact, the current conservative lending practices of the banks are stimulating the organization of new finance companies to meet increased demands for such special accommodation.

Thus, in the textile industry, factoring organizations, which discount accounts receivable for mills and perform other credit and business services for them, have long played an important role. Latterly, the demand for factoring service has been so keen that several new companies are being organized to meet it. Many textile organizations which formerly borrowed at the banks are, under prevailing conditions, obtaining needed funds by discounting their accounts receivable with factors so that large factoring companies report almost weekly obtaining new accounts.

Factoring Organizations Service Paid for by Higher Interest Rates.

Factoring organizations, like finance companies generally, exact a much higher rate of interest than do the banks on straight loans. However, they also give more service. Most important of all, their tests and standards of liquidity and ratio of debt to net worth are not nearly as severe as those of the banks, since the factors are chiefly interested in the quality of the accounts receivable which they take over. A number of concerns that have resorted to factors for working capital, it is probable, would have found it very difficult if not impossible to obtain adequate lines of credit at the banks.

The current vigorous recovery in the automobile industry is being financed quite largely by the installment finance companies, rather than by the banks directly. Thus, for the first 11 months of 1934, retail financing of new cars sold on the installment plan aggregated $534,000,000, which compared with $357,000,000 during the same period in 1933, a rise of almost 50 per cent. For the same period, installment financing of used cars aggregated $259,000,000, a gain of some 35 per cent over the corresponding period the year before.

There has been a substantial increase also in installment financing of other types of durable consumers' goods, such as furniture, washing machines, radios, vacuum cleaners, etc.

The leading installment finance organizations, as a result are doing a very large volume of business. In fact, where they expanded largely through mergers during the depression period, they enjoy a record turnover. The General Motors Acceptance Corporation, largest organization in the field, naturally benefits to the full from the increased volume of automobile sales. Commercial Investment Trust, a highly diversified installment financing organization doing an extensive factoring business as well, did a record volume of business in 1934, discounting a total of about $800,000,000 of installment paper and accounts receivable. The Commercial Credit Co., the third large organization in the field, almost equaled its 1929 record.

Installment Financing Has Shown Good Record Through Depression.

Installment financing on the whole came through the depression much more successfully than its predepression critics anticipated. The contraction of individual buying power was relatively gradual, and installment finance companies were able to collect their notes rapidly enough to avoid excessive defaults. Repossessions because of default became more frequent, of course, but for most companies they were not numerous enough to cause material embarrassment. Limitations of installment paper to a 12 months' maximum maturity by most automobile and other finance companies proved a very sound procedure.

As a result of this experience the installment finance companies have been in excellent shape to meet increased demands with recovery. Having raised a large part of their capital by selling stock and longer-term notes to investors, they have had to obtain only a portion of their capital from the banks. Also, in view of the strong financial position of the leading companies in the field, they have been able to obtain banking accommodation at rates as low as one-half of 1 per cent for short-term advances. This, in turn, has stimulated discussion of reducing installment financing charges.

The expansion of installment financing and factoring activity has raised the question of whether a larger proportion of future commercial financing may not be done by specialized organizations, rather than by commercial banks. If this proves the case, the volume of commercial loans may continue in restricted volume, with the banks financing many industries only partially and indirectly through the finance companies.

Bond Market Continues Sag; Sales Larger

Secondary Loans Drop Sharply; Trading Up to $8,673,000.

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Secondary corporation issues dropped sharply in today's bond market, although a fairly steady tone prevailed in prime investments and Government loans.

As has been the case several times during the recent dull markets, the absence of bids anywhere in the neighborhood of the last price paid caused sharp recessions in a number of bonds when selling orders were entered "at the market."

This was particularly illustrated today when a small offering of Radio Keith 6s reaches the market in the last 15 minutes of trading and were sold at 32, off 8⅝ points from the last sale several days ago.

On Losing List.

Other amusement issues, which had participated in the early downward trend of the market, quickly extended their losses 1 to 2 points, including Loews 6s, off 1½ at 103¼; Paramount 6s, off 1¾ at 66¼, and Warner Bros. 6s, off 1¼ at 54¼.

Railroad bonds were also particularly heavy today, despite the reassuring news from Washington that the Government had not changed its policy in making loans to financially embarrassed carriers.

Declines of 1 to 2 points were shown by obligations of the New Haven, Great Northern, Rock Island, St. Paul, Southern Railway, South Western, and Baltimore & Ohio.

Averages Show Declines.

The Associated Press average of 20 rails declined .05 of a point, to a new 1934-35 low at 84.0. The averages for ten industrials, ten utilities and ten low-yield bonds were .01 to .05 of a point lower.

While United States Governments and high-grade domestic corporate bonds were more steady, there were a large number yielding small fractions and holding unchanged. Most of the Treasury issues were two thirty-seconds to four thirty-seconds higher, while Liberties and the indirect obligations generally showed no change.

Corporate bonds advancing slightly included Dodge Bros. 6s at 107, Consolidated Gas 5½s at 105⅝, and Duquesne Light 4½s at 107½. Losses were shown by Northern Pacific 4s at 103, Pennsylvania 4½s at 106⅛, and Standard Oil of New York 4½s at 104.

There was little change in foreign bonds. German government issues eased slightly and South American bonds were inclined to sag.

Transfers aggregated $8,673,000, par value, compared with $8,099,000 on Tuesday.

Nation's Deficit Tops 2 Billion For First Time

Consolidated Statement Shows 51-Cent Intake for Every Dollar Spent.

The Treasury began work on its third billion "in the red" today when its daily statement disclosed that the deficit had jumped to $2,011,041,971, according to the Associated Press.

The consolidated statement showed that only 51 cents had been received for every dollar spent thus far in the present fiscal year. Total receipts amounted to $2,094,812,789, while total expenditures were $4,105,854,760.

While general cognizance was taken of these figures, the interest of official Washington was far from entirely diverted from the forthcoming decision by the Supreme Court on the "gold clause" cases.

Plans Steps in Gold Decision.

In an authoritative quarter it was stated that one part of the Administration's plan in the advent of a decision unfavorable to the Government was a Presidential proclamation declaring a "national emergency." An official stated such a step could be taken within a few minutes after a decision.

Under it the President would have wide powers to act in attempting to stop any destructive effects. At the White House it was said today that such a proclamation had not been prepared, and Mr. Roosevelt said he had not discussed the situation.

In the matter of the Treasury's present condition, the regular statement today reported that ordinary expenditures were kept within a radius that would provide a balanced budget, but that emergency expeditures for the purposes of unemployment and relief had added more than two billion dollars to the total.

Federal Reserve Gains.

Government revenue during the period was up $377,000,000 over last year, with all classes showing increases with the exception of customs receipts and the income from Government-owned securities. The greatest increase was shown in the processing tax on farm products, which rose $151,000,000 over last year to $326,457,000.

Were this tax deducted from ordinary receipts, as some claim it should be on the ground it is an emergency levy, an ordinary deficit of $221,000,000 would accrue for the period to date.

Income-tax receipts to date have totaled $443,000,000, an increase of $102,000,000; miscellaneous internal revenue has amounted to $990,000,000, a gain of $100,000,000 but customs receipts dropped off $5,000,000 to a total of $199,000,000.

Advances	88	88
Declines	470	483
Unchanged	177	141
Total issues	735	712

Stocks — Uncertainty over the pending gold decision again unnerved traders. Most issues sustained small losses. Sales gained slightly to total 558,240 shares for the day.

Bonds—Secondary corporation issues dropped sharply. Prime investments and Government issues were fairly steady. Sales increased to $8,673,000.

Curb—Fractional changes predominated. Closes were mixed in volume with a few issues showing losses of more than a point. Sales volume increased to 127,000 shares.

Wheat—Fears of the gold decision continued to handicap the grain markets, and wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ of a cent lower. May wheat closed at 94⅜ and July at 87¾.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady at 2.85. Fine granulated held steady at 4.30.

Silver—Bar silver was steady in New York at ⅛ lower to close at 53¾. In London it was off ⅛ penny to close at 24 5-16 pence (United States equivalent 53.47 cents) per ounce).

Gold—Bar gold was off 3 pence in London to 141 shillings 10½ pence (United States equivalent, $34.64).

Dollar—The United States dollar was steady in foreign exchanges. It stood in New York with reference to other currencies $4.88⅛ to the English pound; 6.56⅛ cents to the French franc, and 39.93 cents to the German mark.

Low-Cost Home Plans Will Be Demonstrated

Better Housing Conference Scheduled to Meet February 15.

By Karl von Lewinski.

The latest thing in low-cost and fireproof home construction is scheduled for demonstration at the Better Housing Conference sponsored by the Portland Cement Association to be held on February 15 at the Willard Hotel.

Numerous prominent Washington architects, builders and contractors have signified their intention of attending the educational meeting to inspect new fire-safe materials that have been developed for home owners of moderate income.

Plans and photographs of modern fire-resistant homes which can be built for as little as $1,500 will be exhibited at the conference. Two of these houses which have attracted wide attention are the homekeeping house recently built at Westport, Conn., by Martha Cobb Peabody, of the editorial staff of the Woman's Home Companion, and a new home at Indianola, near Des Moines, Iowa.

Model Homes for $3,000.

Either of these, local builders say, could be duplicated in Washington inside of $3,000, including heating plant and plumbing.

Much of the discussion at the conference will be concerned with homes in a low-price range which embody termite-proof, fire-safe construction features and low maintenance cost, features which, it is pointed out, will enable owners to more easily comply with the requirements for long-term mortgages under the national housing act.

Because of the technical nature of the discussions, attendance will be restricted to architects, concrete and mason contractors, and real estate developers.

Christmas Savings Gain.

The 18 local banks participating in the savings clubs also reported that the sum total of $5,279,575 subscribed this year is $917,415 ahead of last year's pledges of $4,362,160.

Average commitments per member in Washington were reported at $79.80, far ahead of the national average of $42.60 per member. Interest on the savings is paid at the rate of 1½ per cent instead of the 3 per cent formerly.

The Christmas savings clubs are 15 years old this year. In Washington the first clubs were opened by individual banks around 1912. The cooperative plan of advertising did not start until 1924. Since that time the interest has grown steadily. The high point was reached in 1932, when 102,246 subscribers pledged a total of $8,689,575.

Stock Trading.

Potomac Electric Power 6 per cent preferred opened trading on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday with one turnover at 111⅛. The same company's 5½ per cent preferred moved at 112 and 112¼.

Curb's Prices Close Weaker As Sales Gain

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The curb market finished with a mixed price trend today. Except in scattered instances, variations were limited to minor fractions. Volume increased moderately over yesterday.

Pepperell Manufacturing virtually canceled its 5-point advance of the previous session. Western Auto Supply yielded about a point. Slight recessions were recorded by Swift & Co., Newmont, Sherwin Williams, American Cyanamid B, Electric Bond & Share, Hiram Walker and Gulf Oil. Small gains were shown by Pioneer Gold, International Petroleum, Swift International and Parker Rust Proof.

SALE OF REPOSSESSED
PIANOS

Doing a very large volume of business it is only natural that we would have a few repossessions from time to time. We put these instruments in the best of condition and sell them to any one who will take over the balance of the payments. Listed below is our present stock.

APARTMENT SIZE mahogany-finished upright. One of the latest models. Used for about a year. In splendid condition. Price $180—weekly payments of $1.50

SMALLEST SIZE apartment grand; in fine condition. Modeled in the popular William and Mary period style. Ideal for the small home or apartment. Seldom are we able to offer so much value for $185. Just continue the weekly payments of $1.50.

APARTMENT UPRIGHT—Used less than 4 months, and we don't believe it can be told from new. One of the latest and most popular styles. A really good piano that you can buy for $8 monthly (total $218)

LATEST MODEL colonial baby grand; finished in mahogany. Used for only 5 months and in perfect condition. Can be purchased for $284. The payments are $2.50 weekly. This piano will sell fast, so if interested see it today.

LOUIS XV model baby grand; finished in walnut. Used for 5 months, it shows absolutely no wear. A real value at $378. Just continue the monthly payments of $10.

COLONIAL MODEL BABY GRAND—A fine piano, with a deep, resonant tone. It has been used since Oct. 1 but has had very good care and is in new instrument condition. The balance due is $498 (monthly payments of $14). Seldom are we able to offer such a value in a really good piano.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — El Dorado Is Still Perfect, to Mrs. Bungle — By Harry J. Tuthill

HA! WHAT A PERFECTLY INSIPID LOOK THAT SNEAKY BROWNING HAD WHEN MONTGOMERY EL DORADO SO SIMPLY EXPLAINED ALL THIS HULLABALOO ABOUT SOME WORTHLESS PAPERS THAT LOOKED LIKE OLD SOAP WRAPPERS.
MONTY DIDN'T SAY THEY WERE WORTHLESS WHILE HE WAS TRYING TO GET THEM, MOTHER.
LISTEN, DO YOU KNOW WHAT MY THEORY IS ON THIS AFFAIR? O.K! FIRST, WHY?
PEGGY DARLING, DO YOU MEAN YOU EVEN LISTENED TO THE LOW SLURS ABOUT SWINDLING AND SO FORTH THAT BROWNING DELIBERATELY THREW INTO THE TEETH OF MONTGOMERY?
WHY DIDN'T MONTY WANT THE POLICE CALLED?
OH HONEY, ARE YOU TELLING ME YOU JUST CAN'T UNDERSTAND HOW MONTGOMERY KNEW I'D OBJECT TO A LOT OF BIG POLICEMEN TRAMPING THROUGH THIS HOUSE? AS HE EXPLAINED,
HE DID A LOT OF THAT. EXPLAINING.

DIXIE DUGAN — Great Plans — By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

DON'T BE AN IDIOT, MORDECAI! — HE'S HOODWINKING YOU! — DON'T TRUST HIM! — I'LL WAGER HE'S A QUACK-PLANNING TO MAKE MONEY OUT OF LADDIE HIMSELF —
CURSE HIM! IF HE MAKES THAT CHILD GROW HE'LL RUIN THE GREATEST BOX-OFFICE ATTRACTION IN HISTORY!
GEE, DOC! AN' YE THINK ME LADDIE KIN BE LIKE ANY REG'LAR KID?
YES, MY FRIEND! IT WILL REQUIRE CAREFUL TREATMENT AND SOME EXPENSE — OF COURSE, THAT MAY BE ARRANGED FOR WITH SOME CHARITABLE INSTITUTION—
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.
HOWEVER, MY COLLEAGUES AGREE THAT THE RESULTS WOULD BE FAR SURER AND BETTER IF LADDIE WERE NOT IN AN INSTITUTION BUT COULD REMAIN IN A NORMAL HOME ENVIRONMENT WITH PEOPLE WHO LOVED HIM — IN A HOME, FOR INSTANCE, LIKE THIS

THE GUMPS — Now on the Radio—Post Comics—WMAL, Sundays, 8:45 a. m. — O What a Difference in the Morning

I CAN'T UNDERSTAND UNCLE BIM- EVERY MORNING IN THE SOCIETY COLUMNS-STORIES ABOUT BIM GUMP AND HIS BRIDE-HOW THEY'RE SEEN EVERYWHERE-AND SHE HAS NEW GOWNS FOR EVERY SINGLE AFFAIR- I HEAR HE BOUGHT HER A DIAMOND THE SIZE OF A WALNUT LAST WEEK-
WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH HIM? IS IT INFATUATION OR WHAT? THAT POOR BLIND FOOL- HE MUST BE INTOXICATED ON LOVE-
NO- HE ISN'T INTOXICATED- NOT THAT OLD BOY- THAT ISN'T THE WORD FOR IT- HE'S PARBOILED-
BUT WAIT UNTIL HE SOBERS UP- HE'LL FIND OUT THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN BEING MERELY INTOXICATED AND BEING MARRIED- WHEN YOU'RE INTOXICATED- YOU WAKE UP WITH A TERRIBLE HEADACHE IN THE MORNING- BUT WHEN YOU'RE MARRIED LIKE THAT BIRD- YOU'LL WAKE UP WITH A HEADACHE EVERY MORNING.

Walt Mason, Himself

Melvin Purvis.

He is a small and gentle man, this Nemesis of crooks; all quietly he forms his plan, and baits his little hooks; we see no fireworks as he goes about his useful chores, but he rakes in the social foes, the bandits and such bores. He doesn't fill the public prints with stories of his deeds, but hunts the murderer who sprints among the woods and weeds. A man like Dillinger he hunts and lays him in his grave, and says, "Now there are other stunts, we'll nail another knave." A lot of people were destroyed, and lost their hoarded kale, and fortune seemed to smile on Floyd, till Mel got on his trail. And then one day that pretty lad just shriveled up and died, while Melvin, looking rather glad, shot bullets through his hide. It used to be that bandits laughed at sleuths with all their stealth, and many brimming bowls they quaffed and drank their own good health. In other times they laughed to scorn the forces of the law, they felt that they were never born to feel the halter draw. When dicks were mentioned they would sneer and call for further bowls; the stern officials brought no fear to their degraded souls. But now at last there is a name that fills them with dismay; the name of one who plays the game without a vain display. A man who makes no idle threats, who works with quiet grace, and coppers all the bandits' bets and wears a poker face.

Dentists Install W. G. Palmer

Culpeper, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—With Dr. C. W. Chewning, of Orange, presiding, Dr. W. G. Palmer, of Culpeper, was officially installed tonight as president of the Northern Virginia Dental Society, component number eight of the State organization, at the annual dinner meeting held at the Lord Culpeper Hotel.

About 75 doctors in dental science were present from the district extending from the Potomac River to the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The program, arranged by a committee of Dr. C. Rodriguez, of Leesburg; Dr. J. T. Ashton, of Alexandria, and Dr. Palmer, of Culpeper, featured outstanding addresses by Dr. A. H. Fee, of Richmond, on "Root Canal Therapy, Using Silver," and by Dr. Harry Lyons, of Richmond, who discussed "Treatment of Chonic Periodontoclassia." Dr. John Thornton Ashton, of Alexandria, president of the Virginia State Dental Association, spoke on "Fractures, Including Edentureless Cases."

The group of local dentists, who served as host committee for the informal get-together following the business and educational program, included Dr. Palmer, Mrs. M. B. Lewis, Dr. L. D. Printz, Dr. H. B. Lacy and Dr. W. R. Colvin.

Cruel Thief!

Winchester Pastor Reports Collection Missing.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—The Biblical injunction against laying up treasures for thieves to steal applies to those who observe the commandments as well as those who are heedless, the experience of J. A. Stretchberry, of Market Street Methodist Church, indicates.

For when he took home the collection obtained during the service Sunday morning, he put the envelopes away, planning to count the contents Monday.

Information obtained today was that when Mr. Stretchberry, as is his custom, prepared to dispose of the money, it was missing. A window had been forced while he and Mrs. Stretchberry were at the service Sunday evening and the collection was stolen. The loss is believed to be in the neighborhood of $50.

Officers are investigating but no arrests have been made.

Tax Rate Slashed A Third by Town

Reduction in Chambersburg Ordered by Council.

Chambersburg, Pa., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—A 33 1-3 per cent reduction in Chambersburg's tax rate was ordered by Borough Council when the rate was reduced from 6 to 4 mills, 2 mills being taken from the 3-mill tax on real estate for borough purposes. The bond rate will remain at 3 mills.

Tax collections under the 1-mill rate for borough purposes were estimated at $7,600 for 1935 as against $22,077.67 collected under the 3-mill rate in 1934.

Council adopted a budget for the year in $278,462.06. The following expenditures were provided: General borough, $25,275.86; police department, $17,188.50; sewer system, $2,625; fire department, $15,500; streets, $43,000; sewage disposal plant, $6,812.04; electric light department, $120,540.05; water department, $34,455.61; Coyle Library, $2,500; board of health, $1,890; parks and playgrounds, $3,675; fire insurance fund, $5,000.

Mrs. Bowie Named As Postmistress

Has Held Kensington Post for Last 16 Years.

President Roosevelt yesterday sent the name of Mrs. Anna B. Bowie to be reappointed postmistress at Kensington, Md., a position she has filled for the last 16 years.

A Democrat, Mrs. Bowie first was appointed by President Wilson, and served consecutively through the Intervening Republican administrations.

Among Virginia postmasters named were Rosa L. Williams, Bassetts; John H. Woolwine, Blacksburg; William C. Whitmore, Leesburg; Bourbon N. Kibler, Luray; Jay C. Litts, Norton; Thomas E. Frank, Warrenton; Ethel L. Deane, Windsor, and Gipsie B. Cassell, Wytheville.

Woodmen Plan Convention.

Danville, Va., Feb. 6 (Spl.).—Preparations are being made here for the annual State convention of the Woodmen of the World to open here April 9 and last two days. Between 400 and 500 delegates are expected.

AIR STEWARDESS

By VIDA HURST

Irene Gardner becomes an air stewardess to forget Bart Ralston, who has decided to pursue his medical career by marrying Peggy Reagan, daughter of a prominent surgeon.

Gay, impudent Barney O'Sullivan, one of the pilots, worms his way into Irene's heart despite her protest against his kisses. Secretly she admits they are the most thrilling kisses she has ever known. Thus fortified, Irene is able to meet Bart as impersonally as a casual acquaintance.

But Bart is eager to keep Irene's love. Peggy realizes that Bart is not keen to marry her and goes about looking for a more devoted suitor. Irene is amazed to see Peggy on board the plane one morning with an alleged film director, with whose reputation she is familiar. She gets Peggy alone for a few minutes to talk to her.

IRENE'S gaze fell before the younger girl's reproachful eyes.

"I haven't had such a square deal from Bart. I know he's never been in love with me. Norman has shown me the difference. He has sent me flowers and paid me compliments and acted as if I really mattered, as Bartlett never did. Norman is really in love with me, and to prove it he's going to get me into motion pictures. He says there is a wonderful future for me if I will be patient and not expect too much just at first."

"Did he tell you he was married?" Irene asked bluntly.

Peggy gasped.

"Certainly not! He isn't."

"Oh, yes he is," Irene insisted. "I've seen his wife. What's more he isn't a director, but a film salesman for that company he's been telling you about.

Just a Bluff.

"No, I'm not, Peggy. Our publicity man has known him for years. He told me that Norman Drury is one of the biggest liars on the Pacific Coast. Not only that, but he makes a practice of having affairs with unsophisticated girls. You should have seen the cheap little thing he brought north with him from Fresno."

It was a terrific blow, but Peggy took it on the chin.

"You wouldn't say that unless you knew it were true, would you?"

"Why should I?"

"Because of your sympathy for Bart?"

"I have no sympathy for Bart where you are concerned. He has reason for gumming up your whole life with a man like Norman Drury."

"But how could he lie to me like that?"

"Does he know who you are?"

"Yes, and he told me to bring plenty of money to live on until I should get my contract. That wasn't hard to do, because my inheritance from my mother has been in my own name since I was 18."

For the second time Irene marveled at the free rein which had been given this headstrong, overemotional girl by a man with the intelligence of Dr. Reagan.

"Did you run away without even an explanation, Peggy?"

"Yes! I thought there was no use having a scene and I knew they'd argue about it. But I could see Bart didn't really want to marry me and I thought I wouldn't let them hear from me until after I'd become famous."

Despair was stamped upon her face.

Irene to Break News.

"Oh, Irene, what am I going to do? I never want to see that person again. I don't even want to talk to him."

"Don't then, dear! Sit right here and let me tell him."

"Will you?" begged Peggy like a child. "Oh, dear, I feel so humiliated. How can I ever go back home?"

"We'll go back together this afternoon and tell them you just wanted to make the flight with me to Los Angeles."

"That's right. I can do that, can't I?"

They were approaching Los Angeles and for some time Norman Drury had been casting uneasy glances in their direction.

"Don't worry now. Leave it all to me," Irene warned.

Man Was Alarmed.

Miss Regan doesn't want to see you again and, if you ever attempt to molest her in any way, her father will have you arrested."

"Lying to the end," Irene thought, but she did not say another word and when the plane stopped Norman Drury hurried out without even a glance at the girl he had brought to Los Angeles.

"Don't cry here," Irene begged. "Let's go inside to the dressing room."

"I can't help it," sobbed the disillusioned girl. "Do you suppose he was lying when he said I looked like Ruth Chatterton?"

Visions of Hollywood.

"She would cry about that when there is so much more involved," Irene thought.

"I told you I consider you more attractive as Peggy Reagan," she insisted.

"Oh, but, Irene, I had such visions of myself in Hollywood."

"Well, it's lucky for you that you found out about him as soon as you did."

"How about a little tennis?" Barney inquired.

Invited to Play.

Irene looked at Peggy, who cried eagerly, "Oh, could I play, too?"

Barney and Albert Stokes, the freckle-faced co-pilot who reminded Irene of her brother, were introduced to Peggy.

"We can play doubles if Al will play," Barney suggested.

Albert consented and as the girls went inside to borrow shoes, there wasn't a sign of tears on Peggy's face. She talked with Irene about the plane and Barney and Albert as if her trip to Los Angeles had really been the innocent jaunt it seemed.

"Barney's terribly good looking, isn't he, and there's something sort of sweet about the co-pilot, too. Are you in love with Barney?"

"Certainly not, Peggy! Whatever gave you that idea?"

Peggy Knew Truth.

"Oh, the way you looked at each other. He looked at you just like Bart does."

Her frankness was disconcerting.

"Nonsense, Peggy, dear! You've been imagining things."

"No, I haven't," the younger girl returned soberly. "Bart is in love with you. I knew it the day I found him in your apartment. That was one of the reasons I ran away. I don't want to marry a man who doesn't care about me."

"But what about your plans, Peggy? Bartlett is already working in your father's office."

After all, Bart had brought this on himself, Irene reflected. He could scarcely expect any girl, even an inexperienced one, to be satisfied with the poor imitation of love he had given Peggy.

"Don't say anything until you've thought it over," Irene advised. "There isn't anything between Bart and me if that's what worrying you."

Peggy didn't seem to hear her. In the act of changing her shoes she said: "It must be simply wonderful to have men crazy about you. What is it about you, Irene, that makes Steve and Bart and Barney all have that same feeling?"

"Nothing," Irene insisted.

"Yes, it is. You must have something that draws men to you."

"Will you get dressed?" the air hostess demanded.

Peggy said no more but all the rest of the day Irene could see that she was watching her. Trying to learn the secret of what she thought must be the other girl's charm.

Riding and Fishing Vie With Winter Sports Here

Riding, fishing and even picnicking gave competition to skating and coasting on the January sports calendar, according to the monthly report announced yesterday by the office of National Capital Parks.

Approximately 800 persons used the bridle paths of Rock Creek and Potomac Parks during the month. Fishing in the Anacostia River, Tidal Basin and Rock Creek attracted 400 anglers while 175 January picnickers frolicked in the groves of Rock Creek Park.

Spanish Decree Ends Revolt.

Madrid, Feb. 6 (AP).—A decree was published in the official gazette today ending the state of war in Asturias and Catalonia provinces and in numerous cities where it had been maintained since the recent abortive revolt.

Culbertson on Bridge

Bridge Manners Improve.

Bridge ethics in tournament play have been noticeably improved during the last year. Any director will tell you that he has had less trouble in the conduct of his games recently. There seems to be more familiarity with the rules, greater esprit de corps and a desire to be socially persona grata. All of which means that duplicate is getting nicer and more enjoyable. The fiendish thirst for blood has been slaked, the carpers have gone hence, their absence being noted and Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Publico have placed their stamp of approval upon contract.

It is foolish to be always looking for reasons. Certain things happen that are good and welcome. The fact remains that the "thistle player," once so prominent and pestiferous, has been grafted with the violet and no longer annoys. The duplicate game continues to grow more popular.

A Chicago Coup.

Most of the enjoyment in Contract Bridge comes from playing hands almost impossible to make. Mrs. E. M. Lagron, wife of the noted Chicago expert, had a rare opportunity to display her Bridge talent on the hand given below, played in a recent duplicate.

East, Declarer.
North and South vulnerable.

The bidding was very silly indeed, East and West occupying themselves for the most part in bidding every suit imaginable. Mrs. Lagron in the South finally arrived at a six heart contract after West had enthusiastically doubled six diamonds.

The Play.

West opened the trump in an attempt to cut down dummy's diamond ruffs and declarer was confronted with her first problem. The lead was ear-marked as a singleton. Since it seemed hopeless to try to set up the diamonds, she decided to conserve entries to the dummy to establish the clubs. The Ace of hearts won the first trick and two high clubs were cashed, declarer discarding low diamonds. A low club was then ruffed, and dummy reentered by the diamond Ace. East followed, much to declarer's relief. Another club was ruffed and dummy reentered with a top spade. By this time East was marked as having started with four trumps and four clubs. West's double indicated the rest of the hand consisted of a singleton diamond and four spades. Mrs. Lagron therefore led the Jack of clubs, and East was sunk. He could discard a low spade, ruff low, or ruff high. A spade discard would be followed by the cashing of the spades in dummy, holding East to his one trump trick. A low ruff would be overruffed, and dummy could be reentered with the last spade. East finally decided to ruff with the King and return a trump, but to no avail. Dummy won the trump return with the Queen and led the spades anyway, the last two tricks being cross-ruffed.

This hand can not be made in any other way, and Mrs. Lagron is to be congratulated upon her masterful play.

FORD PRESENTS FOR 1935 ANOTHER ADVANCE IN TRUCK ENGINEERING

Forward Load Distribution is obtained by mounting front springs 4 inches ahead of front axle and moving engine forward 8½ inches. This, together with the space-saving V-8 engine, permits more of the load to be placed ahead of the rear axle, more weight on front end.

Will bring truck owners new savings, better performance

Truck owners are always interested in the announcement of new models. The important fact to remember about the new Ford V-8 Truck for 1935 is not merely that it gives you new money-saving features—but that these features have been added to a truck whose economy, performance, stamina have already been proved. You know exactly what you're getting.

For 1935 Ford engineers give you an entirely new development—Forward Load Distribution. This makes possible more uniform tire and brake wear. It improves brake action. It provides a more stable ride—which means protection for fragile loads and improved operation and wear throughout the truck. In addition, with 6½ inches more load space between the cab and the center of the rear axle, the 1935 Ford V-8 permits acute angle turns with full-width semi-trailers.

Test this double duty Ford V-8 Truck on your own job. You'll find it has power and strength—speed, handling ease, and beauty—at a price that saves you money from the beginning.
